The senate banking committee has decided not to report out the bill combining the bank department with the building and loan commission. Senator Black's bill, which does away with the present building and loan commissioners and provides for one commissioner to take their place, has been reported favorably, and will probably be passed. Under its provision Governor Johnson can remove Governor Gillett's appointees, Transue and Curry, and the new commissioner will hold at the governor's pleasure.

A new Minnesota bank at Miers Grove has $10,000 capital. F. A. Hilbert is president and Nicholas Weyland cashier.

Los Angeles

At the annual meeting of the Los Angeles Hibernian Savings Bank, Robert G. Hill was elected president; Geo. A. J. Howard, cashier, and W. R. Holly, assistant cashier.

The Broadway Bank and Trust Co. has elected R. J. Waters president; W. Gillelen and R. W. Kenny, vice-presidents; A. H. Kehler and M. N. Shedenhelm, assistant cashiers, and A. W. Redmon, cashier. This institution will be operated as a trust company in connection with Citizens National.

The First National Bank of Fullerton will expend $10,000 in improvements in its building. A new reinforced concrete vault of large size will be installed and a solid plate glass front on two sides put in.

Los Angeles bank clearings for Wednesday, February 15th, were greater by $412,208 than for any previous day in the history of the city. The total clearings for that day were $4,600,293. It is the first time that clearings for a day ever reached even $4,250,000. Only on three days of the city's history have the clearings exceeded $4,000,000. These were March 2, 1910, $4,085,014; October 13, 1910, $4,109,082; November 16, 1910, $4,003,492. The record for February 15, 1910, was $3,369,521, which is $1,230,777 less than the same date for this year.

J. F. Sartori, president of the Security Savings Bank, is a member of a trial jury in the Superior Court, and when the clerk of the department made out the pay demands, Mr. Sartori declined to accept his. When informed that the money would lie to his credit unless he countersigned his voucher in favor of some one else, Sartori arranged that his pay shall go to the Associated Charities during his entire jury service.

Mr. Sartori says he considers it his duty as a citizen and taxpayer to serve on the jury. His position is so at variance with that of most men of affairs that it attracted a good deal of comment. Following his example, the entire Federal jury bestowed its salary for one day, on the Associated Charities.

PORTLAND IS ALL RIGHT

Louis W. Hill, president of the Great Northern says: "Portland has the best commercial club in the United States and the advertising campaign being carried on by Oregon will double the population of that state within five years."

The Harrold State, S. D. with $10,000 capital, will take the place of the German American State, and back of it, Governor R. S. Vessey, A. W. Ewert of the National Bank of Commerce of Pierre, H. J. Meidell of the Beresford State and others, Fred Winckler will continue president; William Summerside as vice president, J. F. Donovan, cashier, and Paul Winckler, assistant cashier.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

In a daily portrayal of advantages of Minnesota by a Minneapolis paper is found a ray of sunshine for a bank. It reads:

"The State Bank of Wheaton on a rented farm of 320 acres, eight miles from Wheaton, received for its share of one-half the crop, a little over $3,500 for the season of 1909. The renter had in eighty-six acres of corn, which was fed to steers and which netted (except as to the labor of feeding) a little over $35 per acre. Similar land in the neighborhood of this farm was selling at that time from $40 to $50 per acre, depending upon improvements."

Would Exempt City Bonds

The plan of Alderman Karl DeLaittre for exempting Minneapolis bonds from taxation and putting them on the local market is approved. A. J. Edwards of the Wells & Dickey Company, says:

"You will see the local investors buy many bonds if they are not taxable. I believe many of the large estates would take up the bonds as a safe investment and I believe local investment companies will be more anxious than now to buy. While of course the city hasn't taxed the bonds as a rule there is nothing to hinder the assessor from doing so. Therefore, whenever a local company has purchased bonds the bonds have been disposed of as a rule before becoming taxable. I don't believe, however, the small investor, the man with $2,000 or $3,000, will buy the bonds, although in rare instances whenever a safe investment is desired he might do so. The move is a step in the right direction."

Important Decisions

Two supreme court bank decisions in Minnesota have germs of truth for bankers in other states. In brief, or nutshell form, these are thus:

Hennepin County—Rohders, Merritt & Magler, respondent, vs. People's Bank of Minneapolis et al., defendants; W. C. Daniels et al., appellants.

1. A co-partnership has an insurable interest in the life of one of the partners.

2. Whether a corporation has an insurable interest in the life of a stockholder is not decided. But an insurance contract which has been issued and carried in good faith upon the life of a member of a co-partnership may be assigned by the co-partnership to the corporation organized for the purpose of succeeding to the business.

3. An assignment by the beneficiary of a life insurance policy may be made by parol, no objection being interposed by the insurer.

Affirmed.

Steele County—National Citizens' Bank of Mankato, respondent, vs. M. E. Babcock et al., defendants; William G. Hoerr, appellant.

The evidence was sufficient to warrant a finding that appellant Hoerr agreed to credit a stipulated amount on certain mortgage notes in consideration of the relinquishment of all interest in a timber contract which had been assigned to him by Defendant Babcock.

Such agreement was not the purchase of an interest in real estate, and for that reason void under the statute of frauds.

Affirmed.

Activity of State Banks

Spring develops new banking activity in the Northwest. The stockholders of the National Bank of Preston, Minn., decided to liquidate and form a state business with $25,000 capital, the Farmers and Merchants State. The Kilkenny State is organized with $10,000 capital, by Jacob Lampert, Minneapolis; L. L. Meonch, J. E. Stanley, C. E. Hendrickson and William Sieveke, all of Kilkenny. The Security State of Pillager, Minn., has started under favorable auspices. O. H. Schroeder of St. Paul is president. E. P. Baker of Pillager is vice-president and C. G. Schroeder, brother of the president, is cashier. The capital is $10,000. The State Bank of Oakland, Minn., has been organized with $10,000 capital of which Alfred Christopherson is president and James L. Sorenson is cashier. Business men and farmers contemplate a bank at Thielman, Minn., W. C. Dustin of Elmore and A. M. Schanke of Mason City have bought control of the Farmers' State at Elmore, the latter being president, the former vice-president and L. H. Haeger, cashier. B. J. Lindberg succeeds A. T. Nelson as cashier of the Farmers State of Henning. R. W. Daniels has been elected cashier of the Harmony State, Minn., to succeed J. S. Jacobson, resigned.

George C. Rankin, receiver for the First National of Faribault, Minn., will sell remaining assets March 14th. Three dividends of a total of 70 cents have been made and 5 cents more is expected.

Northwestern Miscellany

C. H. Shimer, former teller of the Minnesota National, has been indicted by the grand jury on the charge of grand larceny. The failure to credit a depositor with $470 was the cause of his arrest, according to evidence submitted on November 5, 1910.

J. S. Pomeroy, cashier of the Security National, is back from the Gulf coast. He was surprised to find Minneapolis people at every turn. These were largely bound one way or another to the Canal, Havana or Jamaica. Good business conditions were discovered in the South. Some success has been made in the attempt to interest Northern farmers in Louisiana lands. New Orleans is disappointed at losing the Panama exposition. Memphis, Mobile, Biloxi and other places expect trade stimulus from the opening of the canal.

Among the members of the new grand jury in Hennepin county is G. F. Orde, vice-president First National Bank.

Two bids for $800,000 4 per cent Minneapolis bonds have been rejected, one was below the par limit and the other required $4,000 bonus for expenses. Legislation is expected to raise the interest limit to 4½ per cent. The first bid was by Farson, Son & Company, Chicago, and the other was from Haisel & Company, N. W. Halsey & Company offered for $825,300, par and $100 premium, if city would pay $14,130.10 expenses.

The Savings Bank of Minneapolis will reorganize under the state law with $25,000 capital and $5,000 surplus paid in. It will operate in connection with ten associate banks of which Adam Hannah, the secretary, is president. The combined capital, surplus and undivided profits of these banks is reported at $220,000 and deposits about $2,000,000.

The new bank will do much the same business as before with additional preogatives which will increase the earning power, including investment business. The bank was organized in 1899 under the mutual savings law of 1879 in Minnesota. The associate banks are: Bank of Perth, Perth, N. D.; State Bank of Rolla, N. D.; Farmers' Bank of Hampden, N. D.; Farmers' Bank of Munich, N. D.; Farmers' Bank of Ray, N. D.; Farmers' Bank of Garrison, N. D.; Farmers' Bank of Mercer County, Krem, N. D.; Farmers' Bank of McKenzie County, Charlson, N. D.; Farmers' State Bank, Bison, S. D.; and the Market State Bank of Minneapolis.

A. D. Clarke, director in the Minnesota National, and former president, has been fined $250 in the Hennepin district court for contempt or to go to jail for thirty days. The fine was paid. The sentence involves the understanding that he will get a divorce obtained in Reno, Nev., annulled.

City Comptroller W. H. Farnham of St. Paul will sell on April 1st $220,000 school bonds and $75,000 play ground bonds. Tax levy certificates will not be issued this year for the sinking fund, saving the city $80,000 interest.

Pittsburgh

Directors of the Anchor Savings Bank have elected G. C. Dellenbach vice-president, succeeding the late R. J. Stoney, Jr., whose death occurred several weeks ago. Mr. Dellenbach is well known in Pittsburgh financial circles and is president of the Fort Pitt Bridge Co. as well as being interested in a number of other companies here. The vacancy on the board of directors was filled by the election of A. V. Holmes, also a well known local financial man.

The reason assigned for the resignation of William B. Carlile, Chicago manager of the Mutual Life, is that the company will establish a clearing house in Chicago and divide the Chicago territory among several managers, a policy with which Mr. Carlile was not in accord.

One of the largest coal land deals in this vicinity for years, was the sale transferring 1,603 acres on the Pittsburgh vein of coal, in Washington township, Fayette county, and Rostraver township, Westmoreland county. The coal land is sold by Mrs. Elizabeth S. Moore to the Naomi Coal Company, of Pittsburgh for $1,145,662. The deeds are for three tracts of coal and are dated January 15th. With the deeds will be filed a mortgage to secure $1,145,000, 5 per cent bonds, which will mature in January, 1941. The Safe Deposit and Trust Company of Greensburg is the trustee.

A resolution was adopted by the county commissioners to issue $1,000,000 worth of bonds for constructing new roads and for improvements of existing roads. The bonds are to be four per cent and to run for a period of 30 years, being of the same character as those formerly issued for the same purpose.

The Jones & Laughlin Steel Company has begun the dismantling of furnace 3 of the Eliza group and will immediately rear another great blast furnace on that spot, entailing an expenditure of about $1,500,000. The same company is now spending about $4,000,000 in the erection of furnaces at Allequippa, all of which will be in service about May 1st.

The company, through its representative, William T. Mossman, gave out the information that their Pittsburgh mills at the present time are running 80 per cent full, while their new mills at Allequippa are running 100 per cent full and double turn. The additional information is given that the Jones & Laughlin people do not intend to remove any of their mills from Pittsburgh to Allequippa, but that the total of $25,000,000 to be spent in plants, etc., at Allequippa will be all for new undertakings.

The Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company has let contracts to the American Bridge Company for structural steel to be used in the erection of foundries at Trafford City, and work on the orders will begin within a few weeks.

The contract calls for structural steel for two buildings, one 250 by 50 feet, and the other 65 by 200 feet, in all over 3,000 tons of structural steel being necessary. The Westinghouse Company has purchased 30 acres near Trafford City, and it is planned to have all the castings for the various Westinghouse companies produced in the one series of foundries at Trafford.

Iron and steel makers are coming into the market for heavy tonnages of coke, and the price of coke should not go any lower. Makers are preparing for a long run.

There has been no upward trend in prices yet but many of the heavy consumers of this commodity are placing their orders fearing that the prices will be advanced. The result has been a healthy advance in conditions about the coke plants of this section. The effect of the demand has been felt most in the Connellsville region and especially at the plants of the H. C. Frick Company. This corporation alone is firing over 2,000 ovens and the outlook is that several thousand more will be put in heat within the next ten days.

The estimated production of coke last week was 302,275 tons as against 291,705 tons the week before. This gain was mostly with the furnace ovens, the merchant ovens showing a gain of only a few tons.

Group Eight of Pennsylvania Bankers Association has elected the following officers:

Chairman, H. M. Landis, Federal National Bank, Pittsburgh.

Vice chairman, E. W. Pitts, Peoples Bank, McKeesport.

Secretary, J. S. M. Phillips, National Bank of Western Pennsylvania, Pittsburgh.

Treasurer, Dean Clark, Citizens National Bank, Vandergrift.

Executive Committee: W. S. Linderman, Duquesne National Bank, Pittsburgh, chairman; D. Gregg McKee, Pittsburgh Trust Co., W. C. Lowrie, Columbia National Bank, Pittsburgh; George C. Watt, First National, Braddock; A. C. Warne, Washington Trust Company, Washington, Pennsylvania.

Delegates to the convention of the American Bankers Association: F. H. Richard, First National Bank, Pittsburgh; W. D. Cotterrel, Union Deposit and Trust Company, Waynesburg.

TWO BANKS TO MERGE

Plans are being made for a merger of the Twelfth Ward Bank with the Nineteenth Ward Bank in New York, the combined institutions to bear the name of the latter. Bradley Martin, Jr., president of the Nineteenth Ward Bank, will be at the head of the merger. His bank, which has a capital of $300,000, will take over the assets and business of the other bank, which will be run as a branch.

BANK OF MONTREAL GAINS

The Bank of Montreal, which has been paying dividends at the rate of 10 per cent per annum for some years will, it is expected, shortly increase the rate to 12 per cent.

Philadelphia

E. D. Scholey, who has been secretary and treasurer of the Philadelphia Trust Company, will hereafter attend exclusively to the duties of secretary. Assistant Treasurer Samuel Carter has been elected treasurer and Henry L. McCloy was named assistant treasurer.

Francis B. Reeves, president of the Philadelphia Clearing House, says the movement looking to trust companies coming into closer relation with the clearing house is progressing.

The surplus income of the Reading Iron Company for last year exceeded $1,000,000, which equals 100 per cent on the capital stock all of which is held by the Reading Company.

J. S. & W. S. Kuhn are offering $350,000 West Penn Traction Co. first mortgage 5% bonds due 1960 at 97 to yield approximately 5.25%. The company operates 127 miles of traction property and has exclusive lighting and power business in over fifty municipalities in Allegheny, Westmoreland and Fayette counties, Pennsylvania. The bonds are a first mortgage on all new property constructed. The company is thoroughly equipped and owns much right of way and operates under long term franchises. Earnings of the company and subsidiaries for nine months ended September 30, 1910, were total income $746,877; fixed charges $497,824. The company is paying 6% on its $1,625,000 preferred stock and 2% on its $6,500,000 common stock.

President William R. Nicholson, of the Land Title and Trust Company, is on an extended tour in the West and along the Pacific Coast.

Alfred F. Moore, a director of the National Bank of the Northern Liberties, and George Stevenson, banker, are on a trip to the West Indies and South and Central American ports.

A favorable report was presented to the stockholders of the Commercial Trust Company, at the annual meeting. It showed an increase in surplus of $250,000 in 1910, notwithstanding that the dividend was advanced from 12 to 14 per cent per annum. The undivided profits and surplus total $2,182,365; capital $1,000,000. This completes the eleventh year of the company's existence.

BANK LAW AMENDMENTS

Several amendments to the banking laws of New York have been introduced at Albany by Senator S. Cronin, at the instance of the state banking department, to discourage dishonesty and facilitate prosecution of officers who make false or deceptive reports.

Prohibition of loans to officers or directors of a bank is extended making a loan to a corporation controlled by such officer or director equivalent to a personal loan.

Another change makes trustees of savings banks and directors of trust companies criminally liable in case of a failure through culpable neglect to perform any duty imposed by the banking law.

The city of Spokane plans to expend not less than $7,180,000 on buildings and improvements, the former including a new city hall. Five millions of dollars is added by the estimates approved by the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound and the Oregon-Washington Railroad and Navigation companies for entrances to Spokane, to which is added $1,000,000 for a union station. The Washington Water Power Company has awarded contracts for machinery to equip a 90,000 horse power plant on the Spokane River, costing several million dollars. This will give the company control of 157,000 horse power electrical energy within 30 miles of Spokane.

The Inland Empire Paver Company, financed by Wisconsin capital, will erect a wood pulp plant costing $700,000 in the Spokane valley. The Lewis and Clark high school, to be built this year, will cost $450,000 and the new quarters for the Inland Club of Spokane will add $150,000. The congregation of All Saints' Episcopal parish has plans for a cathedral costing $250,000. Louis M. Davenport and his associates have approved plans for a 14 story hotel building to cost between $1,000,000 and $1,250,000.

In Honor of Chase

Members of the Spokane Clearing House association will launch a movement at the next meeting to erect a fitting memorial in Washington, D. C., to Salmon P. Chase, founder of the national banking system of America. W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National Bank, who is one of the prime movers, believes it will be an easy matter to raise between $15,000 and $25,000 in contributions from national banks, in addition to what could be realized by private donations. Mr. Vincent said it would be a good idea for Spokane to take up this movement and then pass it to the New York Bar association and the authorities in Washington.

Large Bond Issue

Five hundred thousand dollars school bond issue authorized at the election in Spokane on February 18th, will be offered for sale on April

3d. The bonds are payable 20 years from date, with interest not to exceed 5 per cent per annum, payable semiannually. Both the bonds and interest are to be paid at the county treasurer's office in Spokane or at the fiscal agency of the state of Washington in New York. The bonds are to bear the date July 1, 1911, and to be in denominations of $1,000 each, the purchaser to pay accrued interest, if any, at the time of the delivery of the bonds.

Is Appointed Examiner

Martin McLean, formerly cashier of the Traders' National Bank of Spokane, now cashier of the National Bank at Davenport, Wash., has been appointed national bank examiner of the state of Washington by Lawrence O. Murray, comptroller of the currency, succeeding E. F. Wilson resigned to become vice-president of the National Bank of Commerce at Tacoma. Mr. McLean's candidacy was indorsed by the national banks of Spokane and Seattle and bankers of other cities of the state, beside the business men. He is a comparatively young man and has had a varied banking education, having risen from a clerk in a country bank to the cashiership of the Davenport Bank, taking the intermediate courses in the metropolitan banks of the larger cities.

Trustee Company's Success

Reports submitted at the annual meeting of the Trustee Company of Spokane, shows that the company has $1,575,000 in units in force. The units earned 7 per cent in 1910. A dividend of 6 per cent on the capital stock was declared and these officers were re-elected: President, Harry A. Flood; vice-president, J. M. Comstock; treasurer, George S. Brooke; secretary, H. Allenberg; assistant secretary, R. F. Hanke; directors, Alfred Coolidge, D. M. Drumheller, R. Insinger, James C. Cunningham, Thomas H. Brewer, W. H. Acuff, J. K. Smith, W. T. Clark, Fred B. Grinnell, W. D. Wood and A. L. Hawley.

Ninety-seven Candidates

J. Grier Long, a native of Juniata county, Pa., born at Port Royal in 1861, formerly a school teacher and now head of the Washington Trust Company, is a candidate for city commissioner under the new form of government in Spokane, at the election to take place on March 7th. Mr. Long came to Spokane in 1889. There are 97 candidates for the five commissionerships. The salary is $5,000 a year.

Texas Numerical Transit System

Dallas, explains the working of the state-wide plan to the Group 1 convention at Houston

C. J. Grant of the American Exchange National,

It affords me pleasure to be able to say a word for the numerical transit system before a body of representative Texas bankers, with the hope that it may influence some of you who have not already done so to take an interest in it.

Texas was the first to make an effort to organize a state-wide system, and is to-day the only state in the union operating it. As it stands it is of great value to those banks using it, but there is room for improvement. This improvement can only be brought about by the co-operation of all the banks in the state, and if we could secure this we would have a system that would be not only of value to the reserve city banks, but to every bank in the state, no matter what its size; and it would be such a system as would be the envy of the banks in other states. This co-operation is not a matter of cost, but of interest; and we hope that those present will push the matter along by asking for co-operation when they have an opportunity.

Something over a year ago this state was being flooded with endorsement stamps sent out by our friends in the central reserve, and other large cities; and as these stamps were invariably payable to the bank from whom they were received, we realized that considerable confusion would ensue should we endeavor to use them. In view of this condition some 25 men interested in the transit departments of reserve city banks in Texas held a meeting in Fort Worth, and organized the present Texas numerical system, which has proven of great value.

Now I don't think that any of the reserve city banks doubt the value of this system; but there is a mistaken idea that the interior banks can get no benefit from it, and this idea I am anxious to correct, and will therefore try to explain the system and show where the benefits can be derived from it by any bank, no matter how small.

In the first place, the committee used a bank directory as a basis, and, after correcting same as far as possible, numbered every bank in the state, beginning with number 500, and furnished each bank with an endorsement stamp bearing its number. The funds for purchasing these stamps were furnished by the reserve city banks, and the stamps were sent out without any cost to the different banks who were requested to use them.

Of course these stamps covered all transit matter received by any bank from the Texas banks. The next question of importance was that of numbering the city customers, and for this purpose we left open numbers below 500, each bank, of course, furnishing its city customers who handled transit matter with an endorsement stamp bearing such number as was arbitrarily given them by the bank.

These two classes of stamps covered a majority of transit items received; but there are several other sources from which they are received that can not be covered by endorsement stamps. The items which are sent out for collection and returns, for instance, are paid by checks drawn to the order of the bank receiving them, and of course there is no endorsement. This can be covered by giving the collection account itself an arbitrary number, as in the case of the institution which I represent, where the number 12 has been given for all these items, and the carbon copies of the paid letters are kept in batches arranged according to date of payment, so that in event of the loss of a letter containing one of these checks the batch can be referred to, and the drawer thereby ascertained.

The next class which we find without numbers are the transit items received from Eastern banks. In order that we might not have to ask them to use any stamp, we made up a list of arbitrary numbers for use in our office, (beginning at 400 and ending at 500) and had these lists typewritten and placed before each transit man, giving each Eastern bank that sent us transit matter a number. For instance, we gave New York numbers 400 to 420, naming the bank opposite each number. Chicago came next, beginning with 421, and so on in each large city allowing as many numbers as we deemed necessary to cover all correspondents in that city.

This covers more than 95 per cent of the transit matter, but there is one other class not covered, which can be handled in two ways. This class consists of items received from a customer who probably deposits a transit item only about once a month; and also items cashed over the paying teller's counter for strangers. In our office we handle this by entering with pencil the names of endorser and the drawer on the letter.

A good many of my friends disagree with me in this plan of handling such items; but I believe that all transit records should be kept in one department. Their plan is to have these items described before leaving the teller's cage and using the teller's number as an endorsing number. Of course this is a very nice way to handle it, and enables you to write your letter completely on an adding machine; but it occurs to me that it is better to have a transit man, whose salary is not so large, to do this work, rather than put this burden on the high-priced employees in the office.

Now this is the system as we have it to-day, but we do not wish to stop here; and this is the point at which we are compelled to seek the co-operation of all banks in the state. The co-operation referred to is simply this: We want to ask every bank, when ordering new stationery, to have their transit number printed on individual checks immediately under their name, and, on their correspondents' drafts, under the signature line. Then, in the event that the correspondent's name is printed on the draft, if it is a Texas bank have its transit number printed under its name.

If this is done it will eliminate the difficulty previously referred to, in the matter of the collection account being endorsed with a special number, as the drawer's number can be entered in its place; but it is more valuable in the matter of concentration letters. If the numbers are printed on the checks it will not be necessary, after writing a letter on the adding machine giving the endorser and amount, to take it out and then write the towns on which the checks are drawn; for, with the numbers printed, an adding machine can carry the three columns for "endorser," "amount" and "on whom drawn" all in numbers.

Now then, suppose we have secured this co-operation, and that practically all of the checks and drafts in Texas are numbered. The interior bank can then begin to get some benefits. A great many interior banks send practically all of their transit matter to one or two points, and in doing so it is necessary for them to describe the items, particularly as to point on which drawn. Most of them not only give the town on which drawn but also the bank, which of course requires a good deal of writing; but if the checks and drafts had the transit numbers on them it would only be necessary for them to enter one number—which would take up much less time and space than either the name of the town or bank, and yet they would have a complete description of the item.

Now, in addition to this part of the system, there is no reason why the interior banks should not take advantage of the numerical system by handling the local customer's endorsement with a number. It will not even be necessary to furnish the customer with an endorsement stamp bearing the number, as in the smaller towns there are usually only a few firms that handle any number of transit items, and the transit man can make an arbitrary list, which he can keep before him and use if necessary, although in all probability he will soon be able to remember the different numbers; and in making entries on his books he can just enter the number; and you will admit that it will be very much easier to enter "No. 14" twenty-five times in a day than to write "Hammersmith & Sulzberger Company," that many times.

Another point which a great many banks are not availing themselves of, is in the matter of drawer of checks. It would probably surprise you, if you undertook to ask your customers whether they keep a record of the drawer or not, to find that nearly all of them do, and that those who do not will very gladly do so at your request.

I telephoned every customer of ours in Dallas who handles transit matter, and found that over ninety per cent of them were keeping satisfactory records. All but two customers agreed to keep them in future.

Of these two, one of them stated that they kept a record of items above $5.00 and, could not below that amount. The other stated that they kept a record of only about one-third of their items. In the former case we decided that we would not keep a record of the drawer of five-dollar items, but that we would take a chance of losing possibly one or two items in a year. More than this time has elapsed since we started it, and we have lost nothing. In the other case we decided to keep a record of the drawer of these particular items, but as we lost three or four items of this particular firm we thought that we would try to procure duplicates without advising them who the drawer was, and in each case we have been successful. This proves that better records are kept than a great many people think they are keeping. The natural course of business produces a record of all transactions in some office.

In the smaller towns the percentage in favor of good records would not be as great as in our (Continued on page 29)

The Calmar Savings Bank, Iowa, has opened. T. M. Morris of Calmar is president; T. M. Pierce of Calmar is vice-president; S. E. Brickner, clerk of the district court, is cashier. One of the directors is E. J. Curtin, for many years leading horseman of the state. Prominent farmers are others. The capital is $50,000.

The proposition of Oklahoma City, Okla., to issue $1,250,000 in municipal bonds to improve the water works was lost last week. The opposition to the issue was based upon the charge that the whole plan of purifying the water of the Canadian river would not be possible.

Des Moines, March 1.—If all group meetings in Iowa this season are as successful as the three held on Washington's birthday, there will be plenty of occasion for congratulation. Group Seven met at Williamsburg, Group Ten at Ottumwa and Group Eleven at Burlington. In all instances excellent programs and large crowds are reported.

Probably the meeting of Group Eleven at Burlington was most largely attended of the three. The banquet room at the Hotel Burlington was not large enough to accommodate the financiers and it was necessary to spread tables for an overflow meeting. Many of those present were from Illinois towns, St. Louis and Chicago. The program was given in the Garrick theater. Engineer Hugh L. Cooper in charge of the big water power projects at Keokuk and Hamilton spoke at 11 o'clock in the morning. Joseph H. Ingwersen of Clinton spoke on "The State We Live in."

Everybody knows the capabilities of Mr. Ingwersen and he lived up to expectations. He told what is the trouble with Iowa and why after all it is the best state in the Union. C. A. Carpenter of Columbus Junction spoke on "The Country Banker." Mr. Carpenter launched a new idea, the formation of a central reserve association. He also took up the problem of "What ails Iowa," and declared that intensive farming will solve the problem of decreased population. Attorney W. M. Keeley of Washington read a paper on "Taxation of Moneys and Credits," always a live subject. The association authorized its publication and will see that every member of the legislature is favored with a copy. E. L. McClurkin of Morning Sun presided at the business meeting. New officers elected were, chairman, E. R. Lacey of Columbus Junction; secretary, H. S. Young of Winfield; executive committee, H. G. Moon of Wellmon; V. Z. Breneman of New London; R. D. McCullough of Wapello; C. J. Artz of Burlington; A. M. Loury of Fort Madison.

Another Fine Meeting

The meeting of Group Ten at Ottumwa was attended by one hundred central Iowa financiers. An informal luncheon was given at the Ballingall Hotel at noon. The program of the afternoon was held at the Commercial Club rooms. Alex R. Miller of Washington, editor of the Washington Democrat and noted as one of the humorists of the Hawkeye state spoke on "What's the Matter with Iowa." Mr. Miller suggested a lively field for discussion and the bankers seized the occasion to score the tax on moneys and credits and the tax ferret law, now repealed, in no uncertain terms. A stag lunch was given by the Wapello Club at the club house in the evening. S. F. McConnell of Bloomfield was elected chairman and B. P. Brown of Ottumwa was chosen secretary. The executive committee consists of J. W. Young of Birmingham; E. L. Stickney of Moulton; L. T. Richmond of Albia; R. M. Boyer of Oskaloosa; J. R. Mackey of Sigourney.

Group Seven at Williamsburg

Almost two hundred bankers attended the meeting of Group Seven at Williamsburg. Judge M. J. Wade of Iowa City spoke in the morning on "Confidence." Luncheon was served at the opera house by the women of the Methodist church. J. M. Dinwiddie of Cedar Rapids was toastmaster and the toast program consisted of the following: "Legislation and the Farmer," by John Cownie of Des Moines, formerly member of the state board of control; "Relation of the Banker to the Public," by J. P. Gallagher of Williamsburg; "Borrowers," by H. E. Hull of Williamsburg; "Modern Business and the Church," by Rev. P. M. Simms of Vinton. George D. McElroy of Vinton was elected chairman and B. E. Hakes of Williamsburg, secretary. The group will meet next time at Tama and Toledo, Iowa's twin cities.

Penfield at Large

The disappearance of E. J. Penfield, president of the Bank of Kelley at Kelley Iowa, and the subsequent closing of the institution following a run occasioned by his disappearance have proved a live subject of interest in Iowa bank circles the past few days. Penfield converted all of his paper into money Saturday, February 13th then disappeared. When Cashier Eggleston opened the institution Monday, rumors of the president's absence had started a run on the bank. Mr. Eggleston found $400 but this was soon exhausted and the institution closed. The Bank of Kelley was a private bank. It is thought that about $52,000 should have been available. Penfield was rumored to be under arrest at Watertown, S. D., where he owns property but this proved false and at this writing his whereabouts are a mystery. Secretary Hall of the Iowa Bankers Association will file information if Penfield is located. In the meantime, the depositors have asked for a receiver. The Central State at Des Moines has secured an injunction preventing Mrs. Penfield and B. H. Gavitt of Des Moines from disposing of $5,250 in certificates of deposit held by them and issued by the Central State upon a New York draft which proved to be bogus. The Boone National was caught for $3,200 in the same manner.

The bank had been closed only a few hours when Ames capitalists organized the Citizens Savings at Kelley and started it out with $10,000 capital stock. C. L. Siberly, vice-president of the Union National at Ames, engineered the organization and is cashier. William Greeley, president of the Union National, is president Anton Rynerson of Kelley is vice-president and Henry Sanderson of Kelley is assistant cashier and active manager.

Regulation of Private Banks

Incidentally the failure of the Bank of Kelley has resulted in considerable agitation among the legislators in the city for a statute that will regulate private banks. Some of the more radical counsel a statute that will prohibit them altogether. It is not unlikely that legislation of some sort along this line will be enacted before the session adjourns.

Some important legislation affecting bankers has been passed by the Iowa legislature within the past few days. The house passed the Jacobs bill providing for assessment of shares of stock in state and savings banks against the shareholders at the place where located. The vote was 91 to 0. The bill repealing the tax ferret law was passed by the senate and signed by the governor. The income tax resolution was passed by both houses. The Moore bill providing for the depositing of state funds in other than Des Moines banks was recommended for passage as was also the Moore bill providing for the publication of a yearly bank report by the state auditor. The bill for the guaranty by the state of bank deposits met an

Users of the WALES say this complete visibility increases operator's speed and accuracy at least 25%. Combine this feature with light key touch and quick and easy operation of handle and you have the reason for WALES speediness.

5-Year Guarantee Against Repairs

The WALES is the only adding machine with a 5-year guarantee. Why buy an adding machine with a 1-year guarantee, when the WALES gives you five times more protection?

An important decision was recently handed down by the Supreme Court sustaining the position of the Wilkes-Barre stockholders in protecting the WALES against "trust" acquisition.

untimely death and was voted down without discussion.

Although the tax ferret law has been repealed, Senator Fitchpatrick introduced a bill to give county treasurers practically the same power as tax ferrets have held heretofore. It provided that treasurers shall be recompensed on a percentage basis for all taxes collected and shall employ assistants to help in uncovering hidden wealth. The compensation is 2 per cent for the first \$50,000 collected; 1 per cent for \$350 the next \$100,000; $\frac{3}{4}$ of 1 per cent for the next \$100,000; $\frac{1}{2}$ of 1 per cent for the next \$100,000 and $\frac{1}{4}$ of 1 per cent for all over \$350,000. The bill was killed in committee.

General Iowa News

Simon Casady, president and Fred Risser, cashier of the Central State of Des Moines have returned from the East where they inspected buildings securing ideas for the new bank to be erected on Fifth Street. They decided that a one story building, devoted exclusively to banking purposes will be constructed. Both men found Canadian reciprocity and similar legislation retarding business in the East, so they said.

A. F. Dawson of Davenport would rather be president of the First National at Davenport than to be private secretary to President Taft. Although he was offered the latter position to succeed Private Secretary Norton, Mr. Dawson declined the job. Mr. Dawson's term in congress expires March 4th. At that time he will return to Iowa to take up his duties with the Davenport bank.

Judge Bailey at Humboldt scolded the People's State of that city for purchasing $54,000 in government bonds just prior to the visit of the assessor for the purpose of evading taxation, as the court saw it. The bank purchased the bonds December 27, 1909, and sold them January 3, 1911, but the bonds were never actually in possession of the institution. They were assessed, the bank appealed and the court sustained the board of review.

Judge Smyth at Burlington decided in favor of the National State of that city in its appeal from the assessment levied by the assessor and backed by the board of review. The court reduced the assessment per share from $165.66 to $65.

Little Jeanette Reynolds, four years old, daughter of President Arthur Reynolds of the Des Moines National was playing "merry-go-round" on a revolving flour bin in the new Reynolds' home when she toppled headfirst into the bin. A workman heard her screams but when she was rescued, the little miss was limp and unconscious. However, no permanent injuries are expected.

Fred Hill has retired from the Citizens of Britt and will become cashier of the State Bank at Stockwell, Ind. D. J. Miller becomes cashier of the Britt institution with Tena Rasmussen as assistant cashier. Rodney Hill, Jr., will go into the banking business in Nebraska.

The new Farmers Savings at Ulmer has opened for business. M. M. Heptonstall of Sac City is president; Charles Hill of Ulmer is vice-president; C. H. Townsend of Lake City is cashier.

Fire which did damage of $150,000 at Buxton one night last week partially consumed the Buxton Savings which reports a fire loss of $3,000.

George McElroy has been elected cashier of the Farmers National at Vinton succeeding C. C. Harrington who resigned recently after many years service.

The Whitney Loan and Trust Company at Atlantic is planning to erect a new structure. The Atlantic National also announces that it will either build or remodel its present quarters.

Out of the city bankers in Des Moines recently include John McHugh of the First National, Sioux City; President Lafayette Collins, Citizens National of Knoxville; Cashier H. R. Long, Bank of Hubbard; Cashier L. W. Miles, Atlantic National; Cashier F. Van Erdewyck, Breda Savings; Cashier L. Wegman, Halbur Savings.

A man named Coppeath has been arrested at Denison charged with forging checks for small amounts on banks at Mt. Ayr, Shenandoah, Charter Oak, Denison and Boyer.

Robbers dynamited the Bank of Callender near Fort Dodge and later rifled the postoffice but secured little of value either place.

A bill has been introduced in the Iowa legislature reducing the interest rate from 8 per cent to 6 per cent.

B. P. Castner, cashier of the People's National at Albia has been elected president succeeding President Collins, resigned. E. E. Elder is cashier.

Glen Ribsamen has been elected cashier of the LeGrand Bank succeeding J. W. Hockett.

Hans C. Christensen has been made president of the Dakota National at Dickinson, N. D., and E. D. Hevener vice-president. D. D. Mars remains as cashier. Mr. Christensen has been a cattle raiser for more than twenty years.

Great Meetings

The week of February 20th was an important one in Oklahoma banking circles for it witnessed the meeting of five group associations which were attended not only by local bankers but also attracted many visitors from Kansas City, St. Louis, Chicago and other large outside banking centers. Several special cars brought eastern financiers who began with the meeting of Group One at Guthrie on Monday and made the circuit of the other four meetings ending with that Claremore on Friday. It was the unanimous expression of those who attended the series of meetings in Oklahoma that they were the most successful and enjoyable affairs of the kind the new state has ever had. The meetings reflected the high degree of prosperity now being experienced in Oklahoma and outside visitors were deeply impressed by their tour of the five cities and the contact with the men of affairs in the state.

Practically all of the outside visitors were on hand in Guthrie when the meeting of Group One opened. The principal address of the day was delivered by Myron R. Sturdevant, of St. Louis, on the central reserve bank as advocated by Senator Aldrich in the United States senate. Mr. Sturdevant outlined the entire plan and advocated its establishment. Monday evening the bankers were entertained at a dinner and ball given by the bankers of Guthrie. At the business session the following officers of Group One, Oklahoma Bankers Association, were elected: C. E. Dowis, of Blackwell, president; Eugene Beyer, of Guthrie, vice-president; C. D. Rorer, of Shawnee, secretary and W. S. Patton, of Edmond, treasurer.

Group Two, Oklahoma Bankers Association met Tuesday, February 21st, at El Reno. This group covers fifteen counties in north-western Oklahoma and practically every bank in the district was represented. At the morning session the following officers were elected: C. C. Smith, of Enid, president; F. W. Winslow, of Carmen, vice-president; Joseph Dvorak, of Renfrow, secretary and A. H. Keith, of Watonga, treasurer. At the afternoon session addresses were delivered upon these subjects: "Pending Legislation," A. M. Young, of Oklahoma City; "The Cashier," L. B. Myers of El Reno; "County Organization," Charles M. Delsell of Cherokee. Short and somewhat informal talks were made by W. D. Bowling of Fairview and I. R. Heasty on "Slow Collections." Carter Chase of Omaha, spoke on, "Old Time Banking Methods." The citizens of El Reno gave a reception and a ball at the local Elks Club for the visitors Tuesday evening.

Chickasha was the next city that entertained local and visiting bankers on Wednesday, February 22d. About five hundred delegates and guests were present and the following counties in the district were represented: Beckham, Caddo, Custer, Greer, Grady, Harmon, Jackson, Jefferson, Kiowa, Swanson, Stephens, Comanche, Washita and Tillman. The next meeting of the group will be held at Clinton, the home of the new president. The following officers were elected: C. W. Brewer, Clinton, president; W. P. Fowler, Duncan, vice-president; F. W. Smith, Lawton, secretary and Stonewall Jackson, Cheyenne, treasurer.

At the meeting of Group Five, in Ardmore, the following officers were elected: R. D. Wildor, Hugo, president; A. R. Hickman, Pauls Valley, vice-president; B. A. McKinney, Durant, secretary and J. C. Kenton, Sterrett, treasurer. The Aldrich plan was discussed at this meeting but no definite action was taken. After the meeting in the early evening the special cars and many of the visitors went to Claremore where Group Four met on Friday.

At the Claremore election the following officers of the group were named; W. E. Rowsey, Muskogee, president; G. D. Davis, Claremore, secretary and W. F. Cagey, Fort Gibson, treasurer. Friday evening the people of Claremore gave a big reception and ball which was thoroughly enjoyed by the more than 330 guests. After the Claremore meeting the visitors scattered for their homes and W. B. Harrison of Enid, secretary of the Oklahoma Bankers Association, who had piloted the guests from outside the state, bade them farewell.

ROCK ISLAND BUYS A LINE

The Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway bought the St. Paul & Des Moines Railroad operating from Mason City to Des Moines, Iowa, a distance of 121 miles, and will build a line 68 miles from Carlisle, near Des Moines, to Allerton. This will give the Rock Island the shortest route by 40 miles from St. Paul and Minneapolis to Kansas City and also give it a through line from St. Paul and Minneapolis to California and to Galveston, and many other Texas points. The new line opens up some 30,000 acres of valuable coal fields south of Des Moines, giving the Rock Island a heavy coal tonnage north and south, and adding largely to the earnings of the 292 miles of road already owned between St. Paul and Kansas City.

IMPORTANT BANK MERGER

The most important banking consolidation that has taken place in Oklahoma for many months was consummated last Saturday when the Central Reserve State Bank of Oklahoma City, with capital of $200,000 merged with the Oklahoma City National Bank. The latter institution had a capital of $100,000. The consolidated institutions will be known as the Oklahoma City National Bank and will have a capital of $500,000. Henry Williams, formerly of Greenville, Texas, president of the Oklahoma City National Bank will remain president, and A. M. Young, formerly state bank commissioner of Oklahoma, is vice-president. A. W. Anderson, cashier of the Central Reserve, will become connected with a Kansas City bank.

BANKER ROBIN PLEADED GUILTY

New York, March 1.—Joseph G. Robin, former banker, pleaded guilty to-day to a charge of grand larceny of $27,000 from the Washington Savings Bank, of which he was president.

A jury to try him had been selected when he entered his plea. It was said his counsel agreed his former plea of insanity would not stand, since a jury had pronounced him sane, and that therefore he threw himself on the supreme court's mercy.

His total misappropriations are alleged to be $207,000.

NORTON TO BE BANK OFFICER

Charles D. Norton, secretary to President Taft, is slated to become a vice-president of the First National Bank, New York, in the near future, according to information received in Wall Street. Mr. Norton, it is said, will take the office made vacant by Thomas W. Lamont, who resigned from the bank to become a member of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., entering into his new duties on January 1st.

CASHIER RESIGNS

William E. Falk has resigned his position as cashier of the New Albany, Ind., Trust Company to take effect March 1st. He has accepted a position with the New Albany Veneering Company. His successor has not been appointed.

Jail for Robbers

With the imprisonment of five men at Marysville, Kan., waiting trial for bank robbery, the looting of banks in the smaller towns of Nebraska and Kansas has experienced a decided lull. Within the period of four months more than seventy-five small banks in Kansas were visited by robbers but when the so-called Wymore, Neb., gang was broken up, this epidemic suddenly ceased. The other gang of robbers that operated in Oklahoma and Texas is still at work, but much more cautiously and with less frequent operations. The Kansas legislature has appropriated $10,000 to be used in making rewards for the apprehension of bank robbers.

Within the past week two bank robberies were reported which were believed to be the work of the Oklahoma gang. Monday night, February 20th, robbers entered the First State bank of Barry, Tex., and wrecked the building. They secured $5,000 and escaped in a stolen rig. A few nights later the First State Bank of Meade, Okla., was visited by yeggs who blew the safe and secured $1,500. These robbers fired more than a dozen charges and were at work more than an hour. Citizens of Meade who were aroused by the disturbance opened fire upon the yeggs but without apparent effect. The thieves escaped on foot.

TEXAS TRANSIT SYSTEM

city; but the bankers are in closer touch with their customers, and in cases where records are not kept I do not believe they would have any trouble in getting their customers to either keep a record or to enter the drawer on the deposit ticket opposite each amount, which would of course be a complete record in your own office.

A great many of you know as well as I do that the Texas system is a success, and I want to say a word in regard to the national system. The American Bankers Association has recognized for some time that the systems being adopted by different banks without regard for one another would create confusion, and have been working along the lines of a national system. Several years ago the large reserve cities were designated by the different letters in the alphabet; but of course the alphabet ran out, and the system was not carried any further at that time. But during the month of December last, the association called together the transit men from the larger cities, your state being represented by J. W. Hoopes and myself. At this meeting there was considerable discussion of the matter, and it was finally decided that a committee be appointed to work out in detail a system based on ours, giving, in addition to the bank number, a number for each state in the Union. This committee, I understand, is working on the matter, and expects to be able to report to the association by April. The association will then take the matter up and see if it can be carried out by the different states. The Texas number will probably be "5" on account of our standing as to the number of banks, and it was agreed that our numbers now in use would not be touched, but that we of course would be requested to put No. 5 in front of our present number. A condition of this kind was anticipated when the Texas system was inaugurated, and that is the reason that our Texas stamps have stars around the border; so that if a system were adopted requiring state identification we can be identified by this, until our stamps then in use are worn out and it becomes necessary to purchase new ones.

About the only matter we are having any trouble with in the Texas system to-day is that new banks are organized and order endorsement stamps and checks without putting their number on them, and this can only be overcome by other banks in their neighborhood calling their attention to the matter as soon as they are organized.

Now gentlemen, I hope that I have been able to place this matter before you in an attractive light and that you will each and everyone make it a point to order your new stationery with numbers and ask your new neighbors to come into line with us.

NEW YORK'S AUTO BANK

A bank on wheels is the latest in New York. It is fireproof, bullet proof, and is also said to be burglar proof, and can travel fifty miles an hour. This auto bank is expected to make radical changes in the banking business, especially in the outlying districts. It is the property of a trust company in this city.

The car is fitted with a desk and office equipment, including compartments for books, checks and papers. A solid steel safe is built in one corner of the machine. Officials of the trust company are of the opinion that by sending the car about the country a number of depositors would be greatly inconvenienced, especially those who have no place for keeping cash or other valuables.

H. S. Swanberg and A. L. Sorter, and others, have organized the American Trust Company of Superior, Wis., capital $50,000. The company will open a branch office in Minneapolis, 340-346 Security Bank building.

Credit. By J. LAWRENCE LAUGHLIN, of the Department of Political Economy, University of Chicago. Postpaid, 53c.

This book shows how the rules of law governing the commonest business transactions have been developed, and it tells what they are to-day. Technical law terms have been discarded as far as possible, and when they are used they are so explained and illustrated as to be easily understood. The principles of law are simplified and expressed in clear, lucid everyday speech.

VIRGINIA bankers will meet this year at Homestead Hot Springs, on June 15th, 16th and 17th, with a very attractive program.

TENNESSEE convention this year will be held at Nashville, May 30th and 31st, Headquarters at the Hermitage. F. M. Mayfield, Nashville, is the secretary.

WALTER M. VAN DEUSEN is the newly elected cashier of the National Newark (N. J.) Banking Co. D. H. Merritt is the president.

MT. CARMEL DAILY REPUBLICAN has enlisted in the conservation of the soil movement chaperoned by the Illinois Bankers Association, and other papers are coming into line. Secretary W. G. Edens of the special committee is doing his usual quality of high-grade work.

THE bank bill as prepared by the Alabama Bankers Association passed Thursday of last week unanimously, in the senate and with only five opposing votes in the house. Several attempts were made to weaken the bill by amendment but on motion to table, the friends of sound banking won in each instance. Only one minor amendment was made to the measure as prepared by the association and this was agreed to by the special committee. Governor O'Neal, who rendered every possible assistance, will sign the bill promptly. It goes into effect thirty days afterwards.

ABOVE is a telegram from Secretary McLane Tilton and puts Alabama in the A1 list of states with safe, sane and efficient banking laws. It establishes a banking department with powers such as are exercised by the banking superintendents in South Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Missouri, Indiana and New York.

ILLINOIS continues to hobble along without complete banking supervision but may yet see the light—?

FOR years the chains-of-banks crowd ruled in Alabama just as the private bankers have for twenty years in Illinois. They were able by various methods to prevent all remedial banking legislation to the end that lack of law, lack of inspection and supervision and general looseness contributed to their gain.

THE incorporated banks saw that the state was losing in standing and borrowing power every year. A bank reference was often only an indication of which gang of bank promoters the individual trained with. It was a sorry state of affairs and the remedy was drastic and efficacious.

ON Wednesday the officers and members of the directorate of the Negaunee (Mich.) National Bank were "at home" to their customers and friends in their beautiful new Iron Street structure, which has been in process of erection and furnishing the past several months. They received visitors all day, and showed them the various features of their bank, the newest and most modernly appointed institution in the upper peninsula.

THE bank building is one of the most attractive and complete in the Northwest. No expense was shared either in the construction or the furnishing of the structure, and the banking rooms and office suites on the second floor are sumptuous and well appointed.

EGAUNEE NATIONAL is capitalized at $120,000, including a $20,000 surplus, and the officers are E. N. Breitung, president; Benjamin Neeley, first vice-president; Cleo Meilleur, second vice-president; H. C. Wagner, cashier. The directors are E. N. Breitung, Cleo Meilleur, Benjamin Neeley, A. E. Boswell, J. H. Sawbridge, Phil Levine, Joseph Hodgson, John P. Miller and James F. Foley.

LOUIS G. KAUFMAN, head of the consolidated Chatham and Phenix National of New York, had his banking and business training at Marquette, Mich.

MR. KAUFMAN'S advance in banking circles in New York has been rapid. It is less than a year ago that announcement was made that he had been elected president of the Chatham National, one of the oldest and most conservative national banks in New York, with resources of $9,000,000 and now the consolidation, brought about six months after he went to the Chatham, makes him president of a bank that is of twice the size of the old Chatham and that is destined, banking men say, to have a large and important growth.

IMMEDIATELY on the accession of Mr. Kaufman to the presidency of the Chatham the new blood injected into that institution began to count and its business showed a steady increase which at the time the negotiations for the consolidation were taken up had amounted to a large sum. Mr. Kaufman retains his connection with the First National of Marquette both as director and president.

CHICAGO CHAPTER will have two regular meetings in March. On the 14th Prof. Goode will speak on "Age of Steel" and on the 28th members will debate "Should Senators be Chosen by Popular Vote?"

THE Bank of Dwight (incorporated) has moved into its new building, a fine white stone structure.

THE Ridgely National, one of the boasted institutions in the state, has moved into its new corner building, at Springfield. This is one of the best banks in the state and the location the best at the capital.

OHIO BANKERS ASSOCIATION is very active in promoting safety legislation for banking interests. Three bills are being promoted at present. One touches upon payment of deposits made in trust: one limits a bank's liability on forged or raised checks to one year, unless notice has been given and one enlarges the sentence of the busy yeggman to "from 25 to 40 years." This so that the same man isn't likely to be tried and sent up but once.

GEORGE WELLS has resigned his position as cashier of the First National at Oak Harbor, Ohio, to accept a position in Chicago. Walter Snider, of Lafayette, Ind., who purchased the stock sold by Mr. Wells, has been elected cashier. August Kuebler, of Sandusky, has been elected president.

AMERICAN NATIONAL, San Francisco, bank letter calls attention to the benefits which coast cities are to have from having the Panama exhibition in San Francisco, and from the double backing of the Union Pacific from Omaha west. This alone will call for an expenditure of $75,000,000.

KANSAS BANKER, Vol. 1, No. 1, is out and much resembles the papers printed by the other state associations. Wisconsin, Ohio, Oklahoma, Michigan, Texas and now Kansas, publish official organs. W. W. Bowman is editor in chief.

ANENT the Robins attempt to show insanity in his New York trial the Boston Post remarks: "We want no such nonsense as 'bankers' insanity' established as a principle of justice in this country any more than we wanted 'dementia Americana' and 'brainstorms' in the Thaw case. A banker who for a number of years cleverly handled many complicated affairs—for his own advantage—and had brought them through a bad panic is not insane."

ON the subject of postal savings banks the Richmond Virginian sees this advantage: "There is one phase of the new postal savings bank which should go far toward helping what is often a pitiable condition. It will be noticed that married women's accounts and those of children are to be received by the government free from the interference and control of any person save the depositor."

CASHIER.

JOKE IS ON GOV. BAILEY

Friends of W. J. Bailey, former governor of Kansas, who is vice-president and manager of the Exchange National Bank of Atchison, are smiling over an incident that occurred in that institution recently. It appears that Mr. Bailey has been insisting upon the bank employees being prepared for robbers and he has furnished each of the men with a revolver of the latest and most formidable design. In order to test the readiness of the bank employees to resist a robber when suddenly surprised, Mr. Bailey appeared unexpectedly at the door of the bank one day slightly disguised and with a big revolver in his hand he issued the order "hands up." To his complete surprise there was no panic. On the contrary in about ten seconds a dozen of those sinister new weapons were leveled at his head and he lost no time in disclosing his identity. He says he has full confidence in the nerve of his employees and will not repeat the experiment. But the office boy is whispering it about that the employees knew all along that Mr. Bailey was going to test them and they were ready for him.

VINDICATION OF SENATOR LORIMER

Every bank in Chicago received prompt telegraphic notice of the vindication of Senator Lorimer, at Washington, on Wednesday. The vote was 46 to 40 in the Senator's favor. Thus the costly newspaper-political persecution is (or ought to be) at an end. The readers, the advertisers and the lookers-on, all are tired to death of the senselessly conceived and recklessly carried out assault upon Senator Lorimer by the once powerful Chicago Tribune. We are hoping now that that paper will take its own prescription and tell us "who is putting up?"

DIRECT PRIMARIES IN CHICAGO

The results of Tuesday's direct primary voting in Chicago shows the real reason the "bosses" so long opposed that method of selecting nominees. Graham of the democrats and Thompson of the republicans had strong organization support which in the end seems to have cost them thousands of votes. Merriam and Harrison and Dunne, without any such support far outstripped them in the voting. Wise was the porcine Busse in deciding to not risk a public test of his popularity. The chosen candidates are good men and it is predicted that hereafter office seekers in Chicago will pay close attention to issues in which the people are interested and less to the desires of bosses and their party organizations.

SAYS MICHIGAN LEADS

Cashier B. A. Church of Gratiot County State Bank, St. Louis, Mich., was a visitor at La Salle Street National Bank, Chicago, the fore part of the week. Mr. Church told a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER that the Gratiot county district leads the world in the quality of its beet sugar. The sugar-making industry there has reached a stage of perfection seldom attained, and this is due in part to skill and part to natural conditions. Farmers are making substantial progress since engaging in the cultivation of sugar beets.

Banking Opinion

"The business of the country has been below normal for sixty days and the inevitable improvement has begun." This sentence uttered by President Joseph E. Otis of Western Trust and Savings Bank on his return from the East summarizes the commercial situation. It is an opinion that is generally indorsed in all sections of the country.

"I found that Eastern financial men were not disturbed by the rate decision," said Mr. Otis. "On the contrary, they were glad to have the matter settled. The ruling may have been a surprise to us and everybody, but it is not going to upset business. We had gotten down to bed-rock while waiting for the action of the commerce board; that is, trade in all lines was stagnant and below normal; but this country cannot go backward, nor can it stand still. It is now going forward.

"We already see a more active money market than for many weeks. The large cities have a lot of idle capital but that will gradually be brought into use with the assured revival in trade. There is a similar condition nearly every winter and it takes mercantile activity in the spring and crop moving in the summer and fall to bring business to its best. It cannot be said that there is an actual revival at present.

"There has been more stir in the line of railroad financing since the rate decision was rendered than there had been for six weeks before. The railroads may be depended on to keep pace with the development of the country. They may be depended on also to adjust their expenses to their earnings so that investors will not suffer. In the aggregate there will be a lot of railroad improvement.

"In New York as well as in Chicago there is a most amazing real estate development, and that tells its own story. It proves that capitalists are in a confident mood. There is nothing in the business outlook nor on the political horizon to alarm anybody.

"We are getting encouraging reports from the iron mills and from manufacturers generally, although New England factories still show a scarcity of orders. In view of a pretty fair jobbing trade in the West that merely signifies that buyers are cautious and are running with light stocks. Among wholesale houses everywhere the conditions are quite satisfactory."

SENATOR LORIMER AT BANK

Senator Lorimer is at his office in LaSalle Street National these days and will devote most of his time to business until congress assembles in April. He was accorded a magnificent reception on his return from Washington.

Use Idle Funds

Bankers of the interior are sending a great deal of money to Chicago for the purchase of commercial paper. In this way they get employment for some of their idle funds. The common quotation for commercial paper in this market is 4 to 4½ per cent. Business is moderate, the supply having been pretty well exhausted.

BANK ORGANIZER ARRESTED

Havre, Mont., March 8. —H. Z. Delaney of Havre has been arrested in Williston, N. D., in connection with the closing of the Farmers and Merchants Bank at Culbertson, Mont., last week. Delaney organized the bank, although he sold his interest in the institution some time ago. It is alleged he can be held responsible to the creditors. Nothing has been heard from

Lower Interest

Because of the great ease of the money market New York trust companies are finding it unprofitable to pay 3 per cent on their deposits, as many of them have been doing. Accordingly they have reduced their interest rate to 2½ per cent, and in some cases even to 2 per cent.

FRANK G. BIGELOW passed through Chicago on Monday en route for his home in Milwaukee. Give him a helping hand. He is going to start all over again and we all wish him well. The American Bankers Association owes to Mr. Bigelow a little duty, owing to a spineless error of judgment which it committed in obliterating his name from the records. The quicker this is rectified the better. It ought to be done at Nashville.

FRANKLY, the courts probably would compel the association to publish complete records of its past officials, but a mistake having been made, who's big enough to take the lead in doing Mr. Bigelow, his family and his friends justice?

THE only word of interview given out by Mr. Bigelow on his trip back to his old home, was a brief written paragraph in Chicago. He wrote: "Mr. Walsh is under a great mental strain which at his age cannot endure long. Prolonging it will be fatal. I earnestly hope he may soon be set free."

WE give room here to a few paragraphs on saving money and using a bank. They are from a business getting circular sent out by J. M. Dinwiddie who for twenty years dunned the Iowa bankers for membership dues without ever repeating himself. He's got a knack at fetching paragraphs.

"WE are deeply interested in business building," writes the ex-secretary, "in satisfying our old depositors, in winning new ones, and in being of service to the public. To the end that we may, during this year, win much new business and many new depositors, we refer freely to the many who now are favoring us with their patronage and confidence. They will speak in the highest terms of the uniform courtesy extended them and the fidelity of our service.

"WE are just as deeply interested in and appreciate those to whom we refer, the great army of patrons of this bank who are so ready to certify to their satisfaction in having given us their patronage. And those who, for one reason or another, may have been using their savings or surplus money in paying for a home, or in other investment, but who are ready again to patronize a savings bank, either as a depository for savings, or for funds temporarily held for certain use, or for an opportune investment, and who wish to receive thereon in the meantime, will be again welcome at our counter.

"THOSE who are already on our books as customers are invited to make more frequent use of their deposit books. Do not carry your money around with you. Do not wait until you have a 'certain sum' to deposit, nor hold it because you may wish to use it in a 'day or two,' but bring it in, then when you want it, call on us for it, or advise us and we will send it to you. To every one, we give an invitation to make use, freely, of the conveniences provided for public use and comfort in our new and enlarged banking rooms. Come and see us anyway. 4 per cent paid on deposits. Corner 3d Avenue and 3d Street."

MR. DINWIDDIE "invites" customers in a very frank and telling way. He condones some of the most frequent excuses offered over the counter and does it in advance. That's one good hit. In part the circular is suggestive that if they haven't been doing "the things that they ought to do," that now is a beginning point.

THEN, Mr. Dinwiddie, after a platitude about "doing a safe business—safe for the bank, safe for the depositor," gets in this telling tender of services. "The officers of this bank will gladly consult with, listen to and advise patrons in regard to investments, collections or other business matters, will help make settlements, close estates, prepare papers, collect rents, and serve the public in any way in which twenty-seven years' experience in the business in this county has made them capable."

THE Security Title Company of Nashville, Tenn., with an authorized capital stock of $100,000 has taken steps to secure a charter of incorporation. The new company is being incorporated by a number of very prominent bankers and business men of this city. Among them are Jos. H. Thompson, M. A. Carroll, F. O. Watts, P. D. Houston, Eustace H. Hall, J. Harry Howe and others. A. M. Carroll will have the active management of the new company.

A BANK at Asheville, N. C., has gotten up a cattle and hog contest, prizes being arranged for the best native bred. October is the time set and interest is great. Bankers are beginning to see their future in things mundane. Counting interest isn't the only thing. Be Jim Hills in a way. Help build up the community.

R. H. MOORE, president since its foundation in 1889 of the DuBois (Pa.) National, celebrated his 80th birthday in good health on Tuesday last. He taught school, rafted logs, and walked back, in his youth.

W. L. MOYER, who a year ago was elected vice-president of the LaSalle Street National Bank, tendered his resignation last week and retired from the bank.—Exchange.

WE could have printed this item weeks ago and predicted it months ago. It is a case of Mr. Moyer being touted to death by his fool friends. All the "associate editors" out looking for advertising on 50 per cent commission jumped for "Billy," a known good fellow. They sold him space, directories, guides, junk and paid it up by printing in numerous ways that he was to "succeed Lorimer."

THAT wasn't all. Moyer's name led the whole list of officers and every gain was attributed to him. It was sickening and it did the business. No man could survive such an onslaught of foolish touting for business. Hereafter, Mr. Moyer, muzzle your clackers.

SUFFRAGET—Woman who sits right squarely in the middle of a double seat. A suffragist gives you one half of the full seat you are entitled to. Note the difference.—Extract from the new Woodruff Dictionary.

IT is said that this year the Stock Yards banks will present each stockman, who insists on carrying his money away with him, a pickpocket proof money belt with a time lock attachment. This will be hard on a certain thriving Halsted street industry and be hard on those who still have the Masonic Temple on sale.

PRESIDENT TAFT has adopted the sweat box method of getting action from Congress on his pet measures. The new congress will convene April 4th and remain in session until something gives way.

BY the way, when are the holders of Metropolitan "Bank" certificates of deposit going to hold their congress? Quite an army of them we are told and that hundreds of real estate titles have been tied up by the foolish trust which the public had in an uninspected, private "bank." Had the swindlers called themselves anything but a "bank" they couldn't have sold their credit for thirty cents in Dahomey currency nor have traded them for anything more desirable than a contagious disease.

CONFIDENCE in the word "bank" is a big asset. Bigger than some wise bankers guess. Lose it once and the cost will be apparent. It ought not to be possible to call pawn shops and swindlers' roosts "banks" nor for any one to advertise banking functions unless it be a real bank. The new law of Alabama and the laws they are trying to pass in Tennessee and Arkansas prevent all such frauds upon the public.

BANKERS associations in those states are working for the bill. In our enlightened north—well there is a difference. The banking function should be safeguarded. No use getting too far behind the times!

HARVEY J. LEGRIS, cashier of the First, at Kankakee, is "out" and Col. C. R. Miller is "in." Louis Drolet, a teller, will be assistant cashier under Col. Miller. Mr. Legris has not announced his business intentions. Col. Miller has been an insurance man.

MR. LEGRIS has been with the First for about ten years and so much of the bank's prosperity was ascribed to him that he was regarded as a fixture. However, his resignation is said to have been of the pressing kind, and had to be accepted.

ADVERTISING is the magnet that gets things to coming your way. Yes, even when its personal. Don't halloo down the well.

Bond Sales Strengthen Money Market

Continued activity in the bond market has been an important factor in stimulating the Chicago money market this week. Bond dealings are on a gigantic scale since the railroads came into the market.

New financial projects of the large transportation companies will absorb considerable idle capital this spring. This influence is now added to the active real estate market and an improving mercantile and manufacturing demand for funds.

The money market rests on a five per cent basis and has a healthy tone. Five per cent bonds have been taken fast of late and have absorbed an extraordinary amount of capital. The same is true of real estate securities, which range from five to six per cent and are enjoying favor among local investors.

New Plans for Booth Company

National City Bank of New York has underwritten an issue of $4,000,000 6 per cent fifteen-year debenture bonds of the Booth Fisheries Company. This clinches the financial plans of the big fishing concern and the reorganization will be effective within sixty days.

It is also stated officially that the company has closed its deal for the purchase of the Northern Fisheries Company of Alaska from the Morgan-Gugenheim interests.

All of the arrangements were closed up before President Frank C. Letts of the Booth Company sailed for Europe. Knowlton L. Ames, who has been associated with Mr. Letts in the negotiations on behalf of the company, is expected to leave New York immediately and probably will make public the details of the details of the company's plans when he returns to this city.

It is understood that the authorized issue of bonds by the Booth concern is $5,000,000, but the remaining $1,000,000 will be withheld for future uses.

The $1,425,000 5 per cent debenture bonds of the company now outstanding will be retired at once for cash at par. The remainder of the proceeds from the sale of the new bonds, after the old issue has been retired, will be used for working capital and to pay for the Northern Fisheries company's plant and equipment.

The Alaska concern, which is a salmon fishing company, is said to have an earning power almost equal to that of the Booth company. While the terms are not stated, it is understood that the price paid for the property will approximate $1,500,000.

It is stated that just as soon as the company's bonds can be taken up the preferred stock will begin paying its full rate of 6 per cent annual dividends. Neither the $2,000,000 preferred or the $5,000,000 common stocks will be disturbed under the readjustment of the company's finances.

Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and National City Bank of New York have purchased $25,000,000 Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound Railway Co. first mortgage 4% 40-year gold bonds, due 1949, unconditionally guaranteed by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co.

Present plans of the St. Paul for additions and better reverts to its own property and that of the Puget Sound will require the expenditure of $12,000,000. Hence, in getting out an issue of bonds to the amount of $25,000,000, St. Paul is looking ahead to the extent of perhaps two years.

Harris Trust in Big Deal

Harris Trust and Savings Bank and its eastern associates have just purchased $5,000,000 first mortgage 20-year five per cent bonds, due March 1, 1931, of the Cleveland Railway Company, which, operating without competition, does the street railway business of the city of Cleveland, Ohio, serving a population of over 560,000. The purpose of the issue is to refund maturing indebtedness. The bonds are now secured (through the deposit of the first mortgage bonds) by a first lien on an important part of the property, and after March 1, 1913 will be secured by a direct first mortgage on the entire property. The city of Cleveland has put an appraisal value on the property of $19,300,000, or substantially twice the bonded debt. The bank is bringing the bonds out in this market at par and interest. Holders of Cleveland Electric Railway Consolidated Mortgage five per cent bonds, due March 1, 1913, have the privilege of exchanging them for the new issue on even terms.

Quick Sale of Securities

J. P. Morgan & Co., First National and National City Bank have disposed of the entire issue of $30,000,000 3-year 4½% notes of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Co. now pending before the up-state Public Service Commission. The notes were disposed of at a rate of 99¾ and interest. The applicants for these notes were allotted only a proportion of the amount applied for as the issue was oversubscribed before the termination of the term of application.

An offering of $5,000,000 of St. Paul & Kansas City Short Line Railroad Co. first mortgage 4½ per cent bonds, half of which was allotted to London and the other half to New York and Chicago, was sold to investors a day before it was intended to close the subscription lists. Similarly, the entire block of $12,500,000 of three-year collateral gold notes of the Erie Railroad which had been authorized by the up-state Public Service Commission and sold to J. P. Morgan & Co., was speedily taken by investors and the entire offering of $50,000,000 of Central Pacific Railway Co.'s 4 per cent debenture bonds was purchased by Paris bankers, who, in turn, immediately began to offer these bonds to French investors with ample assurance that they will be taken up by the latter forthwith.

Announcement also was made of the authorization by the Michigan state railroad commission of the Pere Marquette's issue of $8,000,000 of five-year 6 per cent notes and of their instant purchase by J. P. Morgan & Co., who already had acquired control of the Pere Marquette from the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railway Co.

Notes of Bond Dealings

An unexpected announcement coming immediately after the decision against the railroads was that of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. to the effect that they had placed in France $50,000,000 Central Pacific Ry. 35-year 4 per cent bonds.

Commonwealth Edison's sharp advance to 120 brings the statement from President Insull that no important developments are pending, and that the strength is due to investment demand.

The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad has sold to a New York banking syndicate headed by First National, a block of $8,000,000 general mortgage 4 per cent bonds, the proceeds to be used for general development purposes. The bonds are being offered at 97½. It is understood that a portion of the proceeds will be used to refund a maturing issue of Hannibal & St. Joseph 6's now due.

February has brought new securities to the grand total of $216,000,000, which shows an increase of nearly $120,000,000 over the same month a year ago. Almost the whole of this increase has come from the railroads.

If the improvement in steel operations which began late in January continues, the United States Steel Corporation may show net earnings of between $24,000,000 and $25,000,000 for the current quarter.

Harris, Forbes & Co. have purchased $5,000,000 5% bonds of the new issue of $35,000,000 recently authorized by the Cleveland Electric Railway, and will make an offering in the near future.

J. P. Morgan & Co. have purchased the entire issue of $12,500,000 three year collateral gold notes of the Erie Railroad Co., recently authorized by the up-state Public Service Commission.

Northwestern's Dividend

The Chicago & Northwestern Railway Company has declared the regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent on its preferred stock and a quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent on its common stock. Heretofore dividends on the common stock were paid semiannually. The dividends are both payable April 1st to holders of record of March 13th.

Net profits of the American Sugar Company in 1910 were only a shade more than the 7 per cent dividends paid on its $90,000,000 of common and preferred stocks. The deduction of $807,967 for depreciation and the further payment of $700,000 to the government in the settlement of the sugar weighing frauds, created a deficit of $1,427,623 for the year.

Sales of the American Tobacco Company in 1910, as reported at the annual meeting yesterday, amounted to $102,441,302, and the net earnings therefrom were stated at $14,400,522. The company's income from other sources was sufficient to bring its total income for the year up to $35,045,352, which was an increase of $4,596,968 over the income in 1909.

Money, Banking and Finance from Chicago Viewpoint

Real estate mortgages and trust deeds are running upwards of two million dollars a week in Chicago. This is a half million a week higher than the figures of a year ago and bankers are viewing the situation with pleasure.

Real estate transfers in the city last week footed up $3,425,000 and the mortgages $2,279,000. When the amount being paid out on building is counted it shows an enormous amount of capital in use for real estate development. This steady absorption of otherwise idle money is a important feature of the banking business at present.

The purchase of the site for the new temple for the Medinah Temple Association from the estate of Lambert Tree at a consideration of more than $100,000 was a notable transaction of the week. The site consists of a lot fronting 218 feet by 150 feet at Ontario, Cass, State and Ohio streets. Several sites were under consideration, but on account of the nearness of this one to the downtown district it was chosen. The site is at a convenient distance from the Indiana street cars and one-half block from the State Street line, making it easy of access to South and West Side members. This site is occupied by the Lambert Tree residence, which is to be torn down. The building will have a seating capacity of over 5,000, and besides being the largest mosque in the United States, will be the most beautiful. Plans for the new structure were approved recently. The entire cost is to be about $500,000. A commercial block is to occupy the site of the Joseph Medill home, another landmark in that neighborhood.

Large Loans in Chicago

Noteworthy loans have been made in Chicago within a few days. Edward L. Bloom, who is erecting an apartment house at Woodlawn Avenue and Forty-Sixth Street, has secured $62,500 for eight years at 5½ per cent.

The Northern Trust Company is trustee in a loan of $30,000 at 5 per cent for five years to Elizabeth Ingals Meadowcroft and Frederick H. Meadowcroft on the property at 188-190 South Clark Street, east frontage, 40 by 90 feet, between Monroe and Adams streets.

The Catholic bishop of Chicago has given a trust deed to the Pullman Trust and Savings Bank to secure a loan of $37,500, five years, at 5 per cent, on the property on State Street and the northeast corner of One Hundred and Seventeenth Street, west frontage, 82 by 180 feet.

He also has made a loan of $45,000, five years, at 5 per cent, from the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co., on the property on Macalister Place and the northeast corner of Lytle Street, south frontage, on a lot 209 by 140 feet.

The Hamilton Club of Chicago has filed a trust deed covering its recently acquired property on Dearborn Street, ninety-two feet south of Madison Street, where it will build its new club building. The deed secures a first mortgage gold bond issue of $125,000 at 5 per cent to the Chicago Title and Trust Company for sixteen years and a second mortgage gold bond issue of $150,000 at 6 per cent for ten years.

Railroads Have Big Program

It is noteworthy that the railroads have a big program of construction and improvement. In the aggregate the selling of bonds is enormous. This is the popular method of financing extensions and other new projects. This program will go forward regardless of the disappointment over freight rates. There may be less building than there would have been had the decisions been favorable but taken altogether the roads will go ahead. They are going to absorb a lot of loose capital in the next two or three weeks while they can get it on a four per cent basis. Were they not disposed to take a cheerful view of the dilemma confronting them there would be a demoralized stock market.

Financial men all over the country are discussing the freight rate decisions. It has given them the most interesting commercial topic of the new year. To say that the banking world was surprised at the ruling of the interstate commerce commission would be too mild. At first men were dumbfounded and alarmed. On reflection they allowed their feelings to become modified. Those who sympathize with the railroads are disappointed, but they have recovered from the early feeling of alarm.

The course of the stock market proves that the country is not frightened. Something of a break occurred immediately after the decisions were announced but since then all securities have been quite firmly held. The market is dull but strong. So much uncertainty exists in the minds of speculators as to what the railway companies will do that trading is neglected. Holders as a rule are confident and this confidence has maintained prices surprisingly. Nevertheless the amount of business is small.

Financial people here say that so long as the short interest is as large as it appears to be and banking interests continue optimistic on the business outlook, there will be nothing more than speculative breaks in stocks like that on the rate decisions, provided there is no disaster. Per contra, any good news would put the market up rapidly and materially. Steel securities are a sort of bell wether these days and they are as strong as anything in the list. The steel business is flourishing.

Steel officials regard the rate decisions rather calmly because they are accustomed to railroad retrenchment talk and believe the general situation is not any worse, but perhaps better since the decision.

Companies will not Fight

The Pennsylvania Railroad has notified the interstate commerce commission that it will make no appeal from the rate decisions and will immediately put into effect the rates as directed therein. That is to say, it withdraws its proposed advanced tariffs and retains the rates now in effect. This course will undoubtedly be followed by all other roads.

George F. Baer, president of the Reading Company, has issued the following statement: "The decision of the interstate commerce commission is a great surprise. It has always seemed to me that the request of the railroads to be permitted to advance class rates was a most reasonable one in view of the enormous increase in expenses to which the railroads have been subjected."

Roswell Miller, chairman of the board of directors of the St. Paul Railroad, in commenting on the rate decisions, said:

"The interstate commerce commission will have to bear the burdens which will result from this decision and I am much mistaken if the burdens will be light. The first ones to suffer will be the commercial interests opposed to the advances, who pursue the penny-wise-pound-foolish policy."

On Thursday, before the rate decision was announced, St. Paul offered a 6 per cent increase to its telegraphers. Friday the offer was withdrawn.

The Illinois Central, in promising telegraphers some increase, said that while the rate decision was a body blow, the officials are not pessimistic on the general business outlook.

Mr. Hill's Observation

President Hill of the Great Northern, in commenting on the rate decisions and their effect upon improvement work, remarked of the New York money market that it "looked easy, but to discover its real condition you must try to get some of the money." That, with little amendment, may be said to have been true of the money markets since early in 1909, and it has had anything but a stimulating influence upon the investment markets and, therefore, upon railroads and other corporations seeking capital.

There are two possible methods of reconsideration of the railroad cases. One of these is through the medium of the newly created commerce court, which last week entered upon the performance of its functions under Chief Justice Knapp, who resigned as head of the interstate commerce commission to accept the newly created position, and the other through a rehearing by the interstate commerce commission itself.

WOULD HEAR GOV. WILSON

A strong effort will be made by the Maryland State Bankers Association, which will hold its annual convention in Deer Park, June 20-22, to induce Dr. Woodrow Wilson, Governor of New Jersey, to deliver the principal address. Hon. A. Piatt Andrew, assistant secretary of the treasury, and special assistant to the National Monetary Commission, is scheduled for an address dealing with the practical workings of the proposed reserve association proposition.

It is freely predicted that Waldo Newcomer, president of the National Exchange Bank, will be the next president of the Maryland State Bankers Association, as he is the present active vice-president, and it is customary to elect the vice-president to the presidency if he makes a strong officer. In addition to his banking interests, Mr. Newcomer is one of the powerful factors in the control of the Atlantic Coast Line and the Louisville and Nashville railroads.

G. A. Lyon, assistant cashier of the First National of Minneapolis, has gone into athletics. He has been elected treasurer of the new Bryn Mawr Tennis club.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

The first ten days of March and especially the first five days have been days of activity for the Illinois banker. County recorders all over the state report an unprecedented amount of farm transfers and the total of "deals" will run into many millions. As a consequence recorders have been working overtime and the banker has been unusually busy because almost every farm transfer means borrowed money and the local banker is the man who must negotiate most of these loans. THE CHICAGO BANKER recently in the Wisconsin letter spoke about the lack of wisdom embodied in the old theory of never running into debt. The theory hardly holds goods in Illinois either, for practically all land owners borrowed to pay for their land. And practically all of them owe the ownership of their rich black Illinois land to the sympathetic assistance of the country banker.

In some counties as much as a million dollars worth of real estate transfers went "on record" in one day especially the first and second days of the month. McLean county reported $900,000 on March first and Tazewell county recorded over a million dollars worth in one business day. Galesburg, Paris, Kankakee, and in fact all county seat cities report unusual activity. J. E. Parrish, president of the Edgar County National of Paris, said that in the first four days of March that the transfers totaled $648,427 with one transfer of $136,000. Another banker who has seen thirty-five years of active service in one community said that in number and amount the farm transfers were the heaviest in twenty years in that county.

Vanderlip in Springfield

Frank A. Vanderlip, president of the National City Bank of New York, stopped off in Springfield while traveling across Illinois en route to California. Mr. Vanderlip is a stockholder in the Ridgely National of Springfield and he held a conference with the officers and directors of the institution in the directors' room of the new bank building. A number of Springfield bankers called on Mr. Vanderlip. He was accompanied by Mrs. Vanderlip and Ames Higgins and C. V. Rich.

They were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Holbrook and called on Governor and Mrs. Deneen. They left Springfield for St. Louis and thence to California by way of New Orleans. Mr. Vanderlip is a former Illinois man, his old home having been at Aurora. He was formerly financial editor of the Chicago Tribune and in 1897 went to Washington as assistant secretary of the treasury under Lyman J. Gage. In 1901 he went to the National City of New York as vice-president, succeeding to the presidency in 1909 when James Stillman resigned to become chairman of the board of directors of the bank.

Kankakee Cashier Resigns

H. J. Legris, cashier of the First National of Kankakee since July 12, 1902, has resigned to engage in other business. He will be succeeded by C. R. Miller. Louis Drolet, formerly teller, has been named assistant cashier. Mr. Drolet represented the president of the bank, Len Small, when the latter assumed charge of the Chicago subtreasury and assisted in the counting of the cash of the subtreasury when Mr. Small went into office.

Mr. Legris is a member of an old and prominent family in Kankakee. He has been an active force in the building up of the highly prosperous business of the First National.

Stockholder Pays Bank Losses

Henry Block, a wealthy Peoria business man, and a heavy stockholder in the defunct Ties Smith Bank of Pekin, announced through his attorneys that he would voluntarily pay creditors of the Smith institution an additional dividend of 25 per cent. In the first settlement with creditors of the bank Mr. Block practically exhausted his entire personal fortune. More than $100,000 will be paid by Mr. Block in this last transaction, making a total of 75 per cent paid to creditors.

Illinois Notes

Group Six, Illinois Bankers Association, will meet this year in May at Charleston. The exact day will be decided later. Previous meetings have been held at Champaign, Paris, and Danville. S. Y. Whitlock of Tuscola is the president of the group and John M. Glassco of Charleston is secretary and treasurer.

The First National of Kankakee uses the news item which appeared in THE CHICAGO BANKER last week about a Danville man sending in to the treasury department at Washington a bill of 1779 for redemption as an ad showing the value of compound interest. The Kankakee bank figures that if congress should allow this claim with 4 per cent compound interest that the owner of the bill would receive over $9,000. The bank further states that "of course fortune does not smile on all of us like that but a simple weekly deposit of $2.00 in this bank will grow to $584.00 in five years."

Four men have been arrested at Savanna for counterfeiting nickels. They were taken to Freeport and placed in jail. Three of the men are charged with making the nickels and the fourth with passing them. A complete counterfeiter's outfit was found on an island in the Mississippi River opposite Savanna.

Yeggmen entered the vault of the Citizens National of Walnut, Bureau county, and after securing $4,000 in silver and currency attempted to escape. The noise made by their six charges of dynamite exploding awakened the citizens of the town and many of the latter filled the streets armed with weapons. Some of the stolen money was found along the streets. Large rewards have been offered for the arrest of the yeggmen.

A new state bank is being organized at Sidney, near Urbana. Most of the stock will be held by farmers living in the neighborhood.

Fire which destroyed the home of William Fillmore of Joliet burned up the savings of his lifetime which amounted to $2,500. It was with difficulty that Fleming was persuaded to remain out of the burning house as the roof was falling in. The money was secreted in his home. Another case of being afraid of banks.

The Elgin City Banking Company reports loans and discounts of $775,697 and deposits of $1,316,846. The capital, surplus, and undivided profits amount to $232,000. John Newman is the president and George W. Glos is the cashier.

Taylorville has defeated a bond issue of $28,000 for the purpose of erecting a new high school building.

WILL LOCATE IN PORTLAND

H. Rostad, who has been cashier and manager of First National of Kelso, Wash., has resigned to engage in the banking business in Oregon. Mr. Rostad has been connected with the Kelso bank for two and a half years and made a splendid record for the bank as well as for himself, having increased the deposits from $40,000 to as high as $167,000 and created a surplus fund of $5,000 besides paying the usual dividends. Mr. Rostad will make an extended trip through Southern California, New Mexico and Texas for the benefit of his daughter's health and return to Portland, where he intends to become connected with one of the large banks.

O. D. McKeehan, assistant cashier of the Citizens State Bank of Tekoa, Wash., has accepted a position with the Tekoa State Bank. He is succeeded by Riley Kalbfleisch, who was formerly assistant postmaster. Dolph Coolidge, cashier of the Tekoa State Bank, will remove to Spokane.

INDIANA BANKING NEWS

Postmaster Evans has decided to make application in the government for a postal savings bank for the Marion postoffice.

The Miami County Bank, at Amboy, Miami county, which suffered $4,000 loss by fire, will occupy new quarters as soon as a building can be erected. The directors have decided to prepare plans at once for a fireproof building. The Amboy Mercantile Company, which suffered a loss of $17,000, will dissolve and not reopen for business.

The American National Bank, the sixth bank for Hammond, has started in that city with a capital stock of $100,000. Oscar A. Krinbill, district manager of the Chicago Telephone Company, is president, and E. S. Emerine, formerly cashier of the Citizens' German National Bank of Hammond, is cashier. A directorate of twelve was elected.

The Farmers' State Bank, of Matthews, was entered by robbers, the safe blown and full $3,000 taken. A horse and buggy were stolen from a farmer near Matthews, and with this the robbers escaped with their loot. The robbers pried open a rear door of the bank building and presumably worked the combination of the safe. The money drawer was then blown open by a charge of nitroglycerin. The force of the explosion was such as to twist and bend the iron of the safe and yet only one person in Matthews heard it.

The farmer's automobile is "in bad" with the mutual insurance companies in the rural neighborhoods of Indiana. At the meet of the Mutual Insurance Companies' Union, it developed that the question of insurance for his motor car is giving the farmer more trouble than flat tires and contrary engines. Some of the mutual companies have put up the bars against this kind of insurance, and will not write policies on automobiles at any price.

South Bend banks announce the city is being flooded with counterfeit $5 gold pieces and that business men and citizens in general should be warned to exercise caution in accepting gold pieces of that denomination without examination, and should ascertain from whom they are receiving them. The counterfeit pieces bear the date of 1906; they are gold plated and are very good in appearance. They can be detected, however, with ordinary examination as they are somewhat lighter and a little larger and thicker than the genuine coins.

Farmers and Merchants National Bank Building, Wabash, Ind.

NATIONAL BANK CIRCULATION

Increase in national bank circulation for February was $2,489,653; for twelve months, $18,912,173.

BANK IN NEW HOME

The elegant new home of Farmers and Merchants National at Wabash, Ind., was thrown open to the public last week and was thronged with patrons and friends of this successful financial institution.

The building is acknowledged by the many bankers who have visited Wabash during its erection to be of the handsomest and most complete in the West. The material used is sawed buff Bedford stone.

Farmers and Merchants National was organized June 23, 1902, and has steadily grown in strength and popularity. The present officers are Charles S. Haas president, John M. Curtner and Frank W. Morse, vice-presidents and Otto G. Hill, cashier. The capital, surplus and profits of Farmers and Merchants National are $136,000, its deposits over $700,000 and its total resources $950,000.

CONDITION OF THE TREASURY

Washington, March 4.—February closed with the condition of the treasury improved as compared with a month ago.

There was a surplus of $58,000 for the month on all accounts, as against a deficiency of $3,000,000 in January. The total deficit for the fiscal year changed very little and still stands at $21,000,000 as compared with $45,000,000 at a corresponding time a year ago. The balance in the general fund increased slightly to $85,000,000 but the working balance dropped off about $2,000,000 and the month closed with it at $28,000,000.

EDWARDS HAS GLASS OFFICE

B. F. Edwards, president of National Bank of Commerce of St. Louis, has caused to be constructed a glass office, in which he receives visitors. Heretofore all the officers of the Commerce have had desks in the open, and often it was necessary to talk with bated breath. Mr. Edwards says he does not throw stones, so fears not living in his new glass house.

SAVINGS ARE SENT ABROAD

Figures given in cable dispatches from Vienna, which show that $37,060,000 was sent to Hungary in 1910 by Austro-Hungarians living in the United States, are corroborated in part by the record in the Chicago postoffice.

One of Superintendent J. B. Schlossman's men in the money order department undertook to arrive at a rough estimate of the amount sent to Hungary.

"With no pretense of accuracy, I should say that the main office alone issued $300,000 in money orders to Hungary last year," he said. "Besides this, of course, there are all the substations, whose business I know nothing about. Some of the stations in foreign sections of the city possibly issued as much again as that, while others, I believe, easily reached $100,000, although I have no means of making anything but a wild guess.

"I think it is safe to state, however, that Hungary leads in the amount of money received from Chicago. Little of the latter money ever comes back."

Twenty-six million dollars were sent back home to Italy in 1910 by Italians living in this country, according to statistics compiled by postoffice authorities in New York. This is an increase of $8,000,000 over 1909.

DRY GOODS OUTLOOK GOOD

Marshall Field & Co. say future business in wholesale dry goods and notions indicates confidence throughout the country and that prices are based on correct interpretation of business conditions. Orders booked for fall delivery total more than double the amount of a year ago. Easter being late probably accounts for decrease in immediate shipments.

Demand for printed drapery fabrics is heavier than has ever been known. Consumers from coast to coast are developing an appreciation for this merchandise and largely buying better quality of materials. Lace curtain sales for spring are exceptionally heavy and buyers are in the market looking for novelties and placing numerous orders for immediate filling in purposes.

SUIT OVER WEDDING GIFTS

W. A. Sandoe, a banker at Marshalltown, Iowa, has sued the Northwestern railroad for $500 which he alleges he is entitled to receive for wedding presents which he shipped to his daughter and which she never received. The daughter, Miss Fannie B. Sandoe was married to Walter J. Hanna of Gilroy, Cal. It was to Gilroy that the presents, mostly household goods were shipped.

SPARE TIRES AND THEIR CARE

Protection against weather and dust is essential if spare tires are to be kept in fit condition for possible emergencies. Rubber naturally deteriorates if exposed to the air. The old-time tire covers never afford adequate protection against weather conditions. Moreover, they are clumsy to handle. Such a thing as being able to quickly unbutton and unstrap one and take it from the tire is unknown.

The "Star" Tire and Tool Case is made of pressed steel, thus rendering it practically indestructible. It closes neatly, hence is absolutely dust proof, and almost air tight. And its convenience is far greater than that of any other like facility on the market. One minute, to open, close, and lock, the "Star" Case as opposed to twenty-five or thirty for any like accommodation. Nothing need be removed to detach the tires.

Tools, spare parts, inner tubes, and shoes can be carried in the "Star" Case—all given the best protection against the elements. And the "Star" Case weighs less and costs less than a set of tire irons, two covers, and a box—the minimum like capacity.

Thieves or "friends" cannot steal or "borrow" accessories kept in the "Star" Case, for strong locks make it thief proof as well as weather proof.

The "Star" Tire and Tool Case is far more attractive than the oldtime equipment of covered tires and tool box. At the factory it is given a prime coat, so that the individual owner may have it painted to match his machine. It fits any car, and becomes as much a part of it as the hood and fenders. It may be finished in Japan at the buyer's option.

The Merchant and Evans Company, of Philadelphia, are the patentees and manufacturers of the "Star" Tire and Tool Case. It was designed to meet the demand for a unified carrier of tires, tools, and spare parts, and its ever-increasing popularity testifies that it is indispensable to all motorists.

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER By Mortimer I. Stevens

WISCONSIN

Hearings on the proposed bank guaranty bill and the bill relating to the segregation of savings deposits in Wisconsin having been completed the bankers of the state are now showing considerable interest in a large number of additional banking measures that are pending.

Tuesday of this week there was a hearing before the assembly committee on banks on a bill prohibiting loans to bank officers. Another bill closely related to the foregoing is so framed as to restrict loans to directors. Additional monthly meetings are also provided for. In a few banks it has been the custom to hold directors' meetings only twice a year. The proposed bill would require monthly meetings. This bill is designed to do away with one man banks.

Bill No. 266A proposes to do away with all loose leaf books and requires the use of bound books exclusively in all banks. It is claimed that in the past the use of loose leaf books has made it possible to defraud banks.

Five bills relating to fees for the examination of banks and providing for additional bank examiners and examinations have been introduced.

It is proposed to increase the payments for bank examination purposes from $7,000 per year to $21,000 annually. It is also planned to increase the staff of examiners. Four clerks would be employed instead of two as at present. It is proposed to make the salary of the commissioner of banking $5,000 per year. He now receives $4,000. Provision is also made for increases in the salaries of the deputy bank examiners. It is proposed to examine each bank twice a year. There is now but one examination each year.

Another bill intended to safeguard depositors says that no person shall own stock in a bank unless he shall own tangible property (exempt from execution) within the state over and above debt, equal to or in excess of the amount of stock owned in the bank.

On Thursday of this week there was a hearing on a bill of particular interest to Milwaukee people being a measure authorizing the common council to provide for the deposit of city bonds with the state treasurer to secure savings deposits received by the city treasurer.

Bankers Oppose Guaranty Law

"Ninety-five per cent of the bankers of Wisconsin are opposed to the bank guaranty law now before the legislature or believe that action should be deferred until the next session to see how the law works out in other states where it is in effect—Oklahoma, Nebraska and Texas," is the statement made by Secretary George D. Bartlett of the Wisconsin Bankers Association before the legislators at Madison.

The bill which proposes the segregation of savings deposits and which provides that these shall be kept entirely separate from other banking funds and invested in bonds and mortgages is also meeting with strong opposition not only from the bankers but from the manufacturers of the state as well.

Should this bill become a law it will be especially hard upon the small communities as it is claimed that it will drive the manufacturing interests and business men who desire loans to other cities and to other sources to secure the necessary accommodation.

Retaliatory Moves

Still more banking legislation, it is reported, will be asked of this session of the Wisconsin legislature. Bills are to be presented within the next few days prohibiting:

1. State banks from using national banks as reserve banks.
2. The state of Wisconsin depositing any state funds in national banks.
3. State banks making deposits in national banks.

There is no question but that these bills will be bitterly fought.

There seems to be a general impression that the proposed bills are to some extent retaliatory measures in the fight which it is said the national banks are making against the state guaranty of state bank deposits bills.

The bills increasing the help in the state banking department so that two instead of one examination will be held each year will go through the legislature without opposition, it is said upon good authority.

erty in Wisconsin, and to secure it the will was admitted to probate in this state. It was found, then, that between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000 worth of securities in Wisconsin corporations were held by the estate, the largest holdings being in the Northern Pacific, the Chicago and Northwestern, and the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroads.

The state will make an effort to collect the inheritance tax claimed to be due on this estate.

Bank Swindler Goes to Penitentiary

One year in the state prison at Waupun is the sentence meted out to R. E. Lasley of Chicago, alias R. M. Hauser, for attempting to pass a forged check for $4,000 on the Racine City Bank at Racine Junction. In attempting to pass the check Lasley posed as a representative of the John A. Davis Company of Chicago, where his brother-in-law is employed. He opened a bank account a week or so ago of $50, saying that the Davis company was to establish a branch in that city. The following day he presented the $4,000 draft, which he purported to be drawn on the Western Trust and Savings Company of Chicago by the Davis company. The cashier retained the check for identification, and Hauser made his escape being caught two days later in Chicago while watching the Davis residence.

What It would Cost Banks

Here are some interesting figures prepared by Secretary George D. Bartlett of the Wisconsin Bankers Association showing what the first assessment under the proposed guaranty bill would mean to some of the state banks: Second Ward Savings Bank, Milwaukee, $100,000; Marshall and Ilsley Bank, Milwaukee, $80,000; Bank of Sheboygan, $20,000; German Bank of Sheboygan, $28,000; Bank of Baraboo, $12,700; Hyde and Britton Bank, Beloit, $8,000; Bank of Burlington, $6,750; Almond Portage Co. Bank, $1,400; Green Lake State Bank, $2,350; Wausau, Marathon Co. Bank, $4,900; Maiden Rock Bank, $1,550; La Crosse State Bank, $10,400; Bank of Barron, $2,225; Chippewa Falls N. W. State Bank, $3,750; Merrill, Lincoln Co. Bank, $8,000; Jefferson, Farmers and Merchants Bank, $4,200.

Important Date in Wisconsin

Bankers throughout the state are putting a ring around the dates of July 12th and 13th on their calendars and it is certain that the attendance at the Seventeenth Annual Convention of the Wisconsin Bankers Association to be held this year in Milwaukee on these dates will be a red letter occasion in the state banking history. The committee on arrangements and program is devoting considerable time to making their part of the convention a huge success and a number of surprises are said to be in store for all those who attend.

Association Now Has an Attorney

Secretary Bartlett has secured a number of innovations which have been widely copied by other state associations; viz.: the popular purchasing department and the mail order form of insurance, and now has added another in the form of an association attorney who will answer all questions preferred by members of the association pertaining to the banking business. The well known firm of Lines, Spooner, Ellis and Quarles have retained for this work and the standing of the firm insures legal advice of more than usual standard. No charge is made to members of the association for this service, though, of course, where office consultation or court attendance are necessary, the client must effect his own arrangements with the legal firm.

Carr on Legislative Committee

Owing to the absence from the state for the winter months, J. K. Ilsley asked to be relieved from the chairmanship of the Legislative Committee of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, a position which he has so ably and ac-ceptably filled for several years. At the recent meeting of the executive council Fred J. Carr, cashier of the Bank of Hudson, and ex-president of the association was asked to fill the vacancy and has undertaken to assist the association and the committee.

New Trust Company in Wisconsin

The articles of incorporation of the new trust company to be started at Superior, Wis., will be filed at Madison within a few days. Practically all of the arrangements for the commencement of business have been completed. A location for the offices of the company have been tentatively agreed upon. This company will be capitalized at $50,000 and will handle financial transactions connected with the realty business. H. S. Swanberg of Minneapolis, who is the moving spirit behind the new venture, stated recently that the new company would be ready for business within the next six or seven weeks.

Graettinger will Sell Securities

Martin A. Graettinger, former vice-president of the Wisconsin Bankers Association and until recently cashier of the Merchants and Manufacturers Bank of Milwaukee, has opened an investment securities office in the Majestic building in Milwaukee. Mr. Graettinger has a host of friends in the banking business throughout the state and success in his new venture is already assured.

Bank Plans to Build

In all probability Oshkosh will have a new bank building which will be erected during the summer months and completed before winter. The directors of the State Bank of Oshkosh are contemplating the erection of a stone building and have already discussed the definite plans. The building will be two stories high with a depth of 150 feet and frontage of 45 feet. It is planned to have a number of suites of offices on the second floor.

Henry Dehde, president of the bank says that the building when completed will rank second to none in the state.

Personal Notes of Interest

L. H. Stevens is the new president of the First National Bank of Fennimore; P. T. Stevens, Montford, and G. A. Stevens, Cassville, vice-presidents; C. H. Basford, cashier, and L. A. Clark, assistant cashier.

The directors of the State Bank of Oshkosh contemplate the erection of a two story building within the near future.

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, March 8.—St. Louis bankers report that the shipment of currency and gold to the interior has begun. Thus far the movement has been very light, but still comparatively liberal, as the open winter has advanced things unusually in an agricultural way, and spring farm operations are likely to be earlier this season than has been the case for several years. Thus far shipments have been confined almost entirely to the Southwest.

The movement of early crops from Texas has commenced in good earnest, and though that business is not directly financed from this center, it has a tendency to affect reserves of Southern banks at this center. The general outlook for crops is the most favorable in years, that is for this season. Throughout the Southwest this is especially true. There has been marked improvement in the wheat situation, and soil conditions are universally fine. In Oklahoma, for example, the recent state agricultural report showed a condition for the growing crop of 75 per cent, comparing with 36 per cent on February 1st. While the acreage of winter wheat shows no great increase, this is more than offset by increases in other crops. The reason for this is diversification, which, according to state stations, is greater this year than ever before. In view of the high prices for wheat during the last few years, this is considered rather remarkable, but it attributed to the heavy grain reserves in cities and held back by farmers. Total deposits in the St. Louis banks and trust companies and cash and exchange have decreased somewhat during the last two weeks, while there has been a small increase in the loans and discounts. General business shows improvement, as is indicated by the broader commercial demand, however, sales with certain branches are rather disappointing. This is true of the shoe trade, which have fallen below expectations thus far this year.

Subtreasury Site Selected

After several weeks of looking around and investigation, Charles D. Hilles, assistant secretary of the treasury, has finally selected property on which the United States Sub-Treasury building will be erected. The location is the southeast corner of Fourth and Chestnut streets. It is understood the price paid was $300,000, the full amount of the appropriation. The deal was made through the Mercantile Trust Company. Part of the property was owned by the International Bank. Several other sites were considered, and one or two of them would have been better liked by local financiers, but they were held beyond the money available. Generally the new location meets with approval. It is opposite the St. Louis Courthouse, and on the immediate edge of the financial district, being only a few blocks from the leading banks and trust companies.

American Credit Indemnity

A feature of the local stock market this week has been American Credit Indemnity, the shares of which had a sharp advance, under a much broader demand than has been noted since the reorganization of that company. From $150 the price moved upward without check to $175, and very little stock came out at the advance. The reason for the gain is chiefly due to the excellent showing made by the American Credit Indemnity in its last report. In this it was shown that the surplus increased $229,261, and that the earnings and interest for the past year amounted to $139,855, or 40 per cent on the capital stock. I. H. Lionberger is chairman of the board of the company, and E. M. Treat, president.

Boatmen's Bank Looks Great

The new fixtures of the Boatmen's Bank have been installed, and the banking room now is as beautiful and up to date as any in the West. The entire bank was made over, the improvements beginning shortly after the election of Edwards Whitaker as president, to succeed Rufus Lackland. Formerly the offices of the president and other officers were way back in the rear, while the new arrangement reverses this order, and places them immediately opposite the main entrance. But while the new fixtures are interesting, they are less so than the experiment of Mr. Whitaker, who is paying 4 per cent on twelve-month certificates of deposit, and has been during all the recent period of easy money. Everyone knows Mr. Whitaker's acumen as a trader and feels sure he is making money, but wonder how he manages to do it.

Heavy Quarterly Disbursements

The quarterly dividends and interest disbursements on stocks and bonds listed on the St. Louis Stock Exchange will aggregate about $4,000,000. This is a conservative estimate, and the payments by unlisted corporations will swell this amount from two to three times. Banks and trust companies will pay out about $1,500,000, while tractions and miscellaneous corporations will disburse $2,329,072. The reduction as compared with a year ago is due to the suspension of the United Railways preferred stock dividend, but this is partially made up by increases elsewhere, and new declarations.

Oklahoma Banks Consolidate

The Oklahoma City National and Central Reserve Bank of Oklahoma City have consolidated, the merged institution being known as the Oklahoma City National. This deal, which has been pending for several weeks, is one of the most important bank amalgamations which has taken place in the new state. The size of the banks involved and prominence of the officials makes it a notable event in Oklahoma's banking history. Officers of the institution are H. W. Williams, president; A. M. Young, vice-president; Don Lacy, vice-president and cashier; C. H. Everest, vice-president; W. M. Bonner, cashier; Homer Eiler, E. S. Vaught, John B. Doolin, J. T. Strum, H. W. Penticost, J. W. Gallagher, W. I. Gerbert, R. K. Woten, J. N. Dodson and J. A. Strine, directors. E. B. Cockrell, state bank commissioner, who was vice-president of the Central Reserve, has resigned from the institution to become president of the Continental Trust Company, now in process of organization. The consolidated bank has a capital and surplus of $550,000 and deposits aggregating about $2,000,000.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

For the first time in many months the larger banks of the Central West are making investments in outside paper. "The cause of this condition," said Walton H. Holmes, president of the Pioneer Trust Company of Kansas City, "is that our banks are full of money and there is practically no demand among local patrons. Rates are low, of course, but it will be only a short time before the regular borrowers begin to come in. Along about April 1st the cattle feeders start buying in the South and from then on I look for a stronger demand with a stiffening of rates in this territory. Weather conditions in the agricultural and grazing country have improved wonderfully within the past few weeks and everybody is feeling the effects of this change. Banking conditions are satisfactory notwithstanding the slackening of business which always comes to us at this season of the year.

Large Sales of Stocks

All records for stock sales in Oklahoma were broken last week when $125,000 worth of capital stock of the Continental Trust Company of Oklahoma City was disposed of in one day. This new concern will be capitalized for $500,000. One hundred thousand dollars' worth of the stock was sold to F. B. Cockrell, formerly vice-president of the Central Reserve Bank of Oklahoma City and state bank commissioner; his brother, E. P. Cockrell, of Chicago, assistant general passenger agent of the Monon route and director of the National Life Insurance Company and others outside of the state. It is reported that F. B. Cockrell will be president of the Continental Company. A new building to be at least ten stories in height is contemplated as a home for the company in Oklahoma City.

Doubt as to Guaranty Law

At no time since the deposit guaranty law went into effect in Oklahoma has there been so much uncertainty and doubt regarding its benefits as at this time. When the recent decision of the United States supreme court sustained its constitutionality, the guaranty fund in Oklahoma was practically depleted. Many state banks had refused to participate in the guaranty arrangement until forced to do so. Various rumors have placed the deficit of the fund at from $700,000 to $1,200,000. Until the report of the accountants is completed no more definite information can be secured.

One of the first acts of the new Oklahoma banking board was to assess a levy of one per cent on the individual deposits of all state banks to re-establish the guaranty fund. It is estimated that this levy will place $500,000 in the fund at once. The peculiarity of the assessment comes from the fact that if a bank possesses a capital stock of $10,000 and has deposits to the amount of $100,000, the levy which is against the deposits takes ten per cent, or one tenth, of the capital stock, which for the bank to pay would impair the capital stock and make an assessment on the stockholders necessary or force the bank into liquidation.

Many banks all over Oklahoma have announced their intention of resisting this assessment or becoming nationalized in order to escape the tax. Among the larger state institutions which are said to be considering the latter course are the Bank of Commerce and the Bank of Oklahoma of Tulsa; the Producers State Bank and the State and Trust Company of Nowata and both banks at Claremore which are controlled by G. D. Davis, head of the Oklahoma State Bankers Association.

Bank Anniversary

March 1st was a gala day for the officers and employees of the First National Bank of Kansas City, for it was the 25th birthday of that institution and the anniversary was marked by several interesting incidents. The first was the announcement that the capital stock would be increased from $500,000 to $1,000,000. The stockholders were given a 100 per cent dividend in stock. The employees were all remembered by substantial gifts. At 4 o'clock the employees were called into the executive offices of the banks where each was presented with a sum of money equal to 1 per cent of his or her annual salary for each year of service. The negro porter, Richard Allen, received a 25 per cent dividend on his annual salary, having been with the bank since the day it opened for business. After banking hours other bankers from all over the city, as well as customers of the bank called with felicitations. The desks of the officers were banked in flowers.

The First National Bank of Kansas City was organized March 1, 1886, and opened for business in the old "Junction" building at Ninth and Delaware streets. Of the board of directors at that time, two members remain. They are Colonel J. F. Richards and J. S. Loose. In January, 1887, E. F. Swinney was elected cashier and in 1908 C. G. Hutcheson was made cashier and H. T. Abernathy, vice-president. Mr. Swinney became president at that time and occupies that position to-day. The First National Bank now occupies a beautiful marble building at Tenth Street and Baltimore Avenue and is one of the soundest financial institutions in the Central West.

General Banking Notes

The American Title and Trust Company is the name of a new financial concern which will have offices in Oklahoma City and Muskogee, Okla. It is to have a capital of $500,000 and it is said that a number of St. Louis and Chicago capitalists are behind it.

Announcement has been made of the promotion of T. N. Wells, paying teller of the American National Bank of Oklahoma City, to be assistant cashier of that institution.

On March 1st the Oklahoma State Bank of Chickasha, Okla., was reorganized into the Oklahoma National Bank. The capital stock was increased from $50,000 to $100,000. There was no material change in the personnel of the management.

Governor Cruce of Oklahoma has appointed J. C. McClellan of Oklahoma City and W. G. Dennis, also of Oklahoma City, to be his associates on the state banking board. One of the

FORT DEARBORN STOCK

Directors of Fort Dearborn National Bank voted Tuesday to recommend to the stockholders an increase of $500,000 in the capital of the bank to a total of $2,000,000. A meeting of the stockholders to pass upon the proposition will be held about April 10th.

It is the intention to offer the new stock at $125 a share to the old holders in the ratio of one new share for every three of the present issue. While it was not announced that this capital increase is to be in connection with the formation of a trust company, it is understood to be so. The national bank already has a charter for the Fort Dearborn Trust and Savings Bank. It is understood that the trust company will be started soon after the removal of the Fort Dearborn to the American Trust Building, of which it will get possession April 1st, the building having been purchased recently by Fort Dearborn interests. Fort Dearborn has $21,000,000 deposits, and $11,000,000 of loans. The surplus and undivided profits are about $425,000.

The directors declared the regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent, payable March 31st.

CHAPTER RECORD

(Department of Chicago Banker)

An Open Forum Dedicated to the American Institute of Banking in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Systematic Education and Universal Membership

KANSAS CITY CHAPTER

At the Kansas City chapter meeting of the American Institute of Banking, March 2d, the principal address was made by H. P. Wright, of the H. P. Wright Investment Company of Kansas City. Mr. Wright has been identified with the stocks and bonds business for many years and his address was upon this class of investments. The Kansas City Chapter has a membership of 600 employees of Kansas City banks and Mr. Wright faced nearly all the members when he arose to talk. He began by observing that the history of civilization has been a history of stocks and bonds. "Business has developed, nations have expanded, the great enterprises of the world have succeeded," said Mr. Wright, "only as a large number of people have united in an orderly and legal way and combined their financial and physical strength to accomplish those things which would be impossible when operating singly as individuals."

Mr. Wright observed that he had been one of many people who had believed that corporations were the creations of the past one or two centuries, but that his study had shown him that corporations had their origin in Rome in the days of the Roman republic, the controlling idea being that of perpetuity. "The man who invented corporations," went on Mr. Wright, "although his name is forgotten, was a greater inventor than Edison or Franklin or Stephenson. The development of his invention has been amazing. It has covered alike the world's greatest progress and its greatest rascality. It has developed the organization and government of cities, states and nations as well as those commercial organizations which we call stock companies."

In an exhaustive way Mr. Wright went into the local history of municipal bonds and traced the growth of confidence and investment in municipal securities for the past quarter of a century. Getting into the more general subjects of stocks and bonds the speaker continued: "The development of this business has been so swift that no one mind can compass the subject in all its bearings. The study of bonds has become like medicine or law, a profession more than a business. The tendency of everything in corporation lines is toward concentration and enlargement, and as a result many of our large corporations are becoming of a size where it is absolutely impossible for the mind to grasp them. There are many who take this rapid growth as an indication of some unnatural or iniquitous tendency. This is not correct. Growth is perfectly natural to anything that is alive. The time will never come when the man who is the directing head of a great business corporation will not be searching with all his power for additional lines of business to bring under the influence of his organization. The minute he quits pulling someone else takes his place. As this process has gone on new and unexpected financing has become necessary. No two companies have the same experience, and no two can be financed on the same plan. Each condition calls for its own peculiar 'set up' as the financial doctors call it. A plan that to-day seems adequate and sufficiently far reaching, will next year look like a nightmare and perhaps be found to needlessly tie up assets so that the necessary financing will be tremendously expensive." Mr. Wright closed his address by giving a number of instances of financing, successes and failures with studious analysis of the fundamental causes contributing to each result. He also explained the system of marketing stocks and bonds.

TO REGULATE IOWA PRIVATE BANKS

Des Moines, Ia., March 7.—Control, regulation and examination of private banks of Iowa are provisions of a bill which Senator Bennett, of Adams, has prepared for introduction in the legislature. This proposed law will provide for the governing of the private banks under the same regulations and rules as now govern the state and savings banks of the state. There is no law to govern private banks in Iowa, Senator Bennett says, and that the state could have some knowledge of their business.

Members of the legislature are stirred up over the late banking fiasco, which the lax laws of Iowa have made possible, and of too frequent occurrence. The daily papers have contained the announcement of the wrecking of the Bank of Kelley, of which E. J. Penfield was president. The institution is a private one and Penfield has absconded. The report was made that he was apprehended at Watertown, S. D., and then this report was denied. The reason for the disaster is supposed to be heavy speculations in lands—the same old story of spreading out so thin that when the pinch came, it could not be covered. When the rumor became circulated of Penfield's disappearance, a run started at once, upon the bank, and they found only about $400 to pay the depositors. The balance, some fifty or sixty thousand dollars, had disappeared. The general belief is that Penfield did not get away with the money, but that it was lost in foolish speculation before the smash came. Just before leaving Des Moines, Penfield purchased (on time) a new light gray suit, dark oxford gray silk lined overcoat, bearing "Men's Fashion Shop" label on inside coat pocket, black derby hat, black grip and new tan suit case. He is described as five feet seven inches tall, heavy build, weight about 175 pounds, medium dark complexion, small brown eyes, set close together, smooth face. Has blue serge suit with him. This case is almost as rotten as the blow-up recently in Illinois of the Butler chain of private banks near Peoria, and the Cosmopolitan scandal in Chicago over certificates of deposit.

STORE BANK HAS $100,000 CAPITAL

St. Louis, March 7.—The new Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney Bank, which takes over the assets and deposits of the old bank of the same name was incorporated yesterday, with a capital stock of $100,000, fully paid. The shares are held as follows: Melville L. Wilkinson, 992 shares; Robert Johnston, John R. Towler, Herbert E. Ecker and Charles G. Tomerlin, two shares each. The reorganization is a result of the purchase of the Scruggs department store by the H. B. Claflin Company, which took over the bank with the store. The old bank was a private bank, with $5,000 capital, while the new one is incorporated as a state bank under the Missouri laws. It belongs to the clearing house.

Mr. Wilkinson, who is president of the Scruggs Company, will succeed Hanford Crawford as the bank's president. Mr. Ecker will continue as cashier and the other incorporators continue as directors. D. R. Calhoun leaves the board.

The bank is unique among St. Louis institutions in that it makes no loans. It deposits its funds in other banks or invests the money in bonds. According to the directors, its assets are of such a character that they can be converted into cash on an hour's notice.

The bank statement of January 7th shows the bank had $235,556 deposits, a surplus of $7,008, cash and exchange $114,000, bonds $123,667, and loans of $9,835.

NORTON AT NEW POST APRIL 5

Official announcement is made that Chas. D. Norton, secretary to President Taft, will on April 5th take up his new duties as vice-president of the First National Bank of New York. Chas. D. Hilles, assistant secretary of the treasury, will succeed Mr. Norton on April 4th as secretary to the President.

TELLS OF IOWA LAND PRICES

H. W. Huttig, president of the Huttig Manufacturing Co., of Muscatine, was at LaSalle Street National Wednesday congratulating Senator Lorimer and incidentally telling of business conditions in Iowa. Mr. Huttig declares the state is highly prosperous despite the fact that the holding of land in large bodies has reduced the rural population. He does not agree with those who claim that land values have fallen. Iowa's large crops and diversity of interests are an assurance that the state cannot go backward.

DIVIDENDS ARE DECLARED

The directors of Colonial Trust & Savings Bank have declared the twenty-eighth quarterly dividend of 2 per cent and an extra dividend of ½ of 1 per cent, payable April 1st to stockholders of record March 25th.

The directors of North Avenue State Bank have declared the twelfth quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent, payable March 1st to stockholders of record March 25th.

WISCONSIN BANKER A VISITOR

W. Schutte, cashier of Schutte and Quilling Bank, Menomonie, Wis., was a visitor at First National Tuesday. He gave an encouraging report on business conditions in his section.

Editorial Comment

IMPROVING BANK LEGISLATION

The splendid example set by the state of Alabama, assisted by the Alabama Bankers Association, in adopting the most modern of banking bills, is having an immediate effect upon the rest of the country. The new Alabama law had attached to it an emergency clause whereby it goes into effect thirty days after the governor's signature was attached. The splendid position taken by the state association in holding its annual convention at a time when the state legislature was in session has inspired the Arkansas Bankers Association to renewed efforts to have a new law passed for that state. The Arkansas association has changed the place of its meeting from Eureka Springs to Little Rock, the state capital, and has advanced the dates for the convention to April 6th and 7th. This has been done with the intention of putting the state association in a position to assist in bringing to a passage the Denton-Turner banking bill which it is so anxious to have passed. It is expected that this plan will prove quite as effective in Arkansas as it did in Alabama and the bill which the Arkansas bankers wish to have passed is practically a duplicate of the one passed in Alabama. At the present rate, all of the southern states soon will have modern banking departments going, with all forms of banking under competent state supervision and inspection.

After years of conflict with private bankers and proprietors of chains-of-banks, Tennessee secured the passage of a new banking act two years ago which has worked so well that the legislature now has up for passage a still more adequate banking law based almost entirely upon the act recently passed in Alabama. It has followed the Minnesota precedent in that the governor is obliged to select his superintendent of banking from a list of names first endorsed by the state bank section of the Tennessee Bankers Association. After this selection has been made a confirmation by the senate is made mandatory. The law provides that banking commissioners shall have had at least five years' experience as an executive officer in solvent and reputable banks in the state. This largely will take the department out of politics and is a good example set to some of our northern neighbors who have first class banking laws but whose banking commissioners very often are mere political appointments with no banking experience or other business qualifications.

The proposed Tennessee act places the private or individual banker or firm under the same supervision and restrictions imposed upon incorporated banks. They can begin business only as other banks begin business,—by first securing the permission of the banking department. Private bankers will be subjected to examination and must keep a fixed capital unimpaired. Sixty days is the limit in which a bank or individual banker has in which to make good an impaired capital. The new banking superintendent will have authority of law to compel any bank, firm, or individual banker to correct any matter in the conduct of the affairs of the bank which in his opinion is unsafe. Any bank, firm, or individual banker who refuses to disclose his books upon demand will find his bank taken over into the possession of the bank commissioner or one of his deputies. Uniform reports are to be required from individual banks the same as from firms or incorporated banks. These must be transmitted to the banking department promptly. Before any private banker, firm, or incorporation shall be entitled to a license to do a banking business, proposals shall be printed fully in the local newspapers. This is to give notice to any who may have objection or who may know of some reason why the banking enterprise should not be permitted to start. All of these and many other safeguards are to be thrown around the business of banking in the proposed act, and stringent penalties with penitentiary sentences are to be provided for all material violations. The general provisions of the new laws proposed for Arkansas and Tennessee are in conformity with the new laws which have been adopted in Alabama, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and other states. Now that it is becoming the usual thing to have a modern banking law, it is suggested that the legislatures of Illinois and Iowa fall into line and do the proper thing.

BUSINESS PEOPLE CONFIDENT

The American people refuse to take alarm at anything that now appears on the commercial horizon. No amount of political uncertainty and no degree of railroad pessimism can upset the financial equilibrium. The country is sound and the people know it. That's about all there is to the story. With an abundance of money awaiting commercial use, agriculture thriving and spring activity coming on all classes are in a comfortable and cheerful frame of mind. There is nothing to build a hard times' theory on and it seems to be beyond the power of any party or faction to disturb public confidence.

STATE CONVENTIONS CALLED

The South Dakota convention will meet June 7th and 8th at Sioux Falls. The Iowa convention will meet at Mason City, June 15th and 16th.

AIMED AT TITLE INSURANCE COMPANIES

A bill has been introduced at Springfield, of quite uncertain origin, which will require title guaranty companies in Illinois to carry a deposit with the state auditor before issuing policies. Some say the bill is "aimed at" the two well known Chicago institutions which insure titles to real property. Equally might it be said to favor them as an effective measure to keep rivals out of the field, who might not be able to keep up such a large deposit. The bill is general and requires trust companies before issuing any contract or policy to deposit with the state auditor $200,000, if they are Chicago concerns, or $50,000 if they are in cities of less than 100,000 population. The deposit is for the protection of anyone entitled to recover under any guaranty policy.

The deposit is to consist of United States bonds, municipal or county bonds, or mortgages on improved real estate. The securities are to be subject to sale and transfer by the state auditor upon order of the courts.

Any company that retires from business is to get its securities back upon furnishing the auditor with evidence that its obligations are all satisfied. Whenever the annual report of a company shows that it has a business exceeding ten times the amount of its deposit it is required to increase the deposit to $500,000 in cities of 100,000 population and to $125,000 in smaller cities.

There will be some discussion no doubt, to show who really is "aimed at" but if the bill will make guaranty policies any safer it ought to become a law. It is good insurance custom to have companies in all lines of insurance do, what most of them now do, put up a guaranty fund.

FEDERAL CONTROL OF TRADE

A new and surprising test is to be made of the government's power to control trade, or at least to break up a monopoly. Federal officials last week began suit under the Sherman act against thirty-four electrical companies, including the General Electric and the Westinghouse Companies, alleging a combination in restraint of trade.

According to the government's petition the defendant companies are banded together in a conspiracy and have already gained control of 97 per cent of the country's supply of electric lights. The trust is alleged to have had its origin soon after 1904, the year in which the United States patents on carbon filament incandescent lamps expired.

NATIONAL NASSAU BANK

The old Nassau Bank of New York passed out of existence last week and in its place was born the National Nassau Bank, but with the same efficient staff, headed by President Edward Earl, that has built up this sterling institution to its present high standing. The capital stock, $500,000, remains unchanged. While the report made to the State Superintendent of Banks November 10th showed deposits of $9,400,000, the aggregate at the present time is $10,500,000, a measure of growth seldom equalled.

President Edward Earl has been connected with the Nassau Bank for twenty-four years. He was elected president in November, 1908, succeeding W. H. Rogers, and was practically the head of this institution during the panic of 1907. The bank deposits at that time were about $4,000,000. This amount has, since Mr. Earl's incumbency, multiplied two and one-half times. The Nassau Bank, which occupied the ground floor of the Temple Court Building, corner of Nassau and Beekman streets, was founded in 1852, and was one of the charter members of the clearing house. The other officers under Pres. Earl are: J. Christy Bell, vice-president; John Munro, vice-president; W. B. Noble, cashier; N. D. Alling, H. P. Sturr and R. M. Bailey, assistant cashiers.

San Antonio, Texas, March 6.—No effort on the part of Texas financiers has done so much for the development of the state, along progressive lines as the decision not to finance any undertaking that did not have actual merit in it. This decision upon their part almost one year ago has brought about the most stable and promising conditions.

Five or six years ago, when it had been demonstrated that the soil of southwest Texas was as productive as any in the world, all kinds of development schemes took root in the southwest section of the state. Some of these, of course, were legitimate, in the hands of men who build substantially and for all time. But unfortunately the "itinerant booster" saw an opportunity to ply his vocation, and for a time he flourished. The decision, however, of those who furnish capital not to finance any undertaking that did not have merit in it had the effect of causing the "get rich quick" promoter to seek more promising territory. This has proved a long step in the right direction and one of beneficent results to Texas. Both the homeseeker and the investor now have the assurance that when an undertaking has the capital on which to do business it has the endorsement of those who know the value of credits.

The result of this is that Texas has been wonderfully benefited and the tide of immigration has set this way with a greater rush than ever before. Gigantic irrigation undertakings are bringing thousands of acres under the domain of the plow and multiplying the producing power of the soil at a most rapid rate.

While money has been apparently close, compared with two years or more ago, the fact remains that legitimate enterprises have no trouble in securing plenty of working capital at a reasonable rate of interest. Banks in this city show an increased deposit as the result of this, and those who really do things in a developing world have the utmost confidence in the stability of financial institutions and the final results of agricultural effort.

In the southwest portion of the state, it is estimated by those in a position to know that the area devoted to cotton will be almost doubled this year. In the Lower Rio Grande Valley, where the most gigantic development in the history of this continent has taken place in the past three years, it is estimated that fully 15,000 acres will be devoted to cotton growing by irrigation, one farm at Mission containing 1,000 acres.

LIMIT INTEREST TO 3 PER CENT

Sixty bankers attended the meeting of Central Pennsylvania Bankers Association at Du Bois. Action was taken on the interest question. B. M. Marlin was elected secretary to succeed E. E. Lindemuth.

A resolution was presented by H. B. Powell, president of the County National Bank of Clearfield that after May 1st not more than three per cent interest be paid by any member of the association on new accounts, whether in the form of certificates of deposit or otherwise.

This resolution was much discussed and Judge Harry White, of Indiana, made the following amendment which was adopted.

"And existing certificates or accounts not then according to their terms expiring, when they expire shall be received only at the rate of not exceeding 3 per cent per annum."

On motion of William Winslow of Punxsutawney, an amendment was added as follows:

"And after May 1, 1912, no interest rate in excess of 3 per cent shall be paid or credited upon any form of deposit in any bank in this association."

This resolution and amendments were adopted after a thorough discussion, with a provision that all banks that have not voted on the question shall have the privilege of taking action within twenty days.

H. B. Patton, a director of the County National Bank of Clearfield, and the Curwensville National Bank spoke on the matter and called attention to the conservative manner of foreign practice and said that the Metropolitan banker looks upon the country banker that paid 3 per cent on deposits as more worthy of confidence than on those who paid more.

President S. A. Rinn in closing the meeting congratulated the members for their earnestness and the fine manner in which they attended to business, and that one of the objects of the association was attained at the present meeting.

D. A. Holland, formerly of Boston, has become general manager of the Security Trust Company of Spokane, of which M. A. Phelps is president.

B. F. Harris

Vice-President B. F. Harris of First National, Champaign, who has just returned from a trip to Panama, says:

"Seeing the canal is not only a liberal education, it is absolutely necessary to an appreciation of just what our people can accomplish. Then by a visit there one necessarily corrects a lot of wrong impressions he may have formed, and the American is indeed a dead one who is not thrilled upon realizing what a really stupendous undertaking it is that we have undertaken and which our engineers and our workmen are carrying through without a hitch.

"I had unusual facilities for seeing the canal work, for I was taken through Culebra Cut on the pay car, went up in the Pacific end of the canal in a launch for four miles and a half, and then got opportunities to see the rest of the work at close range. The thing that strikes you first is that the nearer you get to the canal the bigger it gets to be and the more respect you feel for the way in which American citizens are carrying on the work. Then you notice the streets of the towns, and everything seems to be perfect—not a breath of scandal about anything—and then it strikes you after some time that the biggest thing about the work is the perfect organization. I talked with a lot of the men and attempted to draw them out, but I could not find evidence of any friction.

"On the ship going down people talked to us about the terrible climate and tried to scare us up. The fact is that the stop at Colon was the most delightful one we made, for the weather was pleasanter than at Havana. I talked with fully fifty officials and they and their wives seemed to be delighted with the climate. They told me there had been no yellow fever for years and that sun-stroke is unknown. You hear talk of pneumonia, but the quarantine doctor told me that he had never heard of a white person's having it down there.

"I heard lots of talk there about the actual work on the canal being finished in 1913, and the impression is that boats will be going through the canal for a year before the formal opening takes place, the object being to give every part of the work a thorough test before the waterway is declared ready for the world's traffic."

New York, March 8.—Aaron Bancroft, a broker, 86 years old, was robbed last Thursday afternoon of securities worth about $100,000 in the vestibule of the Produce Exchange Safety Deposit and Storage Company, but he did not discover his loss until to-day.

For the last twenty-five years it has been Mr. Bancroft's habit every Thursday afternoon to deposit the firm's valuable in a box rented by them from the Deposit and Storage Company. The distance from his offices to the vaults is not more than 200 feet, and anyone making the trip is in constant sight of the office windows.

Last Thursday Mr. Bancroft, as usual, placed securities, worth that day about $100,000, in a large envelope, about 10 inches by 14 square, tied with red tape and with the firm's name printed in the corner. Alone, he walked from his office to the Produce Exchange.

A flight of steps leads from the street level entrance to the vaults. As Mr. Bancroft reached the bottom of the steps he noticed a young man, whom he remembered only as rather undersized, leaning against the corridor wall.

Mr. Bancroft continued on his way down, but just as he was about to turn the corner at the end of the corridor into the vaults a tall man, in a great hurry, came running around the corner in the opposite direction and collided with him. The shock threw Mr. Bancroft off his feet and in falling he dropped the envelope.

That was the cue for the undersized young man who had been leaning against the corridor wall. He stepped up to Mr. Bancroft, assisted him to his feet and was solicitous to tuck the fallen envelope under his arm. At least Mr. Bancroft thought it was the envelope that fell. He went on to deposit it in his box as usual.

When his son, George Bancroft, unlocked the box to-day to check up the securities before the opening of business for the week, he found that the only envelope there contained three old newspapers. A clever substitution had been effected.

Both the firm of George Bancroft and Company and the private detectives working on the case were convinced that the substitution was worked by men who had made a close study of the Bancrofts, their habits and their business methods.

The robbers knew on what day it was the firm's custom to deposit its securities and at what hour. They knew that Mr. Bancroft habitually carried them in an envelope of a certain appearance, for they provided themselves in advance with so close a duplicate that it deceived even the man who of all others should best have known its appearance.

The securities were made up of railroad and industrial stocks which could easily be hypothecated in any stock brokerage house in the United States having connections with the New York Stock Exchange.

GRAND TRUNK CHANGES OFFICIALS

Harry G. Elliott has been appointed general passenger agent of the Grand Trunk at Montreal, and is succeeded in Chicago by J. W. McDonald as assistant general passenger agent. Mr. McDonald has a wide acquaintance with the railway and newspaper fraternity, having for many years represented his company at Buffalo in charge of the Niagara Frontier, and for the past eight years as district passenger agent at Toronto. McDonald's territory embraces what is known as the western division, being that portion of the Grand Trunk Railway System lying west of Detroit and Port Huron, and also all the territory west of Chicago.

SHOWS INTEREST IN FARMING

President D. W. Karraken of Bank of Jonesboro, is among the many progressive bankers who are taking an interest in farming. He writes to W. G. Edens of Central Trust that the Bank of Jonesboro has distributed several hundred copies of Professor Hopkins' address entitled, "The Bankers the Guardians of the Soil," together with other documents of similar character.

Farmers in the Jonesboro district are rapidly taking up modern methods and are in a sense ahead of agriculturists in many other localities. Illinois bankers adopted this resolution at the Cairo convention showing how they regard their relationship to farming:

Resolved, That it is the sentiment of the Bankers Association of the state of Illinois that the recommendation of President James and Professor Cyril G. Hopkins of the University of Illinois as to the preservation of the soil of this state be acted upon by the members of the association through requesting their officers and directors to use their influence to secure more general recognition of the necessity of returning to the soil the essential elements removed by repeated cropping to the end that the most valuable asset of the state may be saved from deterioration by early action on the part of land owners and farmers.

THE LITERATURE OF THE SOUTH

"The Literature of the South" is a book of promise in its title and a revelation in its pages, dealing kindly and with feeling with the position of the South in American letters. For convenience the time is divided into colonial, revolutionary, ante-bellum, Civil War and new South periods. Prof. Montrose J. Moses has done the whole American people a great service in this fine volume of 500 pages. The publishers are Thomas Y. Crowell & Co. New York.

The author's idea is to give a critical view of the principal authors of each period and a summary of the literary life thereof. He endeavors to be fair and unprejudiced, and generally succeeds. He becomes impatient over the follies of the reconstruction period, but so do we all, for that matter. Of course a great many writers of minor importance are mentioned, some of whom the general reader never heard of before; but one who has not given the matter much thought will be surprised at the large number of authors of national reputation who are or were of southern birth. These are just a few of them: Richard Malcolm Johnston, F. Hopkinson Smith, George W. Cable, Joel Chandler Harris, James Lane Allen, Frances Hodgson Burnett, Mary N. Murfee, Henry Grady, Thos. Nelson Page, Madison Cawein. Most of these are yet living. Of those not living may be mentioned: John James Audubon, John Esten Cooke, Henry W. Grady, Paul Hamilton Hayne, Sidney Lanier, Albert Pike, Edgar Allan Poe, George D. Prentice, William Gilmore Simms and Henry Timrod.

TWO NEW BOBBS-MERRILL BOOKS

A new Bobbs-Merrill book in reading circles is like a new gown from Paris. It is accepted as the correct thing, having been issued by authority. One of the latest to come from the Indianapolis publishers is "Colonel Todhunter of Missouri" by Ripley D. Saunders, a well known St. Louis newspaper man. The colonel of the story is a combination of gallant, fighting man and politician and he may be accepted as a type. Many former celebrities are in the story as characters. Party politics of the present time is cleverly handled by the author, but his first claim to something out of the ordinary is his cleverer handling of the Missouri-Kentucky dialect as put into the mouth of Col. Todhunter and those a bit below him in capacity and station. Of course, there is a killing and a murder trial, the exigencies of local color would demand that much; and there's a love story, quaintly, prettily told. In the politics, the social events, the more dire happenings and the unfolding of the tender passion, Mr. Saunders keeps his account and the participating characters well in hand. There is a better balance between description and action than in most novels of similar trend, a gentler but not less distinctive portraiture of character. Illustrator W. B. King has caught the outline as well as the mood of the story, and his work enhances the value of the effort. It can not be denied that "Col. Todhunter of Missouri" is "mighty interesting" reading.

"The Phantom of the Opera" by Gaston Leroux, from the same publishers, is of another school entirely. It is a thriller and may give you the creeps. Depends upon your nerves and your environment. Leroux wrote "The Mystery of the Yellow Room" but goes it one better when he takes up an opera ghost, who haunted the opera house in Paris, that beautiful structure of 17 stories, surmounted by the Lyre of Apollo, with a lake beneath its five cellars. It is a strange leading character for a novel; yet from the first words of the prologue interest is excited, an interest which grows as he tells how he came to connect the phantom, with the mysterious and dramatic conditions that attended the kidnapping of Christine Daae, the prima donna, the disappearance of the Vicomte de Chagny and the death of his elder brother, Count Philippe, whose body was found on the bank of the lake that exists in the lower cellars of the Opera on the Rue Scribe side.

No attempt will be made to give an outline but wild as it is, the story ends happily. In the mystery line it has them all beaten.

WITH THE FLYING SQUADRON

Assistant Cashier George B. Smith of Continental-Commercial National, made the tour of the Texas and Oklahoma group meetings with the flying squadron, a party of 25 bankers from Chicago, St. Louis and Kansas City. He reports large meetings and a cheerful feeling over business prospects.

BACK FROM TEXAS VISIT

W. H. Hurley of National Bank of the Republic, is back from his Texas visit. He reports the various bankers' meetings in the Southwest as having been interesting and well attended. Mr. Hurley says the recent rains have improved agricultural prospects and there will be an increase in cotton acreage.

BANK DIVIDEND RAISED

Directors of Merchants' Loan and Trust Company declared a quarterly dividend of 4 per cent Tuesday raising the annual rate from 12 to 16 per cent on the bank's $3,000,000 of capital. This action has been expected by some of the holders of the stock for a year or more, and the shares have sold up around the level of other bank stocks drawing 16 per cent dividends.

There has been active bidding for the stock recently at $430 a share and higher, but very little has changed hands. Merchants' Loan has a surplus and undivided profits of more than $6,100,000, giving its stock a book value of more than $303 a share. Its deposits are around 56,000,000.

The earnings of the bank last year were in excess of 30 per cent on the capital and in 1909 were virtually 34 per cent. The increased rate of dividends does not call for more than one-half of the bank's average earnings.

BANK STOCK IS BID UP

Directors of State Bank of Chicago have declared the regular quarterly dividend of 3 per cent. There has been considerable bidding for its stock at 370 and better recently on the expectation that the dividend would be raised to a 16 per cent rate.

While the bank's record of earnings seems to justify an increase in the dividend payment, the board and the management are conservative and are fond of a large surplus. The question of raising the rate was not considered.

COMPLIMENT TO J. J. ARNOLD

John J. Arnold, manager of the foreign exchange department of First National, has been elected a member of the foreign trade committee of Chicago Association of Commerce. Harry A. Wheeler of Union Trust is president of the association and Edward E. Swadener chairman of the foreign trade committee. Mr. Arnold will be a valuable member of the body to which he has been elected.

State Commissioner of Banking A. E. Kuolt has resigned his position as cashier of the Merchants and Savings Bank of Kenosha and he will be succeeded by N. A. Rowe, assistant cashier. Joseph M. Funk has been named as assistant cashier.

Bankers throughout the state are raising objections to some of the features of the banking bill now before the state legislature. The bill embodies the recommendations made by State Bank Examiner J. L. Mohundro.

While commending some features of the bill, bankers object strenuously to others. One of the principal objections is to the clause which fixes the minimum capital stock of country banks at $15,000. The minimum at present is $10,000. Originally Mr. Mohundro favored fixing the minimum at $25,000, but consented to fix it at $15,000. Banks who are directing the fight against the bill declare that such a clause will work a hardship on many communities that are not large enough to support a $15,000 bank and yet which can support a $10,000 institution.

Bankers also object to being compelled to pay for two instead of one examination per year as provided in the bill now before the legislature. The state bankers declare that if this clause is made a part of the law, it will compel the state banks to pay just twice the examining fees required of the national banks. They do not object to the examinations but think one fee is sufficient.

M. F. Backus, president of the National Bank of Commerce, who has just returned from an Eastern trip, stated on his return that business and financial conditions in the East have improved materially since he was in the East last fall. Money, he said, was easy. If the reciprocity bill passes he looks for a decided improvement in industrial conditions.

E. H. Price, vice-president of the German-American Bank of this city died suddenly at his home Tuesday night, February 21st. Mr. Price had been a resident of Seattle for three years.

E. W. Andrews, president of the Seattle National Bank, has just returned from a pleasure trip to California.

J. E. Chilberg, vice-president of the Scandinavian-American Bank, has sailed for Europe where he expects to remain for a month or six weeks.

Marcus M. Murray, who has been cashier of the American Savings Bank and Trust Company, left Seattle March 1st and associated himself with the Bankers Trust Company of Tacoma, which is affiliated with the Seattle institution.

C. S. Harley, cashier of the Mercantile Bank, was appointed a delegate to the National Convention of the Navy League of the United States at Los Angeles.

J. T. Hardeman has been elected president of the Seattle Association of Credit Men to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of J. W.

Spangler, credit manager of the Dexter Horton National Bank.

A. N. Cheney's private bank at Winlock, Chehalis county, this week took out a charter under the state banking department with $15,000 capital stock. The president is A. N. Cheney; Mrs. Nellie Cheney is vice-president; C. A. Cook, cashier, and these three with C. S. Harley of the Mercantile Bank of Seattle and L. D. Howe of the Toledo State Bank are the directors.

The body of E. H. Price, president of the German-American State Bank of Seattle, was sent to his former home at Blue Hill, Nebraska, and buried by the side of his mother, in conformity with Mr. Price's wish.

Martin McLean, cashier of the Davenport National Bank, of Davenport, Wash., has been named by the secretary of the treasury to be national bank examiner to succeed Eugene T. Wilson, who recently resigned to accept a vice-presidency in the National Bank of Commerce of Tacoma.

San Francisco

At the annual meeting of the San Francisco Clearing House Association, Manager Sleeper submitted his report, showing that for the past year, the 35th in the life of the association, the clearings were $2,323,772,870, and for 1909 they were $1,979,872,570, a gain of 17.37 per cent, or $343,900,300. Of this gain 6.19 per cent, or $122,652,134 was due to subtreasury clearings since January 18, 1910. Deducting this amount from the total gain leaves the gain in the bank members' clearings on each other in 1910 11.18 per cent. It is the rule of the San Francisco clearing house that differences must be settled daily in cash—not with cashiers' checks as is the custom in most cities. Manager Sleeper's report shows that 31.33 per cent of balances are paid in gold coin and 68.67 per cent in United States treasury gold certificates.

The following officers were elected: President, James K. Lynch, of the First National; vice-president, James J. Fagan of the Crocker National; secretary, E. J. Broberg, of the American National; clearing house committee, Herbert Fleishacker of the Anglo and London Paris National, F. L. Lipman, of the Wells Fargo Nevada National, John D. McKee of the Mercantile National, Charles K. McIntosh of the Bank of California, N. A., together with President Lynch and Vice-President Fagan; manager, Charles Sleeper; assistant manager, F. H. Colburn.

RANKIN BACK FROM BERMUDA

A. H. Rankin, cashier of Sangamon Loan and Trust Company, Springfield, has returned from Bermuda. He spent most of the winter in the tropics.

Los Angeles

Rumors of more bank consolidations in Los Angeles are rife. It is known that the Citizens National, which has taken the lead lately in absorbing other concerns, is negotiating for at least two more banks and a deal may be closed any day. Ever since the late meeting of the American Bankers Association in Los Angeles, when a number of prominent delegates declared that what this city needed most was a consolidation of banks, there has been activity in the direction of effecting amalgamations. And yet, in the face of this fact, efforts are being made to open new banks, so there is little probability that the number of fiduciary institutions will be reduced. A report that is not officially corroborated is to the effect that Hulett C. Merritt, a multi-millionaire of Pasadena, with certain associates, will establish a new trust company in Los Angeles, and a new savings bank is said to be in embryo.

The American Savings Bank of Los Angeles, will open a new branch, the third, on Vermont Avenue and Jefferson Street, fully four miles from the parent concern. The American has found the branch idea profitable in this city which extends over so great a territory.

A battle of the bankers has just been fought out at Long Beach, one of the popular seaside resorts of Los Angeles, for the possession of a much coveted site for a great hotel. The outcome was a victory for the syndicate headed by H. S. McKee, who is president of the First National of Long Beach, and cashier of the National Bank of California, in Los Angeles. The opposition was represented by W. L. Porterfield, also a banker.

Benjamin Young, retired banker from Astoria, Ore., died suddenly in a hotel lobby in Los Angeles, February 22d. Heart disease was the cause.

A holding company has been formed for the ownership of the Columbia Trust Building, Los Angeles, in which is the home of the Oil & Metals Bank & Trust Company, successor to the Columbia Trust.

W. S. Bartlett, chairman of the board of directors of German American Savings Bank of Los Angeles, who recently returned from a tour of the world, lectured to the local Y. M. C. A., the evening of February 21st, on the associations in foreign lands.

L. C. Brand, president of the All Night & Day Bank, and secretary of the Title Guaranty & Trust Company of Los Angeles, was compelled to undergo a dangerous surgical operation. Although his condition was for a time critical hopes are entertained for his recovery.

Northwestern's February car loading increased 10 per cent.

Attempt to sell Minneapolis bonds of $825,300, the rejection of bids and determination to readvertise, resulted in some discussion of a previous sale whereby in effect half a million bonds were disposed of at less than par, which in fact has been illegal under the state law. The city attorney says: "The recent sale, with an allowance to the purchasers of a stated sum for preparing the blanks, can be defended as a legitimate expense of the sale. The cost of the printing falls upon the city and the council may exercise its discretion, within reasonable limits, as to who shall do the work and the price to be paid. But even this discretion should be exercised with caution and the sum allowed should fairly represent the cost of furnishing the blank bonds."

Proposal of the Halsey company provided for payment in non-interest bearing certificates from one to seven months deferred, and figured an equivalent of about $14,000. The city attorney ruled that the bidder's attorneys would probably pronounce the sale illegal; the bid is not in money and entails a discount, and the conclusions are that it would be a sale at less than par and therefore forbidden. He continued:

"The reputation of the city for conservative dealing like that of a private borrower, is an asset of considerable value. An inclination to disregard or evade the limitations placed by law upon its borrowing power is sure to be detected and commented upon unfavorably. Even if this particular sale should pass the scrutiny of counsel for the buyers and be consummated, it is certain that other counsel having to do with municipal bonds would condemn it. Thus we should have out several bond issues of disputed legality; and knowledge of that fact in financial circles would tend to discredit other issues, past and future."

Discussion of Bond Problem

Bonds have been the principal subject for discussion in and out of the Minnesota legislature. Minneapolis was anxious for a big park and school bond issue, and after arguments for and against the large issue, the estimate was cut. Even the women took part in the discussion. Whether to cut the law out forbidding the sale of city bonds below par, or to advance the maximum interest to $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent was another bone of contention. Nearly five million bonds were wanted.

A members of the Wells & Dickey Company, suggested a discount rather than increase in rate. He said:

"We think we are correct in stating that with the large buyers of bonds, the fact that bonds are sold at a slight discount will have no effect whatever upon the general credit of the city, and that the city will, in the end, sell 4 per cent bonds at a better price, that is, upon a lower net interest basis than they could possibly sell $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent bonds.

"We quote from a prominent Chicago bond house: 'In all the years that we have been in business, we have never heard of a city's credit suffering from having sold its bonds below par.'

"If the market is not in a condition to absorb 4 per cent bonds at better than par, the mere fact that these 4 per cent bonds are sold at a discount rather than $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent bonds being sold at a premium, does not, to our mind, reflect in any way whatever upon the credit of the city. It seems to us that the idea which some people seem to have, that it is bad policy to sell bonds below par, is not founded upon any good reason."

"The recent bids at a discount for Minneapolis bonds, indicate that they would sell upon about a $4\frac{1}{8}$ per cent interest basis. Should $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent bonds be offered, a $4\frac{1}{8}$ per cent basis would require the payment of \$64 premium on every \$1,000 bond. The disinclination on the part of investors to pay a large premium would inevitably mean that $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent bonds could not be marketed upon such a favorable basis, but would probably have to be sold on about 4-5 per cent basis or \$50 premium per bond.

This difference in the basis between a high rate and a low rate bond is always observable in the buying and selling of municipal securities, and a city will be sure to get a better price if it offers its 4 per cent bonds and permits their sale at a discount."

The senators made a close investigation of the subject and issued a statement favoring the allowance to sell at 5 points below par rather than the advance of the maximum point of interest.

Their opinion was indorsed by A. B. Leach & Company and N. W. Halsey & Company of Chicago, also the Minnesota Loan & Trust, Hennepin County Savings, Northwestern and First Nationals and the Wells & Dickey Company.

Helping Out Persia

Bruce G. Dickey, of Bird Island, Minn., appointed by President Taft as one of five to help Persia work out financial and taxation reforms, said at Minneapolis on Tuesday: "I have not had a conference with W. Morgan Shuster of Boston, head of the commission, and am not fully advised of the plan to be followed in working out the system. I assume that we shall have to make close study of the situation as we find it on arrival in Persia, and then devise whatever plan will fit local conditions."

The commission will sail, he says, about March 20th. In the party will be beside Mr. Shuster, F. E. Cairns, C. J. McCaskey, George Hall and Bruce Dickey. Mr. Dickey will be inspector of taxation. He was in the consular department of the Philippines eight years and in 1908 became assistant cashier of customs at Manila.

Northwestern Miscellany

Donald W. Mackerchar, vice-president of the First National, after a month in the South, has returned to Minneapolis. He played golf at Augusta, Ga. Clive T. Jaffray, also vice-president, arrived later in the week after chasing similar elusive golf balls.

Pittsburgh

The rate of bookings of orders for finished steel products in the past week showed a slight decrease from preceding weeks and enquiry is not very heavy. There may be no further improvement until the spring opens, when there is always a burst of activity in finished steel products.

February makes a favorable comparison with January in total volume of business done, as the buying was well sustained, at a rate slightly below the rate at the close of January, but at well above the rate at the opening of January. Taking the Steel Corporation and independents together, February bookings probably amounted to about 75% of capacity, with production between 50 and 60% of capacity, but the rate of production at the beginning of March is 65% for the Steel Corporation and from 65 to 85% for the independents, making an average of between 70 and 75%.

The question of Lake Superior ore prices for the coming season is being canvassed with interest. The merchant furnaces are reported by the ore interests to be opposed to any reduction, because they have large stocks of ore and pig iron upon which a reduction in the season price would write a depreciation. The ore interests are of course opposed to a reduction and unless some individual interest breaks loose, an improbable contingency, the 1910 prices will prevail for 1911.

Business generally continues good, as is shown by the exchanges for February at the Pittsburgh Clearing House, which totaled $180,801,659. This is only $4,000,000 less than for February of last year, while it is $29,000,000 greater than for February of 1909.

There was a good deal of activity in bonds, but prices were irregular. One block of \$25,000 Consolidated Gas 5s (Pittsburgh) sold at 94 $\frac{1}{4}$, the first sale in several years and a decline of 5 $\frac{3}{4}$. Independent Brewing 6s continued to sell at 86, the best price in several years, and the same was true of Pittsburgh Brewing 6s at 101 and Jones & Laughlin Steel 5s at 102 $\frac{1}{2}$.

The supply of loanable funds in the Pittsburgh banks and trust companies is materially increased by offerings of country banks through their city correspondents.

Pittsburgh Chapter, American Institute of Banking, tackled a big subject at its meeting last week, and decided it promptly. A debate was held on the subject, "Resolved, That the Pittsburgh Clearing House Association should establish a credit information bureau for the use of the local banks." It was held that competition among the banks is so keen that serious jealousies would result should a bureau be established.

The negative won. The winners were Fred G. Lancaster, of the Keystone National Bank; F. G. Eyler, of the Union National Bank, and M. D. Thomas, of the Commonwealth Trust Company. Those who argued the affirmative side of the question were A. K. King, of the First National Bank of Wilkesburg; Oscar Kapff, of the German National Bank, and W. J. Heyneman, of the East End Savings and Trust Company.

The interesting fact that Pittsburgh has about 30 per cent more banks than Chicago, whose population is much greater, was brought out. Pittsburgh has 105 to Chicago's 68. This large number of banks here was said to be both the cause and effect of the rivalry which exists.

Duquesne National moved on March 6th to its own building, formerly occupied by the Industrial National Bank, absorbed some years ago by First National Bank of Pittsburgh. A great many improvements have been made in the building to meet the needs of the Duquesne.

The Business Monthly for March, issued by the First National Bank of Pittsburgh, is especially valuable to investors interested in local securities, since it gives in succinct form many reports of corporations for the year. There is usual editorial discussion of the monetary and trade situation, with articles on exports, postal savings banks, radium and coal, and other timely subjects.

Three creditors filed a petition in bankruptcy against Daniel H. Stone, Charles H. Stone and Stephen P. Stone, individually and as co-partners, doing business as the Beaver Deposit Bank, a private banking institution of Beaver, Pa.

A mortgage for $7,500,000 has been filed by the Pittsburgh Crucible Steel Company with the Union Trust Company, of Pittsburgh. The mortgage is the amount of contemplated improvements at the Midland plant of the Crucible Steel Company.

Stockholders of the Colonial Trust Company have received a letter from A. D. Robb, secretary, telling of the special meeting on March 16th, and the proposed segregation of the Colonial Trust Company, Columbia National and Germania Savings Bank and the resultant decrease in the capital stock of the company from $4,000,000 to $2,600,000, and a dividend of the stocks of the Columbia and Germania banks. This reduction shall first apply to the capital stock owned and carried in the name of the Freehold Bank, the Columbia National Bank and the Germania Savings Bank, controlled by the Colonial Trust Company, which stock shall be taken over for cancellation at the sum of $200.00 per share, an aggregate of $285,700.00. After the cancellation this stock, the balance of the reduction, shall be divided pro rata among the stockholders in accordance with their respective holdings on March 11, 1911.

There was an advance of $6.75 in Girard National Bank to 347 in Wednesday's auction sales of bank and trust company stocks. There was also a jump of $9.75 in Philadelphia Trust to 570. Other changes included advances of $2.25 in First National Bank to 218, and $2.50 in Fidelity Trust to 926.

W. H. Carpenter, president of the Union National Bank, left on Thursday for Bermuda, where he will recuperate for a month. The recent growth in the business of the bank is attracting notice.

Arrangements are being completed for the tenth annual dinner of the Philadelphia chapter, American Institute of Banking, to be held at the Hotel Walton the evening of March 18th. The banquet committee is composed of Eugene J. Morris, chairman; J. Norman Ball, F. H. Bendig, Jr., J. G. Sonneborn, John C. Frankland, John H. Borden and Charles Osborne.

After a continued period of service of fifty-one years and five months Charles Edmund Pugh, first vice-president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, retired from the service of the company on Tuesday last. He rose from the position of station agent.

Activity in bond trading was the feature of the dealings on the Philadelphia Stock Exchange during the month of February as revealed in the report made public during the week. The total bond sales were $2,090,000 in February, which compared with $2,212,134 in January, a longer month, and $2,036,795 in December. The total exceeded that of any February in the last six years, and compared with $1,536,302 a year ago.

Total clearings through the Clearing House reached $579,840,488, an increase of $12,990,465 over the same month a year ago, or about 2.99 per cent.

This compares with a loss of 5.11 per cent in January from a year ago, with a decline of 10.9 per cent in December, a gain of 2.6 per cent in November, a decline of 0.9 per cent in October, and a decline of 5 per cent in September, when the first decline from the previous year was noted.

The Pennsylvania State Supreme Court on Monday last decided that the $8,000,000 loan ordinance is invalid, upholding the opinion of the lower court. A special election will be held.

The following officers are reported for the banking firm of C. H. Geist Company: C. H. Geist, president; R. W. Griswold, vice-president; and H. A. Long, secretary and treasurer.

R. C. Hodgson is reported cashier of the banking firm of Samuel K. Phillips & Company.

Seven Per Cent Bonds

Spokane and Eastern Trust Company has bought a bond issue of $250,000 bearing 7 per cent interest of the E. H. Stanton Packing Company of Spokane, which has invested more than $600,000 in a packing plant in the eastern part of this city. The bonds become a first mortgage on the property, and are payable at the rate of $50,000 a year beginning in 1912. Two hundred thousand dollars of the bonds have been placed in New York and Chicago.

Northwestern News Notes

Supreme court of the state of Washington handed down a decision on February 28th that the banks at Olympia can not recover from the state the $17,000 which Ortis Hamilton, former adjutant-general, secured to pay his deficiency claims shortly before being arrested on the charge of embezzlement.

J. K. Edmunston, former president of the Walla Walla Savings Bank at Walla Walla, Wash., who was pardoned by Governor Hay recently, has sent another installment of $1,500 to be applied to wiping out the old debts. The money was sent to J. L. Sharpstein of Walla Walla, through a third party who refuses to divulge the whereabouts of Edmunston.

Odessa State Bank and First National Bank of Odessa, Wash., have consolidated under the name of the Union State Bank of Odessa. The paid-up capital is placed at $40,000, and undivided profits $10,000. The officers are: President, George W. Finney; vice-presidents, Joseph Kriegler and W. R. Lesley; cashier, Charles T. Deets; assistant cashiers, Henry W. Rieke and Alfred M. Michaelson; trustees, Oscar F. Minch and J. F. Lauer.

J. E. Ferris, assistant secretary of the Union Trust and Savings Bank of Spokane who has just returned from an extended eastern trip, reports the sale of $225,000 worth of Skagit county bonds, running 20 years at 4½ per cent. He said that the general condition is decidedly conservative, though there is ample money for the right kind of enterprise, adding: "Loans are easy and the bond market has strengthened very noticeably. The general tendency is to discount the political disturbances, and to settle down to a steady year or so of business anyway before the national presidential election."

Reserve Agent for National Banks

The Central State Bank of Des Moines has been granted a temporary injunction restraining holders of several certificates of deposits, secured by E. J. Penfield, missing president of the Bank of Kelley from disposing of them. It is alleged that Penfield collected $5,250 from the institution and $3,200 from the Boone National upon bogus drafts prior to his recent disappearance.

The Commercial Savings has opened for business in Iowa City. The bank was recently organized with a $50,000 capitalization. Henry Negus is president and John Plank is cashier.

Des Moines, March 8.—R. S. Graeber, cashier of the Bank of Sheldahl, has been made receiver for the Bank of Kelley which was forced to close when E. J. Penfield, its president, disappeared. He was named at the request of a committee of five depositors consisting of Carl Rosenfelt, Arthur Freed, George Starr, Anton Reinertson and Nels Ansenon. Proceedings in bankruptcy were also started by depositors of which George Holland, who lost $3,000 was the heaviest loser. The schedule as filed showed 120 depositors who are known to have lost as a result of the bank failure. It has developed that sometime ago a circular was issued in which Henry Banks, father-in-law of Penfield and C. F. Siverly, formerly cashier of the bank claimed to be partners with Penfield. In that case they will be held for the amount of Penfield's shortage. No trace of Penfield has been found except that he was seen in Chicago the Saturday night of his disappearance. By a system of check kiting, Penfield had accumulated a good sized amount of money before he disappeared, according to Des Moines bankers.

Popular Banker Dies

The death of Herme F. Hahnen, chief clerk of Iowa National, was one of the saddest in Des Moines in many days. Hahnen was one of the most popular bank employees in Des Moines. He was 31 years of age and is survived by a wife and two children. The young man was taken to the hospital for an operation for appendicitis. Afterwards, peritonitis set in, he grew rapidly worse and after a game fight, expired. The funeral services were large attended.

Land Business Falls Off

It is not probable that any city in Iowa showed a gain in bank clearings for February as compared with February last year. Des Moines banks fell considerably behind as did also Sioux City. Bankers say that there is not the same activity in the land market this year as last. It is stated that land values were possibly a trifle inflated at that time so that land which was bought then cannot be sold now at a profit. Moreover banks notice a slight falling off in the inclination of farmers to invest in farms this year and as it is farm transfers and papers that usually add to the business of the first of March, it is not difficult to understand the falling off in clearings. Reports from Hampton indicate that the business there March 1st and 2d was the largest ever done in two days. Doubtless this is also true in many of the smaller towns of the state.

Killing of L. L. Hoyt

Iowans were shocked at the murder in Chicago of Leslie L. Hoyt of Manchester, brother of State Senator E. H. Hoyt of Lamont and grandson of the late A. R. Loomis who founded the First National at Manchester. The deceased owned much of the stock in this latter institution. The body was brought to Des Moines by Senator Hoyt and taken to Lamont for burial. Senator Hoyt believes that his brother was slugged by mistake and that a party of men and women who started the fight mistook him for one of their number. Senator Hoyt is a banker at Lamont.

Prepare for Convention

tary, and L. E. Stevens, president of the Century attended a meeting at Mason City Friday at which time arrangements were made for the coming state convention of the association. A tentative list of speakers was selected and from this list the program will be made up. The state convention will be held at Mason City in June.

Sioux City's Honor

The Sioux City national banks were ready for the change when on March 1st, that city was made a reserve center. Numerous banks throughout northwestern Iowa, southeastern South Dakota, southwestern Minnesota and northeastern Nebraska had applied for the privilege of sending their funds to the Sioux City institutions. For instance, the First National of which John McHugh is president had the accounts of 100 institutions in the surrounding territory. The bankers had been preparing for some months for the change from a 15 per cent to a 25 per cent reserve basis. Sioux City bankers have been seeking for years to have that city made a reserve center as they believe it means much to the city from a commercial and financial standpoint.

Interesting Case

An interesting law suit has followed the divorce affairs of Banker Healey of Britt, and his wife, Mrs. Lillie Healey. The latter has been sued for $25,000 for defamation of character by Mrs. Charlotte Rohrback who was prior to her marriage recently, the widow of one Minturn, a railroad division superintendent. Jacob Rohrback, husband of the plaintiff in this suit, has commenced an action for $2,500 against State Senator John Hammill alleging that the latter violated an agreement as regarded a land partnership.

Banker Runs for Mayor

Representative George W. Koontz of Iowa City, the veteran banker and popular member of the lower house in the Iowa legislature for many years has a boom for mayor of Iowa City. His boomlet follows the announcement of the present mayor, Ralph Otto that he will not be a candidate for re-election.

Saturday Night Opening

One of the Davenport newspapers which has been agitating the question of the banks of that city remaining open on Saturday night recently took a Saturday night census of the banks at Moline which remained open from 7 to 8. The census showed that 842 people did business with the four Moline banks that hour. According to the newspaper, the Moline bankers declared that this number was below the average if anything and also stated that the opening at Saturday night had added materially to their deposits.

General News

It is possible that the Central State will be able to start its new building in the spring instead of a year later. This is because some of those now holding leases on the building have given them up. The Postal Telegraph Company is now the only remaining tenant and it is expected to vacate soon.

Mrs. Jane Glick, widow of the late Dr. George Glick, for many years president of the First National at Marshalltown died last week after an illness of long duration. The late Dr.

Glick and his widow had lived in Marshalltown since 1856.

The Farmers Security has been organized at Vincent although articles have not been filed at this writing. T. P. Swansand, owner of a general store at Vincent is the chief mover in the organization.

The Boone State at Boone has filed articles with the secretary of state. The capital stock is $50,000. T. L. Ashford is president; J. H. Rickenberg is vice-president; Archie Patterson is cashier.

The Farmers Savings at Larchwood has amended its articles increasing the capital stock from $10,000 to $25,000.

It is not often that a woman is arrested for forgery but this is the fate that befell Mrs. Jessie Emmert of Dexter who was arrested at Menlo charged with floating a number of small checks. She was preparing to join her husband who had preceded her to South Dakota by a month.

The First National at Sheldon has started the work of remodeling its building. Important changes are planned.

Elmer Schee of Indianola, youngest son of Lewis Schee of the Indianola Banking Company, was married last week in Osceola to Miss Eva E. Evans of that city.

The decree of Judge Dickinson fining A. D. Clarke, formerly an Algona banker $250 for contempt of court, carried with it other conditions. For instance, Clarke is to pay his wife $117,000 in bankable notes and pay her attorney a fee of $10,000; he must pay his own attorneys $15,000. The case grew out of divorce proceedings started by Clarke while his wife was in Nevada. She made a showing that she did not receive proper notice of the suit and secured injunctions preventing Clarke from disposing of certain property. Clarke disregarded the injunction and was haled up for contempt.

The bank at Greenville was destroyed in a fire which did damage of $20,000 to the business section of that city one night last week. The cause of the fire has not been learned.

The Citizens Savings at Waterloo has completed plans for a new three story building which will be one of the finest of many splendid bank buildings in Waterloo.

The State Central of Keokuk has doubled its capital stock and will operate hereafter with a capitalization of $20,000. This is one of the largest increases in capitalization of a state bank in many months.

Among out of the city bankers who have been in Des Moines the past few days are Harry Johnson, assistant cashier of the Cedar Falls National at Cedar Falls who was in Des Moines a guest of his father-in-law, N. W. Beebe, a banker at Hampton and member of the Iowa legislature; Cashier O. Van Horn, Bank of Runnells; Cashier H. J. Holmes, Perry Savings; President P. J. Reideisel, Oto Bank; Cashier W. Carpenter, Lacona Bank; Assistant Cashier J. Buckley, Prairie City Bank; Assistant Cashier A. S. Warren, Bank of Monroe.

OREGON BANKING LAWS

Stricter banking regulations are proposed in the bills before the Oregon state legislature. Oregon has suffered bank failures during recent years which call for more rigid supervision and management. Banking interests are supporting amendments prohibiting branch banks and limiting the capital of new banks to $50,000 within a radius of two miles from Portland postoffice.

Another provision requires directors to make four examinations a year of every loan and investment, with report from the cashier. Two stockholders, not officers, are required to go over the books each year twice and report their finding to the superintendent of banking. In order to prevent an undue multiplication of small banks, minimum capital is fixed at $15,000, based on population, with $100,000 in cities of 100,000 people. A novel feature allows bankers thirty days' notice of withdrawal of sums up to $100, sixty days to $500, ninety days to $1,000, four months to $3,000 and six months to any amount over $3,000. This is intended to prevent runs in times of panic.

BANK OPEN EVENINGS

The Harriman National Bank, New York, successor to the Night and Day Bank, will remain open for business in the evening.

Mrs. J. H. Zornes is completing a building at Lamont, Wash., to be occupied by the Lamont State Bank.

First Trust Company of Moscow, Idaho, has increased its capital stock from $25,000 to $50,000.

SPENCER TRASK & CO. ON THE RATE DECISION

New York, March 6.—Spencer Trask and Company in their March circular ably review the rate decision, a matter of greatest public interest. They say that over-topping in importance any occurrence in the month just passed, and over-shadowing in its influence all other decisions of recent date, was the pronouncement of the interstate commerce commission on the railroad rate case. A decision at least partially favorable to the railroads had been so generally, even so confidently, expected, that it was no longer a question in the minds of most men as to whether the commission would decide in favor of the shippers or the railroads, but whether the railroads would be allowed to increase their rates to the extent of 50 or 60 or 75 per cent of their demands. Consequently, when the ruling of the commission was announced, the London and New York Exchanges witnessed one of the most violent breaks in the stock market that has been seen in many months. The dust caused by the explosion still is in the air and prevents a clear insight into the future effects, but for our part we believe that the decision will have no lasting ill effects on the transportation companies, and that it may even prove of benefit as it will furnish a strong argument against any demand of labor for higher wages, and even may have forestalled a movement for a reduction in rates. The fact too that the commission after exhaustive examination claims to have found the railroads in such strong shape as to make additional revenues through freight advances unnecessary, is likely to be construed as a bull argument, and even may facilitate the placing of important loans, particularly abroad, where the decision appears to have made a favorable impression. Moreover it should be remembered that the decision does not effectually close the door to increases in the future, if such should be found imperative, but merely puts it up to the railroads to prove that such increases would be necessary for the "security and lasting value of legitimate investment and an adequate return upon the value" of the properties, to quote a passage from the decision itself.

There has not yet been time for the railroads to decide on any definite policy, but the opinion generally is held that they will let matters rest as they are, at least for a time, leaving future results to shape the course of action that should be taken. The Pennsylvania is reported to have expressed itself as prepared to bow to the decision, and while some companies less favorably placed financially may make a certain show of fight we still believe the situation will be given a chance to work itself out.

In the meantime the decision has cast a chill, which it is hoped may prove only temporary, over the steel situation, and also has reflected itself in a hesitation on the part of the railroads to increase their commitments for equipment. While this of course is unfortunate, a hand to mouth policy may nevertheless not be altogether a bad thing, as it will further tend to liquidate the economic position of the country. We are viewing with gratification the gradual improvement in the business world along lines which we consider distinctly sane and which should eventually make for a much healthier condition of affairs. Stocks have been liquidated, money is easy, commodity prices are on a more normal level and continue to tend downward, while labor has now less cause than ever to make disturbing demands.

Thus, fundamental conditions are improving in different directions. We do not, however, wish to appear as looking upon the present as a good time to load up with stocks in anticipation of a bull period. The very fact that the unexpected rate decision caused a heavy fall in prices, should of itself make the market more cautious in accepting the cut and dried view that the decision of the supreme court on the Standard Oil and American Tobacco cases will be unfavorable to the companies while at the same time pointing out how they may continue to operate without contravening the law. It is better to be cautious before than after the event. The judges of the court at present are going over the briefs and arguments of these cases, and a decision may, therefore, be expected on any Monday.

Another event of importance to the railroad world, which may also properly be referred to as having occurred in February, has been the practical resignation of George Gould from the direction of the roads which have been so long associated with his name. For many years it has been felt that the position of these lines lent a feeling of security to the railroad situation in the Middle West, and now that strong financial banking interests have obtained control, the eventual prosperity of what was formerly known as the Gould system appears more assured.

HOW TO LIVE IN A COUNTRY HOME

The Outing Publishing Company of New York for nearly thirty years has conducted America's premiere Outing Magazine and has produced in that time a host of out-door books. These publications are looked upon as authority and cover the entire out-door realm from back yard gardening to aviation. There are books upon fishing, hunting, golfing, college sports, the country home, sailing, automobilism, dogs and horses. The latest and most interesting volume to come from this enterprising publishing company is "How to Live in the Country," by E. P. Powell. This work is written from the author's own experience and is intended to teach you how to obtain both happiness and profit from country living. He does not deal with the country estate calling for large grounds and enormous outlay but rather with the place of small acreage including the garden, the orchard, the lawn, the house, the stable, and all of its animal life. His purpose really is to tell how to create a real country home,—one in which a man may live happily and in comfort, and which will even produce a revenue. Mr. Powell's religion is to keep more boys from straying away from the farm to engage in work in factories and in the deadening city life.

The following topics and chapter heads will give a fair idea of the subjects covered in "How to Live in the Country." They are: Finding the Place; First Steps Towards the Home; Building the House; Making the Gardens; Planning for Beauty in Lawns and Shrubbery; Our Rivals and Our Allies; Orchard Making; Fixing and Improving the Soil; Animal Training in the Country Home; Fine Arts of a Country Home; Can we Make it Pay?; and the Social Side of Country Life. There are nearly twenty full page illustrations and the volume is well written, and beautifully printed and bound. Wherever the author has not been able to place his subject before his reader to his complete satisfaction by use of the text, pictures have been employed. The volume contains three hundred pages and retails for $1.75. It is an enjoyable, practical, and helpful book.

BANK CASHIER IS ARRESTED

Oklahoma City, Okla., March 8.—A. E. Folsom, formerly cashier of a Canadian (Okla.) bank, was arrested here to-day charged with forging the name of A. U. Thomas, a McAlester banker, to paper involving several thousand dollars. Most of the alleged bogus paper is said to have been cashed at Houston and Galveston, Texas.

SOMETHING FOR YOU TO THINK ABOUT

To the Editor: The recent published interview of Mr. Spreckels with Mr. Bryan (published in the Lincoln, Neb., papers) is highly significant. Perhaps some Lincoln property owners and business men were startled by Mr. Spreckels' veiled hint at coming revolution and his declaration that experience has caused him to doubt somewhat the efficacy of the ballot as a remedy to lessen the growing antagonism between the rich and the poor. Those who may think Mr. Spreckels too radical should read the recent predictions, of Ohio C. Barber, organizer of the match trust, and the writings of Harold Bolce and Prof. George D. Herron. It should be borne in mind that Mr. Spreckels' message is primarily intended as a warning from a rich man to all owners of property, whether rich or of moderate means.

I believe Mr. Spreckels did not touch upon a phase of the economic and labor situation that is being quietly discussed among the big financiers of the East, and that is the relation of the liquor traffic to the rapidly increasing antagonism between those who have and those who have not. The belief is gaining ground in financial and business circles that the safety of money and property requires that the liquor traffic shall be suppressed as an act of social and police necessity. The reason is that the saloon creates conditions which make too many extreme radicals. Complaint is made that many people who investigate the saloon-made slums come out socialists at heart, whereas with the saloon and its slums abolished their attention would not be so much drawn to economic questions. It is also stated that the railroads and other big corporations have learned that the drinking men among their employees cause them the most trouble. Some financiers declare that the saloon alone is responsible for at least two-thirds of the "horrible examples" held up to the public gaze by socialists and radicals, and that were the liquor traffic abolished and the immense sums now spent for liquor by the working class invested in better food, better clothes and better housing conditions, the number of agitators would be materially reduced. It was reported from Milwaukee some time ago that the wealthy Pabst family, seeing a storm coming, were disposing of their brewery stocks and investing in land.

Do the property owners, the business men and the retired farmers of Lincoln, who hope to spend their days in peace and quietness, want to add to that crowd of saloon-made, desperate have-nots which the historian Macaulay declared will certainly ravage the United States in the twentieth century? If they do they will vote for twenty-five saloons at the coming election. "If any man leadeth into bondage, into bondage he goeth," the Bible declares.

ALWAYS PAYS TO ADVERTISE

Binghamton, N. Y., March 6.—Last Saturday nearly all the merchants by agreement gave up their regular advertising space in the newspapers to the city ministerial association, which filled the papers with display advertising urging the public to attend church. As a result every church was filled to overflowing yesterday.

MAY ENTER INSURANCE FIELD

Tacoma, Wash., March 8.—The Teats' employers' liability bill, which provides that Washington shall engage in the casualty insurance business on a large scale, passed the legislature last night and awaits only the governor's signature to become a law. Supporters of the bill had a bare majority. Teats' bill provides that every class of industry in the state shall pay into the state fund an annual tax supposed to be proportionate to the hazard of industry. The funds thus created will be administered by a commission of three appointed by the governor. Injured employees and families of employees killed at work are to be compensated according to a fixed schedule specified by law. For death or total disability $4,000 will be paid.

The tendency of foreign exchange during the last few days has been upward, with the exception of francs, which have been weaker. The quotations are as follows: Bankers' demand sterling, 4.86 $\frac{3}{8}$; bankers' 60 days sterling, 4.84 $\frac{1}{8}$; bankers' check francs, 5.19 $\frac{3}{8}$ less $\frac{1}{16}$; bankers' 60 days francs, 5.21 $\frac{7}{8}$; bankers' check marks, 95 $\frac{1}{8}$ less 1-32; bankers' 60 days marks, 94 9-16.

Wheat Erratic

Wheat prices have been erratic this week. There was an advance of 4 cents from the low price of last week, May option going to 92 and July to 90. There has been some decline from these figures.

Estimates of the crop reporting board on the quantity of wheat on farms March 1, 1911, are about 179,690,000 bushels, or 25.8 per cent of the 1910 crop on farms, against 173,344,000 bushels, or 23.5 per cent of the 1909 crop on farms March 1, 1910, and 154,031,000 bushels, or 23.3 per cent, the average for the past ten years.

Reserves of corn and oats also are unusually large.

With the publication of these statistics speculators are in a better position than formerly to make up their minds about the future of grain.

Oliver C. Fuller, president of the Wisconsin Trust Company, returned to Milwaukee, Wednesday, after a three weeks absence spent in Florida.

FAMOUS HOTEL IS SOLD

The sale of the Briggs House, which had been pending for the last two weeks, was closed yesterday, the purchaser being Albert H. Loeb, vice-president of Sears, Roebuck and Company, who acquired the property for $500,000.

William Briggs erected the building in 1851, and at that time it was the largest and most pretentious hotel structure west of the Alleghany Mountains. It housed a number of the great men of the country and Lincoln's first campaign for the presidency was conducted from it. The property has been held by the same family for nearly three-quarters of a century. The original building was destroyed by the fire of 1871, after which the present hotel was erected.

face of things. Many of the so-called public questions are really personal responsibilities, to be quite honest about it. It isn't quite honest to shift too much of the white man's burden onto the overweighted shoulders of the public.

H. H. COPELAND AND SON, New York, has sent out a specimen sheet of "Comparative Analysis of Railroad Reports" which has been prepared for distribution among railroad officials, investors, banking institutions, etc. The complete work consists of similar treatment of 150 railroads, territorially grouped, and combined average statistics on these roads, in ten groups, covering 215,000 miles. The analyses show thoroughly the physical condition of each road, its financial position, earning power, and operating efficiency. The work permits of easy comparison between one road and another and is a complete and enlarged presentation in entirely new form of information derived from official reports. It makes easy judgment of the position of any property in a manner to be of the greatest usefulness to anyone interested in railroad operations and investment values.

WE are told by a high authority in accounting that this is about the best ever. Copeland & Co. will forward particulars to those interested.

"HOW TO LIVE IN THE COUNTRY" is a very valuable book by the Outing Publishing Company, New York. Maybe you think you know how. You lucky d—ls who are doing it, get the book at $1.75 net and increase your dividends.

OH, yes! The West has been slighted. Vanderlip didn't bring his yellow flannel dress suit along.

WH. HUNTER, JR., treasurer and general manager of the Hunter Canal Company, has been elected a member of the board of directors of The Bank of Abbeville, La., to replace F. L. Melebeck, resigned.

HARRY YEAGER, assistant cashier of the First National of Lewiston, Montana, and secretary of the Montana Bankers Association, spent a few hours in Chicago last week. He was en route to Washington on some matter of state. He is a member of the executive council of the American Bankers Association and will go to Nashville in the big Chicago special on April 29th.

EDWARD D. KEYS, president of the Farmers National, Springfield, writes: "I enjoy having THE CHICAGO BANKER before me, as it is interesting, newsy, and reliable. It is at all times full of valuable information to the up to date banker."

AT a meeting of Chicago advertising men at the LaSalle Hotel, recently, J. R. Summerville, a New York advertising man, delivered an address in which he stated that the banks were the slowest of American institutions to awaken to the real value of advertising to create business. Further he said:

"ALL banks advertise more or less, but few of them receive full value from the money they expend. A bank will spend hundreds of dollars each year on advertising space and then fill the space with a mere card, the name of the bank, and a list of directors. By this method of advertising they do not receive full value of their money. If the same space was filled with good financial copy, the banks would soon find that advertising is not an expense but an investment that will yield better returns than probably any banking investment they can make. It is learned from the last treasury reports, that the banks which have advertised judiciously show the largest gain in deposits."

ON the subject of advertising in financial and banking journals, Mr. Summerville said, "The banks do not realize the value of the financial journals in advertising. A bank may increase its outside business wonderfully by using space in the financial journals. This fact has been demonstrated many times. It is noticeable that the banks which do the largest outside business are the most consistent advertisers in the financial journals."

"THE FINANCIAL REVIEW," the valuable annual statistical review published by the Commercial and Financial Chronicle, and so highly prized by bankers and financiers, is being distributed by Pliny Bartlett, western manager.

FROM the manager of a big guaranty and surety company we have the following: "I note that in your March 4th edition you call to attention the fact that there is an alleged shortage of $52,000 at the Bank of Kelley, Kelley, Iowa, owing to the fact that E. J. Penfield, president of the bank has absconded. You go on to say Iowa should get wise to what has been done in Alabama in the line of a new banking law, and her secretary would not be compelled to send out so many notices of the above nature."

FURTHER the letter states: "I would rather desire to call to attention the fact that if the president of the Bank of Kelley had been covered by a bond by a good, reliable surety company, the depositors would, in this instance, have no cause for anxiety. It is astonishing how few private banks hold their employees and officials under bond."

NOT so sure about that? If the Bank of Kelley had been incorporated with a board of directors and other officials to collect the bond and offer the money, what our insurance friend says, would be true. In a private bank it is different. When the private pockets the money, puts on his hat and walks out that's the end of it.

PENFIELD who went so far as to hang up a clothing store for the price of a new suit with which to make his "get-away" would have looked upon money spent for bond premiums as wasted. Men who are honest rarely feel inclined to insure that quality. The other kind look upon money so spent as merely making it harder to get away when the time comes.

WE ask our contributor how he would like to issue guaranty bonds on such bankers as Penfield.

TELLS OF HANCOCK'S PROGRESS

C. D. Hanchett, secretary of Northern Michigan Building and Loan Association, of Hancock, was a visitor at Fort Dearborn National recently. Mr. Hanchett thinks there is no other town of its size that can equal Hancock, and he gave his Chicago friends a graphic picture of its rapid growth.

NEW INSURANCE INDUSTRY FOR CHICAGO

Present plans are for the incorporation directly by the Illinois legislature of a company to engage in investment insurance. Those mentioned in connection with the matter are prominent, including the president of one of Chicago's leading national banks. The head office is to be located in Chicago. The methods of the new insurance body will be similar to that of the London Lloyds, except that it will handle only safe, ordinary loan and mortgage business ventures, while the London Lloyds will insure a client against anything.

According to those who have studied the situation, the small investor will be benefited more than the big financiers by the insurance scheme. Although the new business contemplates the handling of every class of insurance investment, it is pointed out that the man who has not facilities for making investigations on his own account is the one who will be saved from possible loss of savings through the proposed policies.

The object of the plan, as set forth in the bill, is:

"For the purpose of guaranteeing, in whole or in part, the payment of the principal and interest of notes, bonds or other indebtedness secured by mortgages or trust deeds upon real estate, or guaranteeing the performance of the covenants of agreement contained in such mortgages or trust deeds."

It is provided that the policy-holders shall be protected by the deposit with the auditor of public accounts of $50,000 in United States or Illinois bonds, or, in counties like Cook, where the population is more than 100,000, the deposit shall be of $100,000 worth of such bonds.

Upon the approval of the bonds deposited by the insuring corporation a certificate of authority is issued to the corporation, to remain in force only as long as this deposit is approved.

In counties where the population is more than 100,000 it is provided that the insuring corporation must have a fully paid up capital of not less than $500,000. It is expected that the new corporation—the first to do business under the proposed legislation—will be capitalized at about twice this figure.

PENNSYLVANIA'S EARNINGS

The Pennsylvania railroad's report for 1910 shows a small fraction over 9 per cent earned on the stock, as compared with almost 11 per cent the year before. Gross earnings increased $10,800,000, or about 7 per cent, but net earnings were less by $2,000,000, or more than 4 per cent.

On account of the retirement of $80,000,000 of debt with the proceeds of a stock sale near the end of 1909 and the conversion of bonds on a large scale about the same time, the interest charges were the lowest in a number of years and the surplus for dividends and improvements correspondingly greater, but it is to be noted that throughout the year upward of $100,000,000 more stockholders' money was employed in the business than the year before.

ALLIS-CHALMERS IS PROSPEROUS

Bookings of the Allis-Chalmers Company in February were almost double the record in January and with few exceptions were larger than in any previous month in its history. From August last to January, inclusive, new business averaged about 50 per cent less than in the corresponding previous period, but for the month just closed the record was approximately 50 per cent better than in 1910.

Operations at the company's plants now average about 60 per cent of capacity, which owing to extensions made during the last three years is equal to between 75 per cent and 80 per cent of what was formerly considered normal.

Banking Opinion

"There is an aggressive commercial spirit in the principal European countries and this period of idle money and low rates of interest will quickly pass," declared William T. Fenton on Wednesday.

"The universal desire for trade expansion supplants war sentiment. There is no disposition anywhere for war, although it is always possible for some overt act of individuals to precipitate a conflict. Influential capitalists in all the leading European countries are decidedly in favor of a peace policy. Were it otherwise money would be higher and the grain trade would be more active."

Mr. Fenton has just returned from a sojourn of a couple of months in Europe and is again at his desk in the National Bank of the Republic. While abroad he had a good opportunity to gain information respecting political and financial affairs, particularly in England, as most of his time was spent in London.

Mr. Fenton saw enough of German life, however, to make him realize more clearly than ever before that there is vast and substantial prosperity in that empire also. Tariff sentiment remains strong in Germany, where the theory of protection is credited with contributing largely to the country's progress. Belief in the wisdom of a protective policy is spreading in England also, Mr. Fenton was informed.

"The amount of building that is going on in the cities of England and Germany is surprising," he said to a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER. "That feature is keeping pace with the general development of trade, which is almost beyond belief. With the improvement in business there is an advance in wages, so that the condition of the laboring element is better than ever before."

"Higher wages are absolutely necessary on account of the increased cost of living, but the commerce and manufacturing of such nations as England and Germany are so widely extended and so diverse that labor is almost fully employed. With a growing trade and an abundance of capital those countries cannot be other than prosperous. There is a very optimistic feeling among business men."

"Conditions are just right for bringing all the idle capital into use and I look for a higher money market in the near future. For the present there is a good demand for American securities that return not less than four per cent. That will continue as long as money is easy. Europeans are well posted as to the reliability of our bonds and stocks and there is no difficulty whatever in placing gilt-edge securities abroad. France is investing rather more liberally than other countries because she has more capital that can be spared from business channels. The cost of labor has advanced so rapidly in France that it has checked manufacturing."

"There is a friendly feeling toward the United States in the countries of Europe. All are hoping for a speedy settlement of the Mexican troubles so that investors will be safe. The general disposition is to keep hands off and let the United States deal with the situation so far as it requires outside attention."

Mr. Fenton looks for a gradual improvement in business here.

WILLIAM T. FENTON
Chicago, Illinois

Mr. Fenton, who says commercial spirit in Europe is so aggressive as to supplant war sentiment, is widely known as vice-president of National Bank of the Republic, Chicago. He is a student and traveler as well as a banker. He has long been recognized as a close observer of public affairs and his views are much sought after. In his opinion the cheap money period is passing.

J. S. AISTHORPE
Cairo, Illinois

Mr. Aisthorpe is the head of the First Bank and Trust Co. at Cairo, Ill., a fine public speaker and a leader in the Illinois Banker Association. He has been chosen its historian and has gone to work earnestly. In Cairo he is known as a progressive in civic affairs and as a conservative in banking. Bank supervision and inspection is part of his financial religion.

Money Firmer

Chicago bankers report a firmer money market this week, with counter business mostly at 5 per cent. The market may be quoted 5 to 5½ with an improving tendency. Real estate loans have become an unusually important factor and the quotation ranges from 5 to 6 per cent. The larger employment of capital now visible is expected to cut down the supply of idle money.

INTERIOR BANKERS BUSY

That the early activity in agricultural affairs is responsible for an improvement in the money market is the opinion of Cashier Frank Heflebower of State Bank of Sterling, who was a visitor at LaSalle Street National in Chicago the forepart of the week. Sterling bankers have a large program on their hands, but it is one that means prosperity for the whole community, Mr. Heflebower explained to Cashier Fox. Sterling is the center of large livestock and grain interests and uses capital more extensively than almost any other town of its size in Illinois during the farming season.

CAN'T KEEP A GOOD MAN DOWN

Harry Yaeger, who has just been appointed national bank examiner for Montana, is an old personal friend of J. Fletcher Farrell, vice-president of Fort Dearborn National. Mr. Yaeger was a visitor in Chicago the fore part of the week. His friends here are greatly pleased to learn of his government appointment.

Wheat Steady

The wheat market has had fair activity this week and prices have been steady. May has ranged from 90 to 92 cents and July 88 to 90. Reports as to crop conditions and consumptive demand are mixed.

An attempt was made on the part of Northwestern traders to stir up a demand for wheat because of dry weather in a part of the spring wheat country. Minneapolis prices were strong for some time because of this and the effect was strengthening here. The Northwest news lost its influence later because of the favorable reports from the winter wheat country, which was of more immediate concern.

Corn has been steady around 50 cents for May, with July less than 1 cent higher.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE LOWER

The Foreign Exchange market is lower for sterling owing to easier discount rates in London as well as the placing of American securities abroad, while marks and francs have remained practically stationary owing to corresponding drop in sterling in France and Germany, where private discount rates have advanced from 2¼ to 2¾ and from 3¼ to 3½ per cent respectively, as compared with a week ago. Quotations follow: Bankers' demand sterling, 4.86¼; Bankers' demand 60 d. sterling, 4.84; Bankers' demand francs, 5.19¾-1-16; Bankers' demand 60 d. francs, 5.21¾; Bankers' demand marks, 95 1-16; Bankers' demand 60 d. marks, 94½.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

NEW YORK BANKERS ASSOCIATION will hold its 1911 convention at Manhattan Beach, June 22d and 23d. Headquarters will be at the Oriental Hotel and Secretary W. J. Henry informs us that a very large attendance is anticipated. Bankers will do well to make early reservations. This can be done through Mr. Henry, who has a permanent headquarters at 11 Pine Street, next door to the American Bankers Association.

C. G. HEMINGWAY has been appointed an assistant cashier for the National Newark (N. J.) Banking Company. This bank under the presidency of D. H. Merritt is making great headway.

NATIONAL STOCK YARDS NATIONAL at National Stock Yards, Illinois, reports for March 7th deposits of three and one quarter millions. President Wright of this institutions sends out an attractive folder offering "efficient service and exceptional facilities" to all who transact business at that great live stock market. It takes good service to build up such an enormous business in a restricted field.

FARMERS NATIONAL at Pekin, Illinois, reports one million, one hundred thousand in deposits. The total resources are close to one and one-half millions, based on a capital of one hundred thousand dollars with one hundred thousand dollars surplus. This bank has been appointed a United States postal savings depository and is very proud of this preferment.

ST. ELMO LEWIS has been engaged by the Caxton Magazine, published at Pittsfield, Mass., to write a series of twelve articles on "The New Gospel of Efficiency." This series will begin in the March number and many are expecting that Mr. Lewis will include in his "New Gospel of Efficiency" a great deal about his old gospel of publicity. Mr. Lewis is the gentleman who put the Burroughs adding machine on a pinnacle and kept it there.

MILWAUKEE'S big First National has reached within a stone's throw of twenty millions in deposits. This modernly managed institution has two millions capital, a half million surplus, and almost an equal amount in undivided profits. It reports also "a special guaranty fund" of one hundred twelve thousand dollars.

NORTHERN TRUST COMPANY BANK, Chicago, comes within sixty thousand dollars of having exactly the same amount in demand deposits that it has in time deposits. Together these sums total more than thirty-one millions. Conservatism is the keynote at this institution.

FIRST NATIONAL of Englewood reports three million, three hundred forty thousand in deposits, showing its usual gain between calls. This bank has worked up a large local business by means of carefully written circulars. Recently a big hit was made with "A Better Way to Pay Bills." This circular was intended to teach housewives how much better, safer, and more economical as well as easier it is to pay bills by check instead of chasing around with the cash.

FIRST NATIONAL of Chicago and the First Trust and Savings report combined deposits of over one hundred sixty-eight million dollars. The total resources of these allied institutions have about reached the two hundred million mark.

C. H. KRENZ, who for the past twelve years has been associated with Finley Barrell and Company, of this city, has accepted an important station with Ware and Leland, a well-known and long established commission house located in the Royal Insurance Building. This firm maintains membership upon all the exchanges, has its own private wires, and is well equipped for handling business in all the markets.

WISCONSIN NATIONAL of Milwaukee shows deposits of nearly eighteen millions. This bank for a long time has made it a special point to bring up its Milwaukee and Northwest collection department to the highest efficiency. Prompt and careful attention has been the policy which brought about this result.

NATIONAL CITY BANK of Chicago in its March letter deals with the interstate commerce commission's decision in the freight matter. It notes the fact also that the public is paying very little attention at present to the stock market and that reciprocity with Canada should become a part of the business religion of every loyal American. This circular may be had free of charge by anyone who will apply for it.

MECANICS-AMERICAN, St. Louis, reports deposits of $34,302,687.98. Its capital and surplus run to five millions. The bank has made it a practice to be "prepared to furnish every proper banking facility." J. S. Calfee, who puts out the new business literature, has a sense of good English and fine printing at the same time. They do not go together always.

FIRST NATIONAL and the First Trust, of St. Joseph, Mo., show up with a joint deposit account of $5,153,158.03. R. T. Forbes, formerly of Chicago, is the dual president.

OMAHA NATIONAL is above twelve millions for March 7th. It is in its splendid new home at Seventeenth and Farnam streets. J. H. Millard is president and J. DeF. Richards, cashier.

MARINE NATIONAL, Milwaukee, has only a few thousand to go to be able to report six millions in deposits. This bank makes a hobby of giving prompt and careful attention to all matters entrusted to it.

O. J. BOHMAN and others at Moline are taking steps to organize a chapter of the Institute of American Banking. Mr. Bohman is with the Moline Trust and Savings.

DAILY BANKER, New York, affectionately known as "the rag" in the inner circle, has been reduced in size. Several other ways in which its publisher might earn public gratitude could be mentioned.

LAKE VIEW STATE BANK, capital $200,000, will be opened in about a month at 3160-2 North Clark Street, taking over the business of the North Shore Exchange Bank. Stock will be issued at par, the institution starting without surplus. Directors have been elected as follows: Edward Lindsten, Peter J. Plantin, J. E. Olson, Edward D. McCabe, H. H. Newell, William J. Van Buskirk, Peter P. Hauber, James A. Smith and George W. McCabe, who will probably be elected president.

PLANS are being rapidly settled for a banquet to be given by the trust companies of the United States under the auspices of the trust company section, American Bankers Association, to be held at the Waldorf-Astoria on May 5th, when members of the executive committee will have returned from the Nashville meeting of the council. Full details will be sent to all members of the section.

BURNS NATIONAL, St. Joseph, Mo., shows resources of over three millions at last call.

LIVE STOCK NATIONAL, South Omaha, only organized December 9, 1907, has come up steadily and now shows over a million in deposits. This is a gain of $300,000 in the two months. C. F. McGrew is president and L. M. Lord cashier.

FIRST NATIONAL, Marquette, shows $1,900,962.57 in deposits.

OHIO has more trouble. This time it is a shower of forged "time checks" on a big manufacturing concern at Hamilton, Red-faced man with blue eyes is circulating them.

IF you are not familiar with the directors' list for the Bankers Trust, New York, just look over the names. The dailies would refer to them as "w. k. bankers" and in full justice to that much abused phrase. Surely a superior list of "all bankers" could not be named.

DEPOSITS of the Mercantile Trust, St. Louis, divide almost equally between "time" and "demand." The total is well over twenty-one millions and the deposits of the Mercantile National have passed six millions. President Wade of the allied institutions is a national figure.

FROM a good banker, good fellow and ex-member of the council the Chicago Banker has a letter taking issue with the proposal to right a wrong by restoring the name of Frank G. Bigelow to the A. B. A. records where it belongs. Following is the communication in full:

"LAST number of THE CHICAGO BANKER is before me, and as usual has much of general and special interest in it. Yet how you can make the Bigelow plea in the face of the facts

Foreign View of Aldrich Plan

Sir R. H. Inglis Palgrave, an English authority, reviews the central reserve association proposal with approval. Compares world's banking systems

London, March 10.—When we become aware that there were 22,491 separate banks in the United States and their island possessions on April 28, 1909—the last time that an official enumeration of their number was made which has reached this country—that they have increased since, and that they include many different descriptions of banks, as national, state, savings and private banks, loan and trust companies—formed under different laws and possessing different powers—we may well understand how great the need for a solid and well-planned centre for such an organization must be.

A great and lengthy enquiry was accordingly made by the National Monetary Commission of the United States to collect all available information on the subject.

There have in times past been many investigations into the monetary conditions of the great countries of the world. From the report of the bullion committee, printed in 1810 onwards, both our houses of parliament have made many enquiries into important matters connected with the subject. The great French Enquête sur les Principes et les Faits Généraux qui régissent la circulation monétaire et fiduciaire held at the request of the Conseil Supérieur de l'Agriculture, du Commerce et de l'Industrie commenced its investigations on February 7, 1865, and continued to December 28, 1868. The history of their labors fills six solid quarto volumes. They received information from 119 French chambers of commerce, besides associations representative of arts and manufacturers in that country and representatives of foreign chambers of commerce from England, Holland, Switzerland and Austria. They examined 137 witnesses, including among their own countrymen such economists as Léon Say, statesmen as Thiers, representatives of the Bank of France and the principal bankers of Paris, as M. Fremy who was at that time governor of the Crédit Foncier de France. Among English authorities such men as Walter Bagehot, William Newmarch, Thomson Hankey, governor at that time of the Bank of England, Charles Gairdner, of the Union Bank of Scotland, John Stuart Mill and many other well-known men. The analytical statement of the contents alone extends over 126 pages, but for amount of work and information collected, the labors of the national monetary commission of the United States exceeds all its predecessors, both in quantity and in value, even the great French enquiry we have described. The list of the publications issued by it, and in preparation alone forms a pamphlet of more than thirty pages. The energy of Senator N. W. Aldrich dominated and inspired the work, and the Hon. A. Piatt Andrew, now the assistant secretary of the treasury, has been of great service in arranging and co-ordinating the work of the commission.

In time we shall know more distinctly what plan it is proposed to follow. Meanwhile some useful information will be found in a supplement to the Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science published January, 1911. This contains addresses by Senator Aldrich, the Hon. Senator Theodore Burton, the Hon. Piatt Andrew, and the Hon. George Roberts, director of the United States mint. The meeting was organized and directed by Dr. Rowe, president of the University of Pennsylvania. In his address on this occasion, Senator Aldrich pointed out the necessity of a "more complete reorganization, a more thorough association of the banks of the country," and while he completely recognized the useful functions of the clearing houses in the United States (of which we may say in passing that they are much more powerful bodies than the clearing house of this country), he pointed out that their "beneficial results have been local and not general in their character," and that what was wanted at the present time was "an organization that will, as far as possible, insure reasonableness and steadiness of rates of discount throughout the country; that will prevent the possibility of bank suspensions in the future; that will extend to a bank in any part of the country, under proper circumstances, facilities which will enable it to afford relief at all times to those who are entitled to credit. It must provide against any possible disruption of domestic exchanges. It must be an organization which will have both the power and the purpose to maintain at all times, under all circumstances, the credit of the great people whose interests it is bound to serve."

We trust Senator Aldrich may be able to carry out this important undertaking. The work, if efficiently carried out, will be of the greatest service not only to the finance of the United States, but of Europe and the whole civilized world. Europe will be spared, and we shall be spared such troubles as those which reached us in 1907, when bank rate here was high during the whole of the autumn, culminating in 7 per cent on November the 7th of that year, a rise which was entirely unconnected with any requirements of British business, and inflicted great injury on the trade of our country.

Since delivering his address to the American Academy, Senator Aldrich has filled out more fully the outline of the scheme he proposes. Although it must be doubtful whether a plan so full of detail, affecting so many interests and so wide-reaching in its influence, will be carried out exactly as is suggested, yet the importance of the subject is so great, and—as we have mentioned—its influence on the finance of Europe and on our own market may be so powerful that we do not hesitate to put before our countrymen the first idea we can of a proposal which, no doubt, will lead eventually to a great reform. The times call, indeed, for a great effort. The financial arrangements of the United States are in such condition that, in a time of excitement and panic, it is impossible that business should be conducted on strictly legal principles, or without a crisis which may have a very serious effect on the commerce and industry of other countries including our own.

As an instance of what this means we may refer to our own article in the London Bankers' Magazine of November, 1908, on the American crisis of 1907, in which it was shown that, in the great panic of that year, the unauthorized "emergency currency" of the country amounted to upwards of the enormous sum of £100,000,000, the whole of which was subsequently paid, as we understand, without the loss of a single dollar. That such an extraordinary outburst should take place, and that the existing financial powers should be able to give little or no assistance to those who were brought into trouble through no fault of their own is not a credit to the laws of any country, but that the monetary arrangements made on the spur of the moment should have fulfilled every requirement of a sound legal currency and been afterwards taken up without any loss to the holders is a real triumph for the banks of the United States. The necessity for establishing the national monetary commission was the natural result, and the valuable information which has been collected will be of the utmost service in arranging the system which will be required. The inspiration of the idea was, as we have said, the work of Senator Aldrich.

There have already been two public banks of the United States. The first was a vital part of the scheme for the support of national credit proposed by Alexander Hamilton, secretary of the treasury in his time. It was incorporated in 1791 with a capital of $10,000,000. It issued notes, but did not publish regular reports. The scantiness of information relating to this bank is remarkable. Two of the reports made to the treasury department in 1809 and 1811 are all that have been discovered. The charter ran out in 1811; it was not renewed, and the bank came to an end.

"The embarrassments of the money market in less than three years after the dissolution of the first United States Bank in 1811 revived a demand for the establishment of a similar institution." The second bank of the United States was accordingly authorized in April, 1816. It had a charter for 20 years, but the institution was destroyed by the enmity of President Andrew Jackson, who "suspended the deposit of public money in its custody," and who gave his veto to the bill "to modify and continue" the act of incorporation of that bank in 1832. The federal charter of the bank expired in 1836. The bank continued its business under a charter obtained by President Nicholas Biddle from the state of Pennsylvania, but without success, and in 1841 it went into liquidation. The memory of trouble which these two banks have left, combined with the dread of a centralized financial authority, is still strong in the United States. This feeling is probably the reason which has caused Senator Aldrich to consider it unadvisable to give the institution he proposes to found even the designation of a "Bank." It is obvious that a strong bank like the Bank of England, the Bank of France, the Imperial Bank of Germany, or the "state" banks which exist in other countries of the civilized world would be of the greatest service to the financial business of the United States, provided it kept clear of being dominated by any individual interest. But the desire to avoid opening up a dangerous controversy apparently has had great influence with Senator Aldrich, and he proposes to give the name of a "Reserve Association" to the institution which he wishes to found.

There are three different bodies which are to be welded together in it. These are described as local associations, branches, and the reserve association. The local associations are to consist of national banks which are to be continued with some changes in their constitution—for instance, their note issue is to drop, but they are to be shareholders in the reserve association. Each subscribing bank is to be a member of an association, and the directorate of the association will be composed of representatives of the banks concerned. The functions of the local associations are, we understand, to be of great importance. "It rests with them to guarantee commercial paper presented by the constituent banks, and to act really as the hinge on which the whole discount business of the new organization turns." Thus these functions will in a great degree be similar to the agencies (country offices) of the Bank of Belgium. As we have nothing analogous to these bodies in English banking, a few words here describing their operations will be of service. The agencies of the Bank of Belgium are carried on by private partnerships—Sociétés en nom collectif—the liability of each partner being unlimited. They are responsible for the due payment of the bills which they discount, and they do a large business. Thus, during the year 1909, they discounted collectively 2,408,589 bills for an amount of more than £55,000,000. The managers of the country offices of the Bank of Belgium are paid by a share of rather more than a quarter of the discount which the bank receives, while the fact that they are responsible for the due payment of all bills with which they deal, makes them extremely cautious as to the business which they undertake, and renders the bank itself safe from any loss on that score. In Senator Aldrich's plan the branches, the second part of his institution, are limited to 15 in number for the whole of the United States. As it is difficult to understand at present what the business and the position of these branches will be, it is scarcely possible to understand more as to their work if their business is to be at all analogous to that of branches of banks elsewhere. Still we may observe in passing that 15 branches seem very few in comparison with the enormous district over which they will operate, this being about thirty times the size of the United Kingdom, with a population of something like double. It may be supposed that power will be reserved to increase the number. The Central Reserve Association itself is a powerful body. It is proposed that it should have a 50 years' charter, and a capital of $300,000,000 (£60,000,000). There are to be 45 directors, 27 being elected by the branches and local associations, 6 being ex officio members chosen from amongst government officials or nominated by the president, 12 are to represent industrial interests. It is to issue notes which are in time to replace the notes of the existing national banks, whose circulation, as we mentioned before, is to be withdrawn altogether. The circulation issued by the Central Reserve Association is to be based partly on gold, partly on commercial paper. The gold apparently is to be equal at least to one-third of the note circulation. The commercial paper is to be bills with not more than 28 days to run, received through a local association. But all these details apparently are not absolutely fixed at present. It will make its position sound, and place the commercial credit of the country on a higher footing if the Central Reserve Association holds the specie deposited in the treasury of the United States.

There is no hint in this plan of the separation of the work of the bank into the two departments of issue and banking, as is done at the Bank of England, and we think that Senator Aldrich is wise in not thinking of doing so. In making this arrangement in 1844, Sir Robert Peel was influenced by the great importance held at that time by the note circulation in the operations of banks in this country. The grounds on which Peel acted were summarized by the Right Hon. James Wilson, afterwards the founder and first editor of the Economist newspaper, in the following manner:

First.—That bank notes though payable in coin, at the option of the holder, are still liable to be issued in excess, and are consequently subject to depreciation.

Second.—That convertibility is not alone a sufficient guaranty that a mixed currency of bank notes and coin shall conform, in its variations, to the same laws that would regulate a purely metallic currency.

Third.—That issuers of bank notes have power to increase or decrease that circulation at pleasure.

Fourth.—That, by expansion or contraction of the issues of bank notes at pleasure, the prices of commodities can be increased or diminished; and,

Fifth.—That, by such increase or diminution of prices, the foreign exchanges will be corrected, and an undue influx or efflux of bullion, as the case may be, will be arrested.

Mr. Wilson regarded these propositions as being not in any way proved, and the conditions under which banking is carried on at the present time are so different from those which existed in the early part of the nineteenth century that no one would think of suggesting that a moderate note circulation such as now exists in the United Kingdom could be followed by the results here suggested, nor is it felt necessary now to require that the notes in circulation should not exceed the amount of the coin which they displace. There is, however, no doubt that the division of the work of the bank into two separate departments has been followed by great instability in the rate of discount. This was foretold at the time by Thomas Tooke, the author of "The History of Prices," by whom the act was severely criticized, and by William Newmarch, for many years the secretary and manager of Glyn's Bank.

Mr. Tooke, one of the many eminent Englishmen who have brought to bear on the theories of economics and finance the practical experience of business life, held that there would be a greater liability to frequent and violent transitions in the state of credit and in the rate of interest with a divided than with an undivided state of the two departments. This has been abundantly confirmed by the actual working of the measure since that time. We cannot go more fully into this point here. It is sufficient for the purpose to compare the number of changes in the rate of discount at the Banks of England, France, Germany, Holland and Belgium from the date of the passing of the Bank Act of 1844 to the present time. The changes at the Bank of England have been more than twice as many as at the banks of Germany, Holland, and Belgium, and about four times as many as at the Bank of France.

There are in the plan prepared by Senator Aldrich many features drawn from the foreign great note-issuing banks, particularly from the arrangements of the Bank of France and the Imperial Bank of Germany. The history of those banks shows that they, like the Bank of England, have been of great service not only to the credit, but to the commercial welfare of the countries in which they work. The problems with which the banks of the United States have to deal are different from those which fall to the share of banks of more settled countries like the United Kingdom, France and the Empire of Germany. But there is one point which is imperative to secure the success of all these institutions, which cannot be expressed by law, though the legal arrangements may assist its fulfilment. The real strength of a bank lies in the character, ability and representative power of its directors; so far as can be judged from the scanty information at present received there does not appear to be any reason why the "Central Reserve Association," or whatever name Senator Aldrich's institution may receive, should not be ably, honestly and successfully managed, and we wish it all prosperity in carrying out the very important duties which it will have to perform.

By C. C. Burford

A real estate deal which has attracted the attention of bankers and land owners in Central Illinois is the sale of a farm of 960 acres near Lexington, McLean county, for $230 an acre, the total consideration being $220,800. Another farm in McLean county near the same town sold for $240 an acre, the farm consisting of 140 acres. As both of these farms are remote from Bloomington and do not have suburban qualities such as proximity to a city of that size would give, the transaction represents very well the real value of Illinois farming lands. Where have we heard that noise about the price of farm lands receding and where is the man who wisely asserted that land would never advance beyond the even $200 an acre mark? Bold prophets declare that the $300 an acre mark is already in sight.

Freeport Banker Writes Article

Edwin Selle of the German Bank of Freeport has published in the March number of the Bankers' Magazine an article on bank collections. The story is illustrated with copies of the forms of collections used by Mr. Selle and which were originated by him years ago. These forms are used now by the Freeport institution.

Cairo Shows Prosperity

The four banks of Cairo have deposits of four millions of dollars according to the statement made to the comptroller of the currency a few days ago. The bankers of Illinois when they visited the growing city at the tip-end of the state last fall were impressed with the business life and future possibilities of Cairo. A large jobbing business over southern Illinois, western Kentucky and Tennessee, and south-eastern Missouri is handled by the merchants and wholesalers of the city and the banks of Cairo are highly prosperous institutions.

Youthful Cashier at Fairfield

Walter Sons, cashier of the First National of Fairfield, can perhaps lay claim to being the youngest national bank cashier in Illinois. He is but twenty-three years of age but has seen six years of active experience with his bank as he has been assistant cashier for that period. When the former cashier, F. M. Frock, resigned to become postmaster of Fairfield, Mr. Sons was advanced by the directors to the cashiership. He was recently married to Miss Mary S. Dickey, daughter of Thomas Dickey, capitalist and bank director.

Bloomington Banker Ill

The many friends of J. O. Willson, president of the People's Bank of Bloomington, regret to learn of his illness which has necessitated a surgical operation. His trouble was found to be intestinal obstruction due to adhesion bands and the operation performed by two Chicago surgeons at the Brokaw Hospital in Bloomington was for the correction of this trouble. He rallied from the operation and there is every indication for a speedy recovery. The People's Bank with deposits of $1,377,769 and loans and discounts of $1,121,103 at the time of the last call is in a highly prosperous condition. Mr. Willson has great pride in that new building which the People's is erecting and which will be one of the best in the state.

Record Breaking Clearings

All records for bank clearings in eight Illinois cities outside of Chicago were broken during the week ending Thursday, March 9th when the grand total was $10,452,000. Peoria reported $4,020,000, an increase of 6.5 per cent. The other cities were Rockford, $1,073,000; Quincy, $1,296,000; Bloomington, $1,232,000; Springfield, $1,607,000; Decatur, $652,000; and Jacksonville, $599,000. Of these cities Springfield sometimes steps over the million dollar mark but Rockford, Quincy, and Bloomington seldom do. Transfers of real estate are given as the reason for the increase.

Illinois Notes

John H. Harris, former president of the First National of Beardstown, is dead after a lingering illness.

The Peoples' Trust and Savings Bank of Galesburg reports deposits of $1,014,540 and loans and discounts of $1,065,490. The capital, surplus and undivided profits amount to $354,000. M. O. Williamson is president and Harvey J. Butt is the cashier. This bank was established in 1900.

Mrs. Emory Cobb, widow of the late Emory Cobb of Kankakee, died recently at Daytona, Florida, where she had been spending the winter. Her husband was formerly president of the First National of Kankakee and later was president of the Western Union Telegraph Company.

Walter L. Fisher, who has been named by President Taft as secretary of the interior to succeed Richard A. Ballinger, is a cousin of W. S. Middlesworth, president of the First National of Shelbyville, and is well known to many citizens of that city.

The First National of Peoria announces the resignation of Herbert C. Bigham, assistant cashier, which became effective March 11th. Mr. Bigham will enter mercantile lines with the Peoria Tent and Awning Company. He has been with the First National since 1889.

C. H. Livingston, who recently left the town of Newman in Douglas county with valuables belonging to other people, has been heard from in other cities. He has since given bogus checks on the Newman bank to merchants in Rockford and Champaign. A reward has been offered for his capture.

The voters of Pekin township have defeated a proposition to bond the township for $50,000 for the purpose of erecting a new township high school building. The village of Odell in Livingston county has voted a bond issue of $7,000 for water works improvement.

It is thought that some of the money taken from the Citizens National of Walnut was recovered when cows eating from a strawstack uncovered a quantity of gold and silver coins which had been hidden there.

Hardy H. Whitlock, who is under indictment as the defaulting treasurer of Vermilion county, has settled with his creditors for one third of the amount of the embezzlement which totaled $37,500. M. J. Wolford, president of the Palmer National of Danville made the settlement.

The balance of the estate of Lee Kincaid, the bankrupt banker of Athens, was sold recently at Petersburg. A final dividend of about twenty per cent will be paid to the creditors April 15th. If twenty per cent is realized the estate will pay about sixty per cent of its indebtedness.

Walter W. Wallin, said to be one of the most "accomplished" crooks in Illinois, is under indictment at Quincy. He has made a specialty of postoffice swindling.

CLOSED A NATIONAL BANK

Union City, Mich., March 15.—After two days' examination, F. A. Roraback of Chicago, national bank examiner, ordered the Farmers National Bank closed and compelled Henry T. Carpenter, cashier, to resign. The failure is attributed to loose banking methods, the carrying of much worthless paper and an alleged intent to defraud. The assets lack $70,000 of paying depositors and, in addition, the capital of $50,000 is wiped out.

The Farmers Bank was organized thirty-five years ago by Carpenter, who has had control ever since. Carpenter and members of his family are said to be on the bank's paper for $20,000, and other paper bears names of citizens who have been dead for a dozen years.

Banking spirit seems to harmonize with the weather. Some influence has imparted buoyancy and cheerfulness to business. Most likely it is the sunshine. The spring season has come on prematurely and is rejuvenating trade of all kinds.

After a dull winter bankers and merchants alike are glad to note the improvement. There is a larger use for money than has been known in the Chicago market since December. This is mainly due to an increased demand for merchandise but to some extent it represents new financing on the part of manufacturers and jobbers who were not able to get their accounts in the Northwest cleaned up at the first of the year.

The spring wheat states were short on crops last season and this with the excessive land speculation made a temporary stringency. In those localities where farmers and merchants were unable to meet their obligations a considerable burden was imposed on banks, machinery houses and jobbers. However, no other section of the country is so well able as the Northwest to withstand a partial failure of crops and business has been adjusted to meet the necessities of the case.

Bank Loans Increasing

Cashier Charles N. Gillett of First National on Wednesday reported that institution as having its funds quite fully employed. Its discount business was the largest for several months, Mr. Gillett said. Nearly all transactions were at 5 per cent, which is a fractional advance since the beginning of the month.

Mr. Gillett explained that the season's program with respect to interior trade was being provided for by manufacturers and merchants. This involves an extensive use of funds. He thought commercial business was on the eve of a noticeable improvement, although the winter had been an unusually dull one.

Vice-President D. A. Moulton of Corn Exchange National quoted the money market firm and active, with an upward tendency. It is still a 5 per cent market, although the range of discounts is up to 5½ per cent, the outside figure representing the smaller class of loans. Mr. Moulton said the improvement was general in Chicago trade and probably throughout the country, but certainly all over the West.

It cannot be said that any particular line of business leads in the revival, although up to the present month real estate interests have held the honors. To-day trade is more evenly distributed, and the improved demand for money at the banks fairly represents new mercantile life. Real estate loans are quotable 5½ to 6 per cent, with the demand fully up to previous weeks. There were 574 real estate sales in Chicago last week, amounting to $3,279,592, against 720 sales the week before, with figures aggregating $3,423,184. The amount for the last week is three-quarters of a million above the record for the corresponding period a year ago. This difference has been noticeable all winter. The trust deeds and mortgages last week footed up $2,221,700, against $1,720,700 a year ago.

The money market has been peculiarly favorable to real estate development this season. It remains to be seen whether the advance in rates of interest will check the activity in building operations.

D. R. Forgan Predicts Good Year

President David R. Forgan of National City Bank, who has just returned from a ten days' visit East and South, predicts steady improvement to the end of the year. He told a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER that the season had been rather a poor one so far especially in the East. There is a feeling of confidence everywhere, and some improvement in business is already apparent here. "The fundamentals are sound," Mr. Forgan said, "and I have claimed all along that the year would see a material improvement. Trade revival means a more satisfactory condition in the banking business."

The employment of between two and three million dollars a week in local real estate operations has been of great importance to the money market. Real estate loans in the dull-est period ranged from 4½ to 5½ per cent and at present the quotation is 5 to 6 per cent. This advance reflects a continued demand for capital in that line as well as a more general use for money in mercantile trade.

A number of late real estate transactions in the Chicago market are significant. The apartment building at the northwest corner of Cornell Avenue and Fifty-fifth Street, with 101 by 154 feet of ground, containing twenty-four flats of five to eight rooms, built of New Bedford stone and brick, has been sold by E. N. Smith for $170,000, subject to an incumbrance of $60,000. Included in the same transaction was the twenty-one apartment building at the southeast corner of Prairie Avenue and Fifty-fifth Place, on a lot 126 by 141 feet, for $100,000, subject to an incumbrance of $50,000.

The purchaser of both properties was Conrad Becker of the Red Bud Trust Company, also president of the Becker Milling Company of Red Bud, Ill. In part payment he gave the new twenty-four apartment building at the southeast corner of Fifty-eighth Street and Michigan Avenue, with lot 100 by 150 feet, valued at $100,000, subject to an incumbrance of $38,000, and the Gedney Block in Independence, Iowa, consisting of a hotel, theater, stores, etc., with 200 by 200 feet of ground, valued at $100,000, the balance in cash.

Kameron on the fee of the property, northwest corner Madison and Franklin streets; $16,000 for five years at 4½ per cent to Harry F. Jeremiah W. Dowd, who is constructing a twelve-apartment building on the property on Forty-fourth Street, northwest corner of Michigan Avenue, has given a trust deed to Edwin G. Foreman as trustee securing a loan of $53,000 for five years at 5 per cent. The building will cost in the neighborhood of $75,000. Upon the next vacant lot, a dwelling-house intervening, Mr. Dowd is constructing a six-flat building to cost $31,000. The builder has given a trust deed to Edwin G. Foreman securing a loan of $22,000 for five years at 5 per cent.

Fort Dearborn National is to occupy its new home April 3d.

LIVE STOCK STATISTICS FOR 1910

The officers of the Live Stock Exchange National of this city have issued a neat pocket edition of the statistics of the live stock trade for 1910. The little volume is vest pocket size and is carefully indexed. It contains a general review showing the record of values in 1910; record breaking hog prices; summary of the sheep market, and also of the horse market. It classifies in one table the top and average prices and gives the monthly average prices as well. In fact there scarcely is a feature of the live stock business which is not fully covered.

The Live Stock Exchange National has been forty-three years engaged in successful banking at its present location and has necessarily exceptional facilities for handling live stock business. They place these facilities unreservedly at the command of the live stock industry which is one of the greatest in the country.

INSURING MORTGAGE INVESTMENTS

Considerable progress has been made at Springfield with a bill authorizing the organization of mortgage guaranty institutions in the state. It is being violently opposed by small individual loan brokers who fancy that they will be crowded out of business. They take the same position that the private bankers always have taken against any legislation which might interfere with their private profits, no matter how beneficial it might be to the people at large. The Chicago real estate boards have joined in opposing the passage of the bill. It is claimed by them that it is strictly in the interests of the big trust companies and the banks and opposed to the interests of the individual loan broker. The last reports from Springfield indicate that the bill is likely to become a law.

W. T. Kemper, president of the Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City, spent several days of last week on a business tour of Kansas.

Expert Burns

The Chicago daily press are full of praise for the election commissioners and the county judge for selecting the W. J. Burns National Detective Agency to guard the registration, and later to watch the voting. To effectively watch crooks it was necessary to employ an agency which they were certain would not put other crooks to do the work. Mr. Burns, who is the head of the bank protection service of the American Bankers Association, won a big victory in this appointment over his former conspicuous competitor. The preferment having occurred in Chicago becomes official notice to all bankers of who is who at headquarters.

ARGO PRESIDENT CONFIDENT

E. T. Bedford, president of the Corn Products Refining Company and a director of the Standard Oil Company, who has just returned East from a trip to Chicago, believes that business conditions throughout the country are good. Information he has gathered from men in different industries indicates that general business will continue in substantial proportions.

Work on the enlargement of the Argo plant has been started. Plans for financing the work have not yet been definitely decided upon. Either the old Chicago property will be sold to provide for the construction or bonds will be issued.

SEES GENERAL IMPROVEMENT

Fred L. Trees, president of the Kokomo Trust Company, Kokomo, Indiana, visited Chicago last week and stated to officers of Central Trust Company that business conditions were fairly satisfactory in his neighborhood, a general improvement having set in with the appearance of spring weather.

James B. Forgan is in the South for a month's recreation.

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER By Mortimer I. Stevens

WISCONSIN

Milwaukee, March 16.—The progress of legislation pertaining to the banking interests continues to be the chief topic of conversation among Wisconsin bankers and in line with the policy of the Wisconsin Bankers Association of keeping its member posted is the following information sent out from headquarters:

"The segregation and guaranty bills have been argued before joint sessions of the committees. The next move will be a report by the senate committee, consisting of Senators Owen, Knight, Scott, Thomas, Weigle, Bossard and Snover and their report may be expected at any time, especially on the guaranty bill. The report of this committee will carry considerable weight although a unanimous report is not expected.

"Hearings have been held by the assembly committee on the bills relating to the duties of directors and the proposed bill will undoubtedly be reported favorably with these amendments: Directors to meet monthly between the first and the tenth and they will determine the value of all items of assets but will not be obliged to certify as to the genuineness of signatures as originally proposed. All directors must be residents of Wisconsin. Absence from three consecutive meetings, except for sickness, absence from the city or other unavoidable cause shall be cause for removal of director by vote of directors.

"The bill providing for examination fees of banks has been reported by the assembly committee and provides for an increase in annual fees based upon total assets of the bank instead of capital stock, as now, and graded from $20 for banks with assets of less than $100,000 to $100 for assets of $1,000,000. This schedule will increase the total now paid by the state banks amounting to $7,000 to a total of $20,000. For this increase in fees the banks will receive (under another bill reported by the committee) two examinations a year instead of one and the number of the examiners will be increased from three to seven, the salary of the banking commissioner be increased from $4,000 to $5,000; the deputy from $2,000 to $3,000 and examiners and clerks from $1,500 to $1,800.

"The assembly committee will undoubtedly favorably report favoring 'all books of original entry, such as cash book, journal, draft, certificate and loan registers shall be permanently bound book and the so-called card system shall not be permitted as a ledger.'

"The assembly committee will also recommend the bill relating to loans made to bank officials but with an amendment permitting the managing officer of a bank to borrow no more than 2 per cent of the capital stock of his bank. Directors may borrow as now when authorized by resolution of the board."

Banks Show Healthy Growth

Milwaukee bank assets have reached a high record with a total of almost $100,000,000. Including the state banks of the city total resources are $99,365,343; a gain in two months of $3,655,748. Milwaukee bank deposits March 7th also made a high record with $81,593,044;

a gain in two months of $4,131,339. Gains in all banks in the two months intervening since the call of January 7th are loans, 4 per cent, deposits 5 per cent, cash 3 per cent and total assets, 4 per cent.

This steady advance in loans shows that the demand for credit for the enlarged spring trade is as large as usual and while there is no indication of a boom everything point to a steady conservative growth.

While the Marshall and Ilsley Bank shows by far the largest actual gain of any of the state banks in actual figures their percentage does not appear so large owing to the difference in the totals. Among the big deposit gains are Mitchell Street Bank, 41 per cent; Badger State Bank, 28 per cent; Merchants and Manufacturers Bank, 23 per cent; Marshall and Ilsley Bank, 4 per cent and the West Side State Bank, 2 per cent.

The statement of the national banks for March 7th is considered the most notable ever issued with the total resources of all national banks of Milwaukee amounting to $70,237,579; a gain in two months of $3,403,687 and the highest total on record. The statements show good gains all along the line with an advantage in loans in two months of approximately $1,599,048 and in deposits of $3,488,726. The increase in loans and deposits indicates improved business condition. Bankers say that tariff revision will make some uncertainty in spring and summer trade as orders will be held back in case revision applies to all the schedules, or if the tariff question is ripped wide open.

¶ This Bank, being at the logical center of Wisconsin banking activity, and having an exceptional list of State and Foreign correspondents, offers its services to conservative Banks with the assurance that such a connection will be of mutual advantage.

Gains in deposits are due in part to the tax collections usual at this season of the year. The general trade feeling, however, is very optimistic.

National Bank Changes

Announcement has been made by the treasury department of a re-extension of the corporate existence of the Manufacturers National Bank of Racine until March 6, 1931. The comptroller announced these changes in officers in the national banks of this state: First National Bank, Baraboo, Jacques J. Pfasteht, assistant cashier; First National Bank, Stevens Point, O. A. Assmann, assistant cashier; First National Bank, Superior, Robert Kelly, first vice-president; Pear Benson, second vice-president, and J. F. S. Banks, assistant cashier.

City Official Wants to Turn Banker

Milwaukee City Treasurer Whitnall went before the committee on banks recently in favor of the bill permitting the Milwaukee city treasurer to receive deposits in sums ranging from $5 to $1,000 from citizens. The bill proposes that he shall pay 3 per cent interest. The deposits are to be secured by municipal bonds deposited with the secretary of state, and according to Mr. Whitnall this would form a safe bank for small deposits.

Explosion Causes Banker's Death

William P. Robinson, aged 66, assistant cashier of the First National Bank of Kenosha, died at this home in that city on the morning of March 11th as an indirect result of the explosion of the big powder plant at Pleasant Prairie during the past week. Mr. Robinson had been ill for some time and when Kenosha was so severely shaken by the explosion Mr. Robinson was attacked with extreme nervousness resulting in his death.

Trust Company Named Administrator

With the visit of Attorney-General Barcroft to Milwaukee a few days ago the fact was made public that the Wisconsin Trust Company, of which Oliver C. Fuller is president, has been named as the administrator of the Wisconsin estate of the late Marshall Field of Chicago.

A Milwaukee paper contains the following: "The Wisconsin Trust Company is the administrator 'de bonis non' with the will attached,' for the estate of the late Marshall Field, the Chicago merchant prince. Translated into the language of the layman this means that the estate owns real property in Wisconsin, and it became necessary to probate the will here, so the Wisconsin Trust Company was appointed administrator for this estate."

First National, Antigo, Wins Case

A decision was recently handed down by the supreme court in the case of the First National Bank of Antigo vs. George Wunderlich, affirming the decision of the lower court, which was in favor of the bank. The case grew out of an agreement signed by Wunderlich for J. N. Sanford, who was at that time a member of the C. Wunderlich Lumber Company, and on which he secured loans.

Lancaster Bank Reorganizes

The First National Bank of Lancaster recently increased its surplus from $12,000 to $25,000 and completely re-organized. L. H. Stevens is the new president, succeeding P. T. Stevens. The latter, with G. A. Stevens will act in the capacity of vice-presidents of the institution. L. A. Clark retains his position as cashier. The five officers will constitute the board of directors. The bank reports a constantly increasing business since its organization and still further plans are being made to extend the business.

Banking Notes of Interest

John P. Kalt, who has been cashier of the First Wisconsin Bank at North Fond du Lac for the past four years, has resigned his position to identify himself with the new Citizens

State Bank of Fond du Lac, which, it is expected, will be opened for business in May.

The plans for the North Avenue State Bank, Milwaukee, have been completed. The building will be 30x70 feet, two stories, of solid brick with terra cotta front and tile floors.

The Bank of Shell Lake opened for business March 1st and reports an unusually auspicious opening.

The Pulaski State Bank now occupies its new building. This bank is in first class condition with deposits of $42,000 and loans amounting to $45,000.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Second Ward Savings Bank of Milwaukee the following were elected as directors: Henry Schroeder, William B. Uihlien, Albert Esler, Fred Schroeder and Robert Uihlein.

Oliver C. Fuller, president of the Wisconsin Trust Company, has returned from a three weeks' stay in Florida.

Muscoda, Wis., is to have another bank, articles of incorporation for which will be filed at Madison within a few days. Enough stock is reported as having been subscribed at $100 a share to incorporate for fully $15,000.

President Thomas Daly of the Commercial National Bank of Oshkosh was a visitor in Milwaukee during the past week to attend a meeting of the directors of the Marine National Bank.

The First National Bank of Edgerton has opened for business. The new quarters are especially well adapted to the business with ample vault room and office equipment as well as convenience for the public.

The stockholders of the new bank at Forest Junction have elected the following officers: President, John Segbold; vice-president, G. Schmidt; cashier, William Alten; assistant cashier, L. Hoffman.

A. C. V. Elston has resigned as cashier of the Muscoda State Bank and will take a trip to Florida. He still remains president of the institution, with which he has been connected for 27 years.

Daniel T. Liesk has been elected cashier of the Red Granite State Bank. Mr. Liesk has been connected with the Milwaukee National Bank for a number of years and is an active member of the Milwaukee Chapter of the American Institute of Banking.

Bogus Money Men

For five weeks agents of the secret service have been playing at hide and seek with a gang of counterfeiters and the game has covered three states of the Central West. Complete success finally came to the pursuers last week, so they say, when five men alleged to compose the gang were arrested in various places but all charged with substantially the same crimes. The men are said to have counterfeited the $5 bills of the German National Bank of Beloit, Kan. Thomas Clark is in jail at Huntsville, Ark., J. G. Durham is in jail at Licking, Mo., Carl H. Evers in Chicago, Bode Payne at Rolla, Mo., and Harry Burke at Alton, Ill.

"MARIE CLAIRE"

Marguerite Audoux's "Marie Claire," the book which has aroused so much interest in French and other European literary circles and which took the Concourt prize of $1,000 awarded annually for the best French book of fiction, was written by a poor seamstress in Paris earning only 60 cents a day. Through the help of an enthusiastic introduction by Octave Mirbeau, the literary idol of Paris, the book had a wonderful sale, for it is not at all the sort of book that one would expect the people of Paris, that most Bohemian and artificial of all cities, to take up. It is not really a novel, having no distinct plot, but is simply the story of the author's childhood and girlhood experiences told with a simplicity and charm that is irresistible. Beginning with the death of her mother, the reader is next given a picture of her father who "rocked when he walked," the desertion of herself and her sister by him, the years in the convent, her service on a farm, her love experience and its disappointment, finally her departure for Paris. Perhaps the secret of the book's charm lies in the fact that her language and ideas are always entirely in conformity with that age of which she is speaking, yet she has the rare gift of giving distinct pictures of each person and incident. Any one expecting a "thriller" will be disappointed for it has no great scenes but merely depicts the emotions and thoughts of a young girl. Arnold Bennet's introduction to the American edition is perhaps the best description of it: "It is not fiction. It is the exquisite expression of a temperament. It is a divine accident." "Marie Claire" has been translated into English by John Raphael with wonderful success for he has preserved the French simplicity and imagery of the author. It is being issued by the George H. Doran Company, New York. Price $1.20 net.

SAYS OKLAHOMA GUARANTY IS A FAILURE

A visiting banker from Oklahoma who claims to be interested in both state and national banks in that state has had interviews printed in Chicago papers declaring the entire Oklahoma system of bank guaranty a failure. He does not permit the use of his name nor give statistics but makes some rather astonishing assertions. The fact that the interview appears anonymously precludes its being published in THE CHICAGO BANKER.

Col. J. S. Aisthorpe

Col. J. S. Aisthorpe of Cairo was in Chicago this week. He is busily engaged on his history of the Illinois Bankers Association, which will celebrate its twenty-first anniversary this year. It promises to be a very interesting document especially that portion covering the amalgamation agreement which kept private banking in Illinois alive for years after it had been abolished in so many less progressive states. The bargain was a bad one and the newly revised constitution probably will put an end to it.

BANKERS TO DINE APRIL SEVENTH

The next dinner of Group Seven of the New York State Bankers Association will be held at the Hotel Astor, Manhattan, on the evening of April 7th. This place and date were determined upon by the committee in charge of the dinner, and in order to make it the most successful in the annals of the association an excellent program of speechmaking has been prepared. Comptroller William Pendergast has promised to make an address, as has Superintendent of Banks C. H. Cheney and the Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, pastor of the Central Congregational Church.

G. Foster Smith, of the Nassau National Bank, was recently made chairman of Group Seven.

SENTENCE WITHHELD IN ROBIN CASE

The Supreme Court of New York has decided to withhold its sentence upon Joseph G. Robin who recently pleaded guilty to larceny of the funds of the Washington Savings Bank of that city. This postponement of sentence is that Robin may assist the New York district attorney who is investigating the affairs of the old Carnegie Trust Company. It is expected in New York financial circles that quite a number of indictments will be found before the investigation is ended.

The safe of the bank at Viola, Kansas, near Wichita, was blown by robbers recently and only $50 was taken, the thieves overlooking considerable cash that was elsewhere in the bank. The robbers made their escape, but were captured two days later near Hutchinson, Kan.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

The quarterly call of the comptroller of the currency at Washington on March 7th, found the banks of the Central West in a prosperous and reassuring condition. In the larger cities of Kansas City, Omaha and St. Joseph it was noteworthy that the loans and discounts showed an increase which is evidence that the bankers are not curtailing credits while the reserves have been piling up. The situation appears to warrant fully the claim of Central West bankers during the past few weeks that "money is easy," a formula that has grown somewhat monotonous.

Kansas City bankers are congratulating themselves upon the heavy increases in deposits that have marked the period since the last call on January 7th. The figures show that the national banks of Kansas City now have on hand a total of $108,565,229, or an increase of more than $9,000,000 since the last call. As it is customary for the state banking department of Missouri to issue calls simultaneously with the comptroller of the currency, the state banks of Kansas City and trust companies under state charters, also made public statements. These institutions show a gain of more than $1,000,000 since the previous call. The total combined deposits of state and national institutions in Kansas City amount to $135,775,525.

During the past two months the banking institutions of Omaha have shown substantial growth in all lines. The last call found the national banks nearly $7,000,000 stronger in deposits than they were at the time of the previous call in January and they are within $2,000,000 of the top notch mark of March 29th a year ago. During the past two months the loans and discounts of the Omaha national banks have increased nearly $1,000,000 but they still have a great deal of idle money on hand. This situation makes an easy situation for the borrower and helps the general business men. In St. Joseph the local bankers are congratulating themselves upon the substantial gains they have made during the past two months. All over the Central West this improvement has been noted and nowhere is there anything to cause anxiety. This is the "dull" season and the call of a year ago came later when the business awakening was fairly on. Therefore it is hardly fair to make comparisons in the statements of March 29, 1910 with those of March 7, 1911. But even if this is done it brings a favorable showing for the present year.

Stirs up Trouble

Attorney-General Dawson of Kansas has stirred up a mess of trouble because he gave wide publicity to charges that many state and probably a few national banks of that state were acting as agents for brewers and whiskey houses in violating the prohibitory law. The method of working this game, according to the attorney-general, is for a brewer or liquor dealer outside the state to send a consignment of goods to a Kansas town with the bill of lading mailed to the bank. The bank disposes of this bill of lading to anyone wanting liquor and returns the money less the fee. The operation is simplicity itself. But these charges brought an immediate and emphatic denial from Bank Commissioner Dolley who has defended the Kansas bankers from what are considered by many people absurd charges. Dolley demands facts and as yet Dawson has not produced them. The bankers of Kansas are indignant at what they consider a totally unjustifiable reflection upon their honesty and good citizenship.

Assessment Causes Stir

There is consternation among the state banks of Oklahoma because of the additional assessment made upon them to replenish the state bank deposit guaranty fund. The state banking board has just levied a 1 per cent emergency assessment on the average daily deposits of the state banks of Oklahoma which brings the total assessment of Oklahoma state banks since the guaranty law was enacted three years ago, to 33-20 per cent, or a total of more than $1,500,000. In addition to this a 1 per cent assessment was levied a year ago on the increased deposits in state banks. This showing is being used by many state bankers to indicate why there should be a full accounting by the state banking department of the receipts and expenditures of the fund before any more money is paid in.

The burden placed upon the Oklahoma state banks by reason of the heavy assessments required by the guaranty law, has caused many of these institutions to make application for national bank charters. It is said that these applications have been pouring into the treasury department at Washington of late. It is understood in the department that the transfers are asked in order that banks thus applying for national charters may avoid the last assessment upon state banks. Among the Oklahoma state banks to nationalize with the past few days is the Oklahoma State Bank of Tulsa, of which Grant McCullough is president, and the Bank of Claremore, the largest financial institution in Rogers county, Oklahoma.

St. Joseph Prospering

W. A. P. McDonald, manager of the St. Joseph clearing house, is one of the best posted men in Northwestern Missouri on financial matters. He is intensely enthusiastic over the local situation and speaking of the St. Joseph clearings last week he said: "There has been a steady increase in St. Joseph clearings ever since the organization of the clearing house association. The increase of this week's clearings over those of the corresponding week of last year is 9.1 per cent, and an equally large increase has been the rule every year since there has been a clearing house here."

"There were those who thought that the slump in St. Joseph's population, as shown by the last federal census, would cause a decrease in bank clearings, but, as the figures show there has been an increase over last year of more than a million dollars, and the indications are that the volume of business transacted in and through St. Joseph will increase steadily with resultant increase in bank clearings. The officers of the clearing house association feared that there would be very little, if any, increase this year over last year, due to general inactivity in business circles throughout the country on account of the consideration of the tariff matters by congress, and they are surprised that the increase is so large."

Competition Ceases

On Wednesday of last week all competition between banks in Kansas under the guaranty law ceased. On that date all the banks in the state were limited to paying 3 per cent interest on time deposits, under the order of Bank Commissioner Dolley in conformity with the recent law providing for a maximum rate to be fixed by the bank commissioner. The bank commissioner has the right to fix a higher maximum rate in counties where it is desirable to have a higher rate, but for the present all the banks of Kansas will come under the general order. Later the petitions in counties where a higher rate is desired will be considered.

Southwestern Notes

When Ray W. Cotton, cashier of the Bank of Cameron, Oklahoma, was married last week to Miss Madge Harbour of that place, the whole town celebrated. The bells rang, dynamite was exploded, bands played in the public square and for hours people paraded the main streets.

John P. Lynch, former alderman of Kansas City was elected a director of the Fidelity Trust Company of that city last week.

In a suit for $10,000 damages for slander brought by Jesse Scott against Carr Peterson, vice-president of the First National Bank of Haskell, Okla., a jury returned a verdict for the defendant. It was charged that Peterson calced Scott a bootlegger which, in Oklahoma, is a deadly allegation.

The Cleveland National Bank of Cleveland, Oklahoma, will begin the erection of a bank building and business block soon. Cleveland is the center of the oil district of Oklahoma.

C. S. Jobs, president of the Security National Bank of Kansas City has brought suit against Conway F. Holmes, vice-president of the Pioneer Trust Company of Kansas City. Mr. Jobs alleges that this amount is due as a consideration in helping sell a block of Pioneer Trust Company stock.

Robert L. Ball, the banker of San Antonio, Tex., who was seriously injured in a railroad wreck December 30th, was operated on in a Kansas City hospital last week. His condition is encouraging.

Ernest C. Hartwig, for many years cashier of the First National Bank of St Joseph, Mo., and who was recently elected its first vice-president, is critically ill. It is not believed that he can recover.

P. W. Goebel, president of the Commercial National Bank of Kansas City lectured one evening last week before the students of the Kansas City University on "Business Honor."

W. H. Schmick of Cleveland, O., and S. H. Brainard of Medina, O., both former bankers, were paroled from the federal prison at Leavenworth last week.

What has come to be known as the "Blue Sky" bill in the Kansas legislature has passed both houses and is ready for the governor's signature. This is the measure providing for the regulation and supervision of investment companies by the Kansas banking department in order to protect Kansas investors from fake stock concerns.

CHAPTER RECORD

(Department of Chicago Banker)

An Open Forum Dedicated to the American Institute of Banking in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Systematic Education and Universal Membership

CHICAGO CHAPTER

At the last regular meeting of the debating club held Tuesday, March 7th, John M. Drummond, who was elected secretary of the club at the preceding meeting, resigned as he felt his many outside interests would prohibit him from either doing justice to himself or the club and thought it best to resign the office. Mr. Drummond has always taken an active interest in the club and it was with great reluctance that his resignation was accepted. F. G. Murbach of the Union Trust Company was elected to fill Mr. Drummond's unexpired term. This gives the Union Trust Company two men on the official staff, Mr. Coleman being vice-president.

The program for the evening consisted of narratives of personal experiences of the various members, Mr. Drummond, who by the way might be called the humorist of the club described a trip to Mammoth Cave, Ky., last year. The story was well told and deserved the hearty applause given at its conclusion.

Mr. Coleman helped things along considerably by telling of a trip to the United Steel Mills, and while his trip might have lacked in mileage, the interesting and instructive information which he had gathered and presented to the club more than covered the shortage.

Mr. Murbach also enlivened things by giving a talk on his travels to Washington, Philadelphia, Atlantic City, New York, Albany, Magos and Cleveland.

Mr. Ashley related a few of his experiences while a member of a surveying party six years ago and told of the trials that the members of a railroad locating party are forced to endure.

Mr. Schroeder acted as critic and did his duty cheerfully.

KANSAS CITY CHAPTER

J. Z. Miller, Jr., vice-president of the Commerce Trust Co. of Kansas City, addressed the Kansas City Chapter, American Institute of Banking, March 9th on "Trusts." There was a large attendance as the members of this chapter are taking more than usual interest in the present course of addresses. "The modern trust company," said Mr. Miller, "is peculiarly an American institution of finance, adapting itself most readily to the varied fiscal, banking and fiduciary requirements of the communities, both large and small. It is the most responsible agency in this country to-day for the conservation of both wealth and property." Mr. Miller then referred to the vast amount of treasure guarded by trust companies, which, at the last meeting of the American Bankers Association was reported to be $30,000,000,000. "Every great industrial or financial enterprise," he continued, "sooner or later finds it necessary to invoke the fiduciary and protective services of trust companies. Prior to 1830 there were no actual trust companies in existence. Twenty years ago there were less than one hundred trust companies in this country while to-day the total is 2,340."

Mr. Miller then outlined to the student bankers the varied services that are performed by trust companies and the many and sometimes unique ways in which they may be useful to every community. He also referred at length to the Aldrich plan of financial reserves. "It is obvious," continued Mr. Miller, "that trust companies with approximately $5,000,000,000 banking resources commanding 22 per cent of the entire banking strength of the nation should be considered in any far-reaching plan for the revision of our currency and banking system. Senator Aldrich apparently recognized this fact, for he recommends the creation of a new class of national banks, to be in effect national trust companies. The subject of nationalization has been discussed among trust company officers on various occasions, and there has been a division of opinion. Those who are opposed to nationalization base their conclusions on the fact that one of the reasons for trust company success is the fact that they render such varied service to the communities where they are severally located and so are adaptable to the different fiscal, fiduciary and banking requirements which prevail in different sections of the country. Those who favor nationalization point to the advantage of uniformity of functions and participation in the privileges extended banks by the proposed reserve association, which is very important. However, it is reasonable to suppose that congress will enact no legislation on this subject without ascertaining the enlightened and best sentiment prevailing among officers and directors of trust companies. The modern trust company is still upon the threshold of its sphere of usefulness and it is noteworthy that it continues to grow in public favor and volume of business. Its position is established."

TACOMA CHAPTER

The March meeting of Tacoma Chapter was a typical northwestern booster meeting with all the old, dyed in the wool members on hand to speak a good word for the institute at large and the educational work being carried on by the local chapter.

The meeting was called to order by the secretary who officiated in the absence of the president, Mr. Crocker, who lies critically ill; and announced that the meeting was thrown open to the members to do with as they would.

After listening to some twenty-odd speeches, well delivered by Tacoma Chapter's young orators, and signing in several new members, the old and new Institute workers were united in musical harmony delivered by the National Bank of Commerce Quartette which did yeoman service, responding to encores beyond count.

Plans for the baseball season were laid before the meeting by Chas. A. Craft an old hand at the bat, who promises laurels from the diamond to be hung on the chapter rooms walls if given the support he deserves.

Refreshments and smokes filled the latter part of the evening with jolly good fellowship which is always needed when good work is to be accomplished by a body of energetic young Americans.

BIG TRUST COMPANIES' BANQUET

Plans are being rapidly consummated for a large banquet to be given by the trust companies of the United States under the auspices of the trust company section, American Bankers Association. This banquet will be held in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria on the evening of May 5th, when members of the executive committee will have returned from the Nashville council meeting.

It is planned to make this banquet national in scope, and it is hoped that members of the section from all parts of the country will be in attendance. Prominent speakers will be present, and it is believed that the affair will emphasize the growing importance of trust companies throughout the country. Full details will be sent to all members of the section.

The following trust company officers have agreed to serve on an honorary committee of arrangements: Otto T. Bannard, president, New York Trust Company; Howard Bayne, vice-president, Columbia Trust Company, New York; Chas. J. Bell, president, American Security and Trust Company, Washington; Ralph W. Cutler, president, Hartford Trust Company, Hartford; E. Elmer Foye, vice-president, Old Colony Trust Company, Boston; Alexander J. Hemphill, president, Guaranty Trust Company, New York; A. A. Jackson, vice-president, Girard Trust Company, Philadelphia; Clarence H. Kelsey, president, Title Guaranty and Trust Company, New York; Alvin W. Krech, president, Equitable Trust Company, New York; Edwin S. Marston, president, Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, New York; E. G. Merrill, president, Union Trust Company, New York; Uzal H. McCarter, president, Fidelity Trust Company, Newark; John W. Platten, president, United States Mortgage and Trust Company, New York; A. H. S. Post, president, Mercantile Trust and Deposit Company, Baltimore; Wm. C. Poillon, president, Mercantile Trust Company, New York; Benjamin Strong, Jr., vice-president, Bankers' Trust Company, New York; Roland L. Taylor, president, Philadelphia Trust, Safe Deposit and Insurance Company, Philadelphia; Oliver C. Fuller, president, Wisconsin Trust Company, Milwaukee, and president, trust company section; Lawrence L. Gillespie, vice-president, Equitable Trust Company, New York, and first vice-president, trust company section; Philip S. Babcock, secretary; F. H. Fries, president, Wachovia Bank and Trust Company, Winston-Salem, N. C., and chairman of the executive committee.

DINNER FOR NATIONAL PRESIDENT

Members of the Pittsburgh Chapter, American Institute of Banking, gave a complimentary dinner for their fellow member, R. H. MacMichael, who was elected national president at the annual convention of the Institute. Mr. MacMichael has lately returned from a tour through the West, in which he visited and addressed a number of chapters of the Institute. Since his return he has addressed the local chapter on Institute affairs generally. The dinner was held on the night of March 16th. Mr. MacMichael is manager of the bond department of the Mellon National Bank.

CHICAGO'S GROWTH AS RESERVE CENTER

Chicago as a growing reserve center again has broken all previous records. More than $900,000,000 now are carried in Chicago's state and national banks, the largest amount by seventy millions, ever reported for this center. Between calls the loans of all Chicago banks expanded only about $33,000,000, and their total cash resources increased $33,800,000. The total cash resources at the beginning of business March 8th—$318,000,000—were 35.4 per cent of the total deposits, as compared with 34.3 per cent in January.

The forty state banks and trust companies showed a total increase of more than $22,000,000, or about 5.2 per cent, in their deposits over the amount held in January. The national banks the day before had reported a gain of $48,500,000, or 12.02 per cent. The state banks expanded their loans by only $3,246,000, or about 1.2 per cent as compared with an expansion of $30,000,000, or 10.6 per cent, by the national banks. The cash resources of the state banks went up $18,500,000, or 15.3 per cent as against an addition of $15,000,000, or 9.3 per cent, in the nationals. This is the first call in some time in which the national gains exceeded those of the state banks. Reserve business accounts for it.

Middle West conditions in banking lines are shown to be sound and prosperous. Chicago's growth as a reserve center has been phenomenal and her bankers can see nothing but further expansion on these lines for the future. So far as individual increases are concerned in the grand total they have been well distributed.

DILEMMA OVER GUARANTY ACT

The Nebraska bank deposit guaranty law was the one chosen for the test case before the United States supreme court recently and it was declared constitutional. Now the Nebraska legislature wants to amend this law which was passed two years ago, but is afraid that another opportunity will be given for appeal and further litigation. Although some of the proposed amendments are desirable it is doubtful if they will be adopted, for the reason given. The Nebraska senate spent the entire day March 8th, considering the amendment. The opposition came chiefly from the Democratic side. The amendments desired are: Relieving banks of back assessment not paid because the law was held up by injunction; limiting the maximum guaranty fund to 1½ times the average daily deposits in state banks; raising the pay of bank examiners from $1,800 to $2,000 a year; refusing to allow banks to pay more than 4 per cent interest on deposits; cutting out the present limitation which refuses to banks the right to loan more than eight times the capital stock.

PROGRESS OF THE SOUTH

One of the most striking and interesting facts in our national life is the new prosperity of the South. The past year was one of notable progress in many lines of industry. There were large returns to farmers from cotton, tobacco, corn, rice, fruit, live-stock and various other products. As a natural consequence mercantile trade was good and the general development was rapid.

The impressive thing about it is that the South has awakened to the need of a diversification of interests. Farmers have kept pace with manufacturers and merchants in this respect, the result being a rejuvenated country.

The story of this commercial awakening carries a lesson for the North. While the press has labored long and earnestly in behalf of a more diversified and scientific agriculture for all sections the South would seem to be taking the lead in the application of that principle.

Formerly there were thousands of Southern farmers who trusted entirely to cotton or tobacco, while in the North it was wheat, corn or milk. The single crop idea has held back the prosperity of farmers to an extent that is hard to appreciate. The modern agriculturist, however, talks and practices diversity. On the average farm of the South it is feasible to raise cotton, tobacco, corn, vegetables, fruit and live stock, and in many sections rice. There is so little frost there that double cropping is possible and it is becoming a common thing. A farmer can take off a crop of vegetables or oats, rye or wheat, according to locality, and then plant cotton or corn, with a reasonable certainty of success.

With this great progress in the country business generally is improving. The South has greatly needed a diversification of business as well as of agriculture, and under the modern spirit which is abroad in the land this is the order of the day. In many states of the Union people have farmed until the land has ceased to be productive, and in one state alone—New York—two years ago there were 3,000 worn out farms, lands which would hardly produce enough to pay the taxes. It is to avoid just such conditions that farmers in the South are studying markets, soil and climate as they never did before. There is greater diversity also in manufacturing and merchandising, with the result that all classes are prosperous.

BANK PROMOTION FIELD NARROWING

New laws like that just adopted for Alabama are taking bank organization out of the hands of professional promoters. Chains of banks will go by the board also, and thus two great evils will be abolished. The comptroller has sat down hard on the promoter in the national field, and for some time he has been operating under state laws. In half a dozen states, and probably before long in Tennessee and Arkansas, it has been made almost impossible for a bank promoter to operate successfully.

Inquiry of the state department in New York leads to the reply that to organize a bank in that state is no longer regarded as an easy and sure way of making money. Very few successful financial institutions have been established in New York in recent years, while not a few have died.

In the country at large the craze for starting banks has received a check, partly through changed conditions, partly by the comptroller's vigilance. The number of national banks organized last month was the smallest since the present banking law went into force. Indeed, the total for the first two months of 1911 is below the figure for any previous January alone. The severity of the decline in bank organizing is beginning to attract attention. It ever is getting more difficult to get good men to go on boards for new institutions. Prospective stock subscribers want to know who the directors are to be before they seriously consider the matter. One doubtful name has killed several otherwise promising projects in Chicago.

BANKERS ASK SQUARE DEAL

The Missouri Bankers Association is making a strong fight against the injustice of the present method of assessing bank stock in that state. A committee of the association spent a day in Jefferson City last week in an effort to make a more equitable adjustment of this matter by the state board of equalization. The average assessment in Missouri for the last few years has been on the basis of 55 cents on the dollar. The bankers ask that this be reduced to 50 cents. Even if this is done, the bankers say, bank stock then will be assessed out of proportion to the other taxable property in the state, as the average valuation, aside from bank stock, is hardly 33 1-3 cents on the dollar.

Thornton Cooke, treasurer of the Fidelity Trust Company of Kansas City and chairman of the legislative committee of the Missouri Bankers Association, made the plea for the bankers. One of the interesting facts disclosed by Mr. Cooke was that Missouri farmers own more bank stock than any other single class of citizens. Of 26,663 owners of $29,000,000 of bank stock, 11,515 are farmers. The board will not pass on the question until all interests have been heard.

True to its Name—

The founders of the Northwestern National Bank exercised foresight in selecting its title.

The growth of this bank has been continuous and sturdy, and today the scope of its activity is "northwestern" in the full sense of the term.

With correspondents throughout all the territory from Chicago to the Pacific, and in Canada, exceptional facilities are offered for handling the business of the Great Northwest.

SAN ANTONIO AS A HOTEL TOWN

San Antonio being the liveliest of aspirants for the big A. B. A. convention of 1911 the question naturally was raised as to her hotel ability to care for the guests and delegates. No other objection ever has been raised. THE CHICAGO BANKER has had an actual census of the room capacity made, not from guide books, but by canvass and with the following results:

Name	Plan	Room	Bath
St. Anthony	European	450	400
Menger	American	180	75
Gunter	European	350	200
Hot Wells	American	150	50
Hutchins	American	45	21
Crockett	European	75	50
Bexar	European	72	46
Southern	European	80
Maverick	American	60
Losoya	European	56	33
Savoy	European	100	18

Two of the hotels do not report rooms with bath, but the use of the hose probably is free. With nearly seventeen hundred rooms, most of them with baths it would seem that if Hoopes has kept up his work, it ought to be a walk-over for Texas at the Nashville meeting.

Another story is that New Orleans after having lost out on the Panama fair wants to reinstate her invitation, but likely Texas will object to this as unfair. The Nashville meeting will take place May 1st, 2d and 3d. Probably the Mexican invasion will be over by then, so that the location will have no military handicaps.

HEAVY TRAVEL SOUTHWARD

Illinois Central carried over 18,000 passengers to the New Orleans Mardi Gras. Southern resort travel is unusually heavy.

FORT DEARBORN TRUST AND SAVINGS

The organization of the Fort Dearborn Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, which will be the savings bank department of the Fort Dearborn National, was authorized by State Auditor J. S. McCulloch at Springfield this week.

The permission was granted to William A. Tilden, Nelson N. Lampert, and Edward Tilden. Capital of $250,000 was authorized and a ninety-nine year charter was granted. Previous announcement of the plan had been made.

JUDGE FISHBACK OFF TO EUROPE

Judge Charles F. Fishback, chairman of the Chicago board of control of the national irrigation congress, which will meet in Chicago this year, left on Monday for New York and will sail immediately for England. He will seek to interest Lord Alfred Harmsworth, and other English publishers, in the work of the congress and also will confer with financial interests in London and Liverpool on the investing of English funds in American development work.

MICHIGAN NATIONAL BANK CLOSES

Union City, Mich., March 14.—After two days' examination, National Bank Examiner F. A. Rorabeck of Chicago ordered the Farmer's National closed after banking hours Saturday night and requested Cashier Henry T. Carpenter to resign. The failure is attributed to loose banking methods, the carrying of much worthless paper. The assets lack $70,000 of paying depositors, and in addition the bank's capital of $50,000 is wiped out.

Robert O. Bailey of Illinois is the new assistant secretary of the treasury.

The banking department in the office of the auditor of state has completed arrangements of districts, by counties, to be covered by the six bank examiner recently appointed by the state auditor. Under the new arrangements the examiner of trust companies is eliminated. Each examiner has charge of all banking institution in his district.

The state is divided so as to give the various examiners as near as equal number of banks as possible. There are 621 institutions in the state, and the largest number of banks falling to any one examiner is 125 and the smallest 89.

Following is the list of the counties in each district and the number of institutions:

District 1—James C. Fletcher of Knox, examiner, 111 banks in the following counties: Lake, Porter, Laporte, St. Joseph, Marshall, Starke, Fulton, Pulaski, Jasper, Newton, Benton, White, Cass and Carroll.

District 2—Robert C. Houston of Frankfort, examiner, ninety-six banks in Warren, Tippecanoe, Clinton, Howard, Tipton, Boone, Montgomery, Fountain, Vermillion, Parke, Putnam and Hendricks.

District 3—Charles L. Howard of Hazleton, examiner, ninety-eight banks in Vigo, Clay, Owen, Morgan, Sullivan, Greene, Monroe, Knox, Daviess, Martin, Lawrence, Orange, Dubois, Pike, Gibson, Posey, Vanderburg, Warrick, Spencer, Perry and Crawford.

District 4—Arthur Cravens of Bloomington, examiner, eighty-nine banks in Marion, Hancock, Hamilton, Madison, Delaware, Blackford, Randolph and Jay.

District 5—William M. Whitson of Scottsburg, examiner, 102 banks in Harrison, Floyd, Clark, Washington, Scott, Jefferson, Switzerland, Ohio, Dearborn, Ripley, Jennings, Jackson, Brown, Bartholomew, Decatur, Franklin, Johnson, Shelby, Rush, Fayette, Union, Wayne and Henry.

District 6—William C. Thomas of Logansport, examiner, 125 banks in Miami, Wabash, Huntington, Wells, Adams, Allen, Whitley, Kosciusko, Noble, Dekalb, Steuben, Lagrange, Elkhart and Grant.

Burglars entered the Peoples Bank at Windfall, Indiana, by prying open the windows. They then blew the outer door of the vault and obtained $500 in silver. For some reason they did not get into the inner vault, which contained $4,500 in currency. They escaped in a stolen horse and buggy. Five years ago last October the bank suffered a similar attack, with about the same result. The safe is badly damaged. Four hundred and fifty dollars' worth of postage stamps, left in the bank by the postmaster for safekeeping, was a part of the swag.

The Farmers' State Bank at Matthews, Indiana, was entered last week by robbers, the safe blown and fully $3,000 taken.

F. O. HICKS IN BANK POSITION

St. Louis, March 16—Frank O. Hicks, national bank examiner and chairman of the eighth district, the largest in the United States, yesterday was elected vice-president of the Mechanics-American National Bank.

He succeeds L. A. Battaile, one of the most successful bankers in the South and the West, who felt obliged to resign because of prolonged ill health.

Mr. Hicks, who is 40 years old, has supervised the national bank examination of Texas, Arkansas, Missouri, Oklahoma, Kansas and Southern Illinois, comprising the eighth district. He has maintained headquarters in the Third National Bank building with twenty-two examiners reporting to him.

FACE A BIG PROPOSITION

Bankers of the Northwestern spring wheat region face a big proposition this season, according to Vice-President Donald S. Culver of National German American Bank of St. Paul. Mr. Culver was at Continental-Commercial National the fore part of the week and told Vice-President Van Vechten that spring business was already going forward with a rush. Farmers of the Northwest are the most courageous people in the world, he declared. They will increase their grain acreage unless prevented by unfavorable weather, and also will send more cattle, horses and hogs to market than ever before. Owing to the partial failure last season the financial problem is not a trifling one.

CHAPMAN BACK FROM PANAMA

Joseph Chapman, Jr., vice-president of the Northwestern National Bank of Minneapolis, Minn., was a visitor at National City Bank Tuesday. Mr. Chapman returned last week from his trip to Panama, looking the picture of health.

Heavy Exports

February exportations of farm products show a marked increase when compared with those of the corresponding month last year, according to figures just received by the Bureau of Statistics, Department of Commerce and Labor. Corn, wheat, flour, other bread-stuffs, and meat and dairy products all show a very large increase in February, 1911, compared with February, 1910. The quantity of corn exported in February, 1911, was practically 10¾ million bushels, against 4½ million in February of last year; of wheat, 1 1-3 millions bushels, against 1 million a year ago; of flour 839 thousand barrels, against 523 thousand in February, 1910; meat and dairy products 10¾ million dollars in value, against 9¾ million one year ago; and cotton, 410 million pounds, against 169 million pounds in the corresponding month of last year.

WISCONSIN BANKERS HERE

John A. Raup, cashier of City Bank of Portage, and Carl Engelke, assistant cashier of Germania National Bank, Milwaukee, were callers at Fort Dearborn National, recently.

Vice-President A. W. Barney of Bank of Sparta was a visitor at National City Bank Tuesday. Mr. Barney told his Chicago acquaintances that Wisconsin was enjoying a spring trade somewhat larger in volume than had been anticipated.

W. B. WELLS PASSES AWAY

St. Louis, March 17.—W. B. Wells, vice-president of the Third National Bank and manager of the Third National Bank Building, died March 15th at the Jewish Hospital from diabetes. His sister, Mrs. Anna Newton of Chicago, was at his bedside.

The funeral was largely attended by bankers and others. The pallbearers were Charles H. Huttig, William Enders, J. E. Smith, S. H. Fullerton, Thomas Wright, George L. Edwards, H. F. Knight and Edward Hidden.

—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, March 16.—A slightly improved demand for credits from commercial sources was about the only change in the St. Louis monetary situation this week. General business is showing decided signs of livening up, and bankers here, among them Walker Hill, president of the Mechanics-American National, look for a somewhat stiffer market during the course of the next thirty days. Mr. Hill bases his prediction on the gradually improving demand, which will ere long be stimulated by the needs of the country for spring agricultural operations.

The number of buyers here since the first of the present month is considerably larger than a year ago, and the big houses on Washington Avenue report sales to date in excess of those of the corresponding period last year. Country merchants are almost unanimous in the opinion that the spring trade will pass that of any year since the recent panic. Indications are for heavy wheat yields over practically the entire winter wheat belt, and though it is a little early to form estimates, the condition of the soil and growing plant is such, that without some radical and unforeseen factor, the output is certain to be enormous. Some money is going to the interior, but thus far the volume of currency and gold shipments has been light. The movement of the Louisiana and Texas early crops has been easily taken care of by the institutions in those states, as it comes at a time when the southern banks are filled, as a result of cotton payments. However, Southern and Southwestern balances at this center have been considerably reduced in the last three weeks, and notices of further reductions are on file with the leading reserve banks here.

International Bank Plans

The recent advance in International Bank stock from around $250 a share to $300 on bids, without a single share changing hands, was the feature in the bank and trust company group on the St. Louis Stock Exchange this week. No bank stock in St. Louis is more closely held than that of the International, and information relative to its going on is as difficult to secure as the stock. The property owned by the institution at Fourth and Chestnut Street, it recently sold to the government for the new Sub-treasury Building, which deal was a very profitable one. It was reported yesterday in brokerage circles that the International will shortly increase its capital stock from $200,000 to $500,000, and the plan of enlargement includes a stock dividend of $100,000. The stockholders will pay $200,000 for 2,000 shares of stock and receive 1,000 shares as a dividend. The institution has a surplus of $253,270, and deposits of more than $3,580,000, making $17.92 of deposits for every $1 of capital stock. Negotiations are pending for several locations, one at Broadway and Pine Street, in the quarters occupied by Browning and King. The old banking room of the Mechanics-American National, at Broadway and Locust Street, has also been considered.

Exit Old-fashioned Banking

On Monday the Boatmens Bank held a reception to celebrate the completion of its new banking room and fixtures, and also passing of the old idea of banking and banking methods. Edward Whitaker, president of the institution, is the central spirit of the innovation, which is looked upon with interest, as the Boatmens is the oldest bank west of the Mississippi River, and during all the years of its existence it was famed for ultra-conservation. In the physical arrangement, the officers, including the president, are put up just opposite the entrance, and the general impression on entering is one of openness and accessibility. The reception was attended by all the members of the banking fraternity, and leading business men in all lines and professional men of St. Louis. The numerous floral offerings made the bank resemble a flower show in full blast.

Want Assessment Lowered

A delegation, representing the Missouri Bankers Association, appeared before the Missouri State Board of Equalization at Jefferson City on Monday, asking that banks be assessed 50 cents on the dollar, instead of 55 cents as in other years. The bankers argued that 50 cents was 20 per cent above the assessment levied by the assessors and equalized by the board on lands and farm property. Figures were produced to show that the average assessment upon real estate is barely 22 cents on the dollar, while the bank stocks in the country are assessed 55 cents. It was shown that the board has equalized real estate in the country at 22 cents, live stock at 35 cents, and merchandise at 39 cents on the dollar valuation. The present mode of equalization is full of inconsistencies. It permits St. Louis, which levies over 65 cents on the hundred dollar valuation, to pay over one-third of the total taxes of the state. The members of the delegation were: A. O. Wilson, St. Louis; Thorton Cooke, Kansas City; J. W. Kayser, Sedalia; W. G. Gordon, Marshall; Richard Fields, Lexington; A. D. Buckner, Paris; D. N. Stafford, Seneca; A. H. Wait, Joplin and W. C. Harris, Fulton.

United Railways Adjustment

The proposed compromise between the United Railways Company and the City of St. Louis of the mill-tax proposition and other disputed matters, if adopted by the Municipal Assembly, will do more to clear up the financial atmosphere here than anything that has transpired in many a day. This mill-tax has hung like a cloud over the local security market, and has upset confidence in traction securities, which are the more largely dealt in than any other class of stocks and bonds. The company has been unable to market its bonds to take up underlying obligations falling due. Great sums of money are tied up in various financial institutions, and investors have suffered heavy loss in the recent suspension of the dividend on United Railways preferred and resultant drop in the market value of that stock. Since the proposed legislation was introduced, a marked improvement in the shares has been made. By the compromise the city agrees to abandon its claim to $1,000,000 of accrued taxes under the mill-tax and to extend all franchises to 1948, in return for which the company promises to make extensive improvements in its service, and to construct new lines and extensions.

Bank Resources Enormous

All previous records for total resources of St. Louis banks were broken by the showing under the last call of the comptroller of the currency. On March 7th the total resources were $427,349,830. Other items were: Loans, $234,145,993, an increase of $11,211,000 or 5 per cent over January 7th; deposits, $353,582,857, an increase of $19,650,000, or 6.4 per cent; cash and exchange, $115,213,182, an increase of $5,667,000 or 4.9 per cent. The total capital now stands at $41,202,400, and the surplus and undivided profits at $43,894,897. This is a decrease in the capital of $355,000, which is accounted for by the retirement of the Washington National, with $500,000 capitalization, and the increase in capital of the Manchester and Scruggs-Vandervoort and Barney banks.

Legislature Holding Out on Banks

St. Louis banks and trust companies, which last year put up $10,000 to help carry on the work of the State Board of Immigration, are likely to be permanently shy that "temporary loan." Assurances were made by Governor Hadley and State Immigration Commissioner Curran that they would get the legislature to make good. Twice this session the Solons have been asked to do so, but have refused to appropriate the amount. The legislature admits that the board has done a "wonderful work" but the bankers reap the benefits of said wonderful work, so have got values received. Kansas City bankers are out $6,500 and Springfield bankers $8,667.

Missouri Banks Consolidate

The Bank of Fredricktown and the Fredricktown State Bank consolidated this week, with a capital stock of $37,000. These banks are among the most important in that section of the state. J. M. Piertle, president of the merged institution; Carl Schwaner, first vice-president; Frank Schulte, second vice-president; A. J. Boardman, cashier and A. V. Downs and W. H. Farrar, assistants. The institution will occupy the banking room in the Merchants Hotel Building, formerly occupied by the Fredricktown State Bank, the Bank of Fredricktown having lost its banking room in the recent fire.

Francis to Address Bankers

Former Governor David R. Francis, vice-president of the Merchants-Laclede National, will address the joint session of the Missouri and Kansas Bankers Association at Kansas City on May 24th. W. J. Bailey, former Governor of Kansas will also speak at the meeting. Their topic will be Missouri and Kansas. Governor Francis will speak on "Kansas from the Missouri Standpoint," and Governor Bailey on "Missouri from the Kansas Standpoint." Other speakers will be F. O. Watts, president of the American Bankers Association and Franklin MacVeagh, secretary of the treasury.

Subtreasury Site Accepted

The Mercantile Trust Company has received infinite information from the Treasury Department at Washington that it is ready to close the deal for the purchase of the southeast corner of Fourth and Chestnut streets for the new Subtreasury building. The price paid for the ground is $300,000, and the building will cost $700,000 more, making a total of $1,000,000. Enough of the appropriation for the building proper is available to commence operations immediately.

Chouteau Trust Company

The recently organized Chouteau Trust Company, with an authorized capital of $100,000, half paid in, filed articles of incorporation this week. It will be open for business within a month or six weeks, with William Drozda president. The company will do a regular trust company business and will furnish safe deposits and savings bank facilities. To an extent it will be a competitor of the Manchester Bank. The institution will occupy the first floor of the building Mr. Drozda is completing at Manchester and Chouteau avenues.

LOSES RACE WITH DEATH

New York, March 15.—Mrs. Lillia Lewisohn to-day lost a 600 mile race with death. Her special from Asheville, N. C., pulled into the Pennsylvania railroad terminal in this city several hours after her husband, Albert Lewisohn, a banker of 11 Broadway, expired in the Red Cross hospital.

Mrs. Lewisohn's special, going sixty miles an hour, was wrecked Monday, forty miles south of Lynchburg, Va.

She hired another special, but it was four or five hours before she could get under way again. The delay took from her the final chance to see her husband alive.

When she got to the hospital she broke down completely. Lewisohn was told of his wife's efforts to reach him and died asking for her.

Blood poisoning following an operation on the nose killed Lewisohn.

NORTON GOES TO NEW YORK

It has been announced officially from New York that Charles D. Norton, former secretary of President Taft, will on April 1st become a vice-president of the First National Bank of that city.

Tax is Upheld

Washington, March 15.—By unanimous decision the Supreme Court of the United States sustained the corporation tax.

This action, upholding the constitutionality of those provisions of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law containing a levy on dividends, secures to the government a source of income of about $25,000,000 a year.

The main points of the opinion are:

It was within the power of the senate to insert the corporation provisions in a tariff law, which originated in the house.

The tax is an "excise tax on the doing of business," which is exactly the basis on which the government defended the law.

The provisions of the law are not the arbitrary exercise of a power. This was urged in argument as one reason why the law should be held unconstitutional.

The tax is regarded as measured by income rather than being a tax on income.

The law is not applicable to the real estate "trust" of Boston, which are organized not under any statute, but under the common law.

The law is not applicable to the Minneapolis syndicate, a real estate concern, on the ground that it is not "doing business" within the meaning of the law.

Of all the objections to the tax raised by suits in all parts of the country none of them was found sufficient to nullify the law.

Near the outset of the opinion, as it appears in printed form, is the statement that the tax "is imposed not upon the franchises of the corporation irrespective of their use in business, nor upon the property of the corporation, but upon the doing of corporate or insurance business, and with respect to the carrying on thereof in a sum equivalent to 1 per centum of the entire net income over and above $5,000 received from all sources during the year; that is, when imposed in this manner it is a tax upon the doing of business with the advantages which inhere in the peculiarities of corporate or joint stock organization of the character described.

"As the latter organizations share many benefits of corporate organization it may be described generally as a tax upon the doing business in a corporate capacity."

RESOURCES OVER FIVE MILLION DOLLARS.

Los Angeles

The committee of local bankers which financed the American Bankers Association Convention—the entertainment of the visitors—found, after all bills were paid, that $5,000 still remained in the treasury—a most gratifying discovery and excellent showing certainly, if the prodigal character of the entertainment be remembered. The committee met last week at the Security Bank and ordered a distribution of the sum among the contributors—local banks—in proportion to their contribution.

N. W. Harris, one of the most prominent bond men in the county, is ill. He has gone to Arrowhead where he will remain several weeks, or until he has recovered. Mr. Harris recently arrived in Los Angeles on a pleasure and business trip, accompanied by his wife and Dr. Johnson of Chicago. Mr. Harris is president of the Harris Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago.

The bankers' convention held last summer has been the cause of a boom in this city's securities during the past six months. At that time the city entertained practically all of the prominent bankers of the country, most of whom were astonished at the rapid and substantial growth of this city and the wonderful resources and future that are apparent. The influence they have had in turning investment money this way has been wonderful and at present this city's securities are said to be held in higher esteem than those of New York City.

"The history of the market on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange for the past year has been one of steady growth, splendid opportunities and a general broadening of the whole list," says L. F. Parsons, assistant secretary and manager in his annual report just filed. "It is undoubtedly the biggest and best year the exchange has yet enjoyed."

To meet the demands of a rapidly growing business outside the state, the Los Angeles Fire Insurance Company has increased its capitalization from $200,000 to $1,000,000 and will enter the insurance field of the entire western United States. The company is composed of several of the leading business men of Southern California, Bradstreet Miller being the vice-president and active manager. The additional capital will be invested in high grade municipal and school bonds.

The demand for new offices and business accommodation in Los Angeles is exemplified in the rapidity in which the new building of the Los Angeles Trust & Savings Bank is erecting at Sixth and Spring streets, has been rented. More than sixty-five per cent of the offices in the eleven story building already have been reserved, and so great has been the demand that the owners have practically been able to choose and pick their people. Office tenants will move in March 1st, but the bank will have to wait two or three months before it can occupy the ground floor.

At the conclusion of the arguments in the Baldwin will case Judge Rives announced that he would instruct the jury that the evidence adduced "fell far short of making out a case for the plaintiff" and that the jury return a verdict in favor of the defense. This ends the contest brought by Miss Anita Baldwin Turnbull, the 17-year-old Boston girl, for a daughter's share in the $11,000,000 estate left by the E. J. (Lucky) Baldwin.

Negotiations are nearly completed for the merging of the Home Saving Bank, of Los Angeles, with the Broadway Bank and Trust Company, the control of which was recently purchased by a syndicate of stockholders of the Citizens National. The merger is to be effected by an exchange of stock of the Home and Citizens. The Home, on January 1st, had $1,642,422 deposits, $1,747,377 loans and $400,000 capital. It is the purpose of the Citizens National to consolidate the business of the Home and the Broadway banks at some location yet to be determined and operate the concern for its savings and trust departments.

Los Angeles bank clearings continue to amaze even the local fraternity. In the percentage of gain of clearings this city leads the whole country. In the week ending March 2d the total of the clearings in Los Angeles was $22,941,000, an increase of 33.1 per cent over the same period the year before. In the total Los Angeles is eleventh in the list of clearing house cities.

A report from Battle Creek, Mich., says that Stoddard Jess, vice-president of the First National of Los Angeles, who is taking the rest cure there, is doing well and expects to return to Los Angeles in about a month.

Charles G. Greene, cashier of the Merchants National of Los Angeles, has resigned to make another business connection. A successor will soon be named. Meantime J. H. Ramboz, assistant cashier, is attending to the duties of the office.

The new state superintendent of banks, R. W. Williams, has announced the appointment of A. W. Sinclair as head of the Los Angeles office. It is also announced that Henry E. Sherer, acting chief deputy under Alden Anderson, will not be retained. Mr. Williams' chief deputy is F. H. Thatcher of Los Angeles.

L. F. Parsons, manager of the Los Angeles Stock Exchange, has sent letters to all the bankers and financial men of the city in the interest of a plan to have all securities handled in Southern California registered.

A total of 790 permits for the erection of buildings in Los Angeles were issued in February by the department of buildings. The valuation was $978,000.

San Francisco

During the month of February the operations of the San Francisco Clearing House Association were $168,003,457.41; in the same month of 1910 they were $166,709,308.39. In February, 1909, the clearings were $130,678,894 vs. $128,006,400 in 1908 and $194,294,400 in 1907.

Clearings for the last nine months of 1910 were as follows: March, $201,980,494; April, $190,058,795; May, $182,643,200; June, $190,890,323; July, $195,333,352; August, $196,461,337; September, $193,845,829; October, $209,362,340; November, $203,594,361; December, $202,875,553.

E. W. Wilson, manager for the International Banking Corporation in this city has announced that the international corporation had taken over the Bank of Commerce and that it would be conducted as a branch of the bank in the Mills Building. The Bank of Commerce will be continued as a branch. Robert Davies, president of the Bank of Commerce, will remain in charge of the branch bank. The Bank of Commerce has a capital of $50,000, fully paid, and a surplus of $5,000. It has been operating less than two years.

The new Ontario Bank of Ontario, Cal., is opening for business in temporary quarters at Euclid Avenue and B Street. The capital stock is $50,000. Officers: W. A. Freemire, president; J. R. Pollock, vice-president; G. A. McCrea, cashier.

The comptroller of the currency has approved the application of John A. Park, K. M. Strobridge, M. C. Peterson, J. E. Geary and J. H. Woods to organize the First National Bank of Haywood, Cal., with a capital of $25,000.

Edward Canfield Sterling, a capitalist and banker, is dead. Mr. Sterling had large property interests in Texas which he disposed of recently. He was also interested in a large number of corporations at the time of his death, either as an officer or director, but had gradually retired from many others during the last few years. In addition to his beautiful home on Crescent Avenue, he owned a ranch of several thousand acres on the Mojave desert near Victorville. He was vice-president and director of the Citizens National Bank of Redlands, and had extensive property interests in Los Angeles, San Francisco, and St. Louis.

A petition has been filed in the superior court by the Central Bank of Oakland asking permission to change its name to the Central Savings Bank of Oakland. Since the bank secured a charter as a national bank, the commercial department has been known as the Central National Bank, the old name, Central Bank, being retained by the savings department.

Northwest Letter

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

"Every American ought to go and see the Panama canal," said Joseph Chapman, Jr., vice-president of the Northwestern National, Minneapolis, Tuesday, on his return to work. Mr. Chapman has been down twice. He says that the trip would make every American prouder of his country.

"Down there they say the canal will be open in 1913," continued Mr. Chapman. "The machinery is marvelous. Much of it was invented by the soldier-engineers. Machinery offered in the market was not equal to the work."

"We went up three miles from the Pacific side. The three locks are 1,000 feet long, 80 feet high, seven feet thick made of sheet iron riveted together. As a matter of fact the cut is only nine miles long, while the isthmus is fifty miles across."

"New York bankers report business quiet. They fear tariff tinkering at the extra session of congress rather than the passage of the reciprocity treaty. Another bad influence is the delay and uncertainty over the decisions of the supreme court in the Standard Oil and American Tobacco cases."

Banks Show Gains

Gains indicating early business are shown in the Twin City banking statements on the second call for 1911. On January 7th the deposits of the Minneapolis banks were $89,101,025 and on March 7th they had grown to $93,895,806. Commercial banks increased deposits $4,795,780 to a total of $75,132,820. The savings deposits were $18,743,986. Loans and discounts totaled $56,344,096, while at the previous call they were $54,912,258. In the larger commercial banks the deposits were: Northwestern, $24,144,190; First National, $19,036,541; Security National, $18,125,797.

In the seven St. Paul national banks deposit gains were $5,350,536. The totals aggregate $44,000,000. With the trust and savings bank gains the aggregate is $50,000,000. Some of the increase is charged to payment of taxes by the railroads to the state, which is about $2,000,000 of the total.

Six national banks, having a capitalization of a million or more, three in Minneapolis and three in St. Paul, gained $8,097,556 deposits, distributed as follows: First of St. Paul, $1,913,015; Northwestern, $1,832,400; Merchants, $1,373,454; Security, $1,128,372; German-American, $1,069,429; First of Minneapolis, $780,786.

Banker Interested in Orchards

F. E. Holton, cashier of the Northwestern National, treasurer of the Mount Adams Orchard Company of White Salmon, Wash., has gone to look over his possessions, intending to stay two weeks. He is reported from that region as seeing wonderful development, and a great future for the non-irrigated fruit. He advocates a "Greater Hood River" federation of fruit unions in Hood River, Mosier, White Salmon, Lyle and Underwood. The company will plant 125 acres of trees and by summer will have 500 acres of apples and pears.

Makes European Tour

George F. Orde, vice-president of First National, Minneapolis, is going abroad for three months, following the meeting of the executive council of the A. B. A. He will take his family. This will be his first essay of the Atlantic. Mr. Orde says he is going to forget everything about the business and the first question he will ask on landing home is to be about the crops in North Dakota. Mr. Orde is methodical and has laid out his itinerary and details even to the first word of English that is to escape his lips on return.

Aid for Farmers

Seed men say the banks in the Northwest will have to loosen up if the farmers are going to buy seed. Bankers say they are taking care of their customers. L. A. Huntoon, president of the Minnesota Bankers Association, and of the First National of Moorhead, says: "We are not advertising the fact that we are looking for seed loans. I think that all of the banks are taking care of their customers—that is the customers who are worthy of it. I think that all farmers will be taken care of, that are worthy of it, so that they can put in their crops, whether they are customers or not. No, I don't think that we will loosen up on the credit any more, at a later date than we have so far."

W. C. McFadden, secretary of the North Dakota Bankers Association, in regard to a report that lack of moisture and poor conditions influences the amount of credit said: "Not at all. The lack of moisture in the ground means nothing at all this time of the year. I think that all of the banks are taking care of their customers in regard to loans."

Mr. McFadden added that while the bankers organization, as such, has not concerned itself with the flax seed question, many individual bankers in portions of North Dakota where flax is an important crop are ready to see to it that flax in sufficient quantity for seeding purposes is forthcoming for farmers who want to seed this year, and who had poor crops last year or are starting in on new land.

Geo. F. Orde, vice-president of the First National Bank of Minneapolis, said that the plan in operation in several North Dakota counties of issuing county flaxseed warrants has the approval of bankers, that it is probable that such warrants will find absorption in the banks of North Dakota, but that should it be desired, the Minneapolis banks would loan money on them. The method to date, where flaxseed was obtained in that manner, has been to turn the warrants into cash at the local bank and pay cash for the seed.

State Auditor J. S. McCullough has issued a permit to Nicholas R. Jones, Carroll Caruthers and Sampson Cusdori to organize the Douglas State Bank of Chicago, with a capital of $200,000 and a charter duration of ninety-nine years.

Philadelphia

All records for bank clearings for the month of February in Philadelphia were broken. More than $579,840,000 passed through the clearing house. This is an increase over the corresponding month of last year of $12,990,465.

The directors of the Continental Title and Trust Co. have declared a semiannual dividend of 4 per cent on the amount paid in, $25 per share, payable March 25th, to stockholders of record of March 15th. The declaration places the stock of the company on an 8 per cent basis. Dividends have heretofore been at the rate of 6 per cent per year.

The council of administration of the Pennsylvania Bankers Association has reached a decision that the annual convention of this association be held at Philadelphia June 13th and 14th. It is expected to be one of the largest events in the history of the association.

An amendment to the bank and savings institution taxation bill of July 15, 1897, was introduced by Harry W. Bass, of Philadelphia in the house of representatives. Under the act as it stands, state banks and savings institutions are taxable at the rate of four mills upon the actual value of the capital stock. The act also contains the following alternative: "Except, however, that any bank or savings institution may elect to collect annually from the stockholders thereof a tax of 10 mills on the dollar upon the par value of all shares of said bank that have been subscribed for or issued, and pay the same into the state treasury." Mr. Bass's amendment proposes to strike out this alternative.

The Girard Trust Company has declared a quarterly dividend of 8½ per cent. This is the first quarterly dividend declared by the company. Heretofore payments have been made twice a year.

Representative J. Hampton Moore, receiver of the defunct City Trust Co. of Philadelphia, hopes to be able to pay another dividend to the creditors. He feels confident of doing this providing his arrangements are not interfered with by unwise or overeager claimants. Mr. Moore has already paid the creditors 77 per cent of their claims, and the additional payment will come out of an appropriation of $227,000 he hopes to have inserted by the Senate in the General Deficiency bill in satisfaction of a judgment.

The First National Bank's deposits more than exceed the $25,000,000 mark, and the business is showing a healthy increase. This has necessitated the improvements now being made at the bank building 315 Chestnut Street, which are progressing satisfactorily.

The success which the Salisbury Steel and Iron Company is meeting in Philadelphia with the sale of its 6 per cent convertible bonds, which were offered within the last week, adds further testimony to the increasing popularity of guaranteed investments, and to those particularly that are more or less directly identified with the steel industry.

The Salisbury bonds have not been offered in any other market, and it is the opinion of leading brokers, based on the number of inquiries already coming to hand, that the entire issue of $500,000 will be absorbed by Philadelphia investors.

No little feeling was aroused among Philadelphia bankers over the action of two New York banks entering this market as lenders, offering upward of $500,000 at one-half of 1 per cent below the 4 per cent rate exacted by local institutions. The Philadelphia representatives of these banks placed the loans and took charge of the collaterals, and in consequence of the cheaper money several banks here had loans paid off. Some plain correspondence has followed reminding New York that it was scarcely in order to have banks there offer funds in this city at figures that hurt local lenders.

In the statements of Philadelphia banks made to the comptroller of the currency, it was brought out that loans expanded over $10,000,000 and deposits more than $8,000,000 above the figures of January, 1910. The Girard National showed the largest gain in deposits, namely, $4,293,291. Despite the low rates for money the local institutions were able to carry over $3,500,000 to surplus and undivided profit account in the last 13 months. This means that the aggregate of that fund will exceed $44,900,000, or nearly double the total capitalization. Fourth Street National occupies first place in deposits, Philadelphia following and Girard third.

The local chapter, American Institute of Banking, has completed plans for their annual banquet to be given Saturday, March 18th. Among the speakers will be: Judge E. B. Law of New York, who will respond to the toast, "Dollars and Sense"; Wm. A. Pendergast, Comptroller of New York, and Joseph C. Lincoln, also of New York. The toastmaster will be Wm. A. Law, vice-president of the First National of Philadelphia. Eugene J. Morris, of the Manayunk National, is chairman of the Committee on Arrangements.

CHICAGO WARRANTS TAKEN

Comptroller Wilson has sold $1,058,000 of Chicago anticipation tax warrants to New York banks. The price paid was par and the interest rate 4 per cent. This is the first actual sale of securities warrants to New York, though the comptroller explained the warrants have been in demand there for two or three years. They bear no definite date of payment.

The current statement of the Mellon National Bank shows the highest total in all items in the history of this institution. Deposits are $39,601,000, an increase of $3,300,000, while its total resources are $49,987,000 are but a few thousand short of $50,000,000.

Considerable interest was manifested among local bond dealers in the sale of $70,000 West Liberty Sub-School District, Pittsburgh, 4½ per cent tax exempt bonds. These bonds are dated March 1, 1911, and mature March 1, 1940, without option of prior payment, both principal and interest being payable at the Marine National Bank, Pittsburgh, Pa. The bidding was spirited, proposals being submitted by J. S. & W. S. Kuhn, Incorporated, Commonwealth Trust Co., Washington Investment Company, Safe Deposit and Trust Company and E. S. Wheeler and Company, of Pittsburgh, and by Lawrence Barnum and Company of New York, the first named being the successful bidder.

The Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad has declared an extra cash dividend of 25 per cent, or $12.50 on every share, and announced an issue of new stock, which will be sold to stockholders at par, $50. The new stock will amount to $4,200,000, and holders will be allowed to subscribe to 20 per cent of their holdings as of record March 17th. The authorized capitalization of the road is $30,000,000, and the new stock will raise the stock outstanding to $19,200,000.

At the close of last week the United States was producing pig iron at the rate of about 25-250,000 tons a year, against less than 20,000,000 tons in the closing week of December, a gain of 25 per cent. At the end of December, however, general furnaces were banked on account of their attendant steel works being closed for repairs, and the capacity nominally in blast was about 21,000,000 tons. The actual capacity of the country is about 33,000,000 tons—statements that the capacity is 38,000,000 or 40,000,000 tons being due to a misunderstanding of the data—so that the country is running at 76 per cent of capacity, so far as pig iron is concerned.

A pardon has been granted Harry E. Muehlbrouner, formerly an employee of the Workingman's Savings Bank and Trust Company, of the North Side, who was sentenced to two years in the Alleghany county workhouse on his plea of nolo contendere to a charge of embezzling $40,000 from the bank.

SAGINAW BANKS CONSOLIDATE

The Saginaw County Savings Bank of Saginaw, Mich., one of the oldest financial institutions in Eastern Michigan, has consolidated with the Bank of Saginaw, giving resources of more than $0,000,000 and deposits of $8,000,000. Benton Hanchett is president of the consolidated banks.

How Money is Made in Security Investments

By HENRY HALL

(Late of the New York Tribune)

There is only one way to make money upon stocks and bonds, or, in the vocabulary of the day, in Wall Street. The process is fully set forth, both broadly and with an abundance of detail and illustration, in this book.

Mr. Hall's exposition of the subject is addressed to the actual investor and to the "long pull" trader. Both of these classes of men have in view, first, the safety of their capital; next, the dividend returns on their stocks, while they hold them; and, thirdly, the profits arising from sale of the stocks, on appropriate occasions, and the accumulation of an ever-growing fortune through their operations in securities. Mr. Hall's book is a sound, dispassionate and authoritative guide on these matters, and is the product of many years of close and patient study of financial questions and the methods of Wall Street.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, March 15.—Sixteen banking institutions in Spokane reported total deposits of $27,888,370.27 at the close of business on March 7th in response to the call of the comptroller of the currency. The deposits were $28,860,961.82 on January 7, 1911, and $33,756,404.88 on March 29, 1910. The decrease is explained by the fact that several large amounts, realized from sales of railroad and city property early in 1910, have since been withdrawn and invested in other enterprises or paid out for labor and supplies. Bankers say it shows too the effect of the move of conservatism which has characterized the action of banks the last year and indicates they have gradually accomplished the objects sought without causing any noticeable effect on the money market.

Loans and discounts are given at $18,772,921.69, as against $19,889,239.44 in January, 1911, and $20,422,936.95 in March, 1910. Cash on hand and in bank was $10,481,082.54, against $10,563,631.92 in January, 1911, and $12,678,863.53 in March, 1910. The surplus and undivided profits amounted to $1,623,953.90, as against $1,626,262.59 in January, 1911, and $1,475,866.16 in March, 1910.

Worthy of note is the fact that most of the banks show a large reserve. The Traders National holds 44 per cent, which is said to be unusually large. Others have reserve in percentage as follows: Fidelity National 41, Exchange National 37, Spokane and Eastern Trust Company 33, Old National 33, Scandinavian-American State 23, Washington Trust Company 32, Northwest Loan and Trust 34, National Bank of Commerce 37, Farmers and Mechanics 38, Union Trust Company 21, Union Park Bank 23. The Bank of Montreal holds 62 per cent.

Trade Improvement

Improvement in trade conditions, accompanied with greater cheerfulness, is apparent on all sides throughout the Spokane country, and local bankers declare the outlook for a prosperous year is bright with every promise of fulfillment. Ample capital is available for the development of business enterprises and banks, insurance companies and investors in general look with favor upon farm loans. The rapidly enhancing values in inside property in Spokane and the tributary district makes this an ideal field for conservative investments. The stability of the values is practically guaranteed by the enormous expenditures for development and betterment, and added to this is increasing production in agriculture, lumbering, mining and horticulture and manufacturing and the steady influx of new capital and desirable population. With the expansion of manufacturing in Spokane this year there is bound to come a greater commerce and larger financial development than ever before in the history of the city.

Miscellaneous News

Spokane and Eastern Trust Company has been named trustee for the holders of first-mortgage bonds of the Wenatchee Valley Gas and Electric Light Company at Wenatchee, Wash. The company recently sold bonds to the amount of $350,000 of a possible issue of $2,000,000, in Philadelphia, and the securities are held by the local company representing the purchasers. J. H. Stout, secretary of the Wenatchee Company, was in Spokane a few days ago to have the bonds certified.

John MacGinniss, vice-president of the Silver Bow National Bank and former mayor of Butte, Mont., while in Spokane on March 7th and 8th, to attend directors' meetings of the Interstate Telephone Company and the Western Empire Insurance Company, was a guest of the chamber of commerce the first day. He was accompanied by John F. Davies, counsel, and A. B. Cook, who is building the gap line for the Burlington road at Belt, Mont.

Assessors in Idaho will list property this year at a fair cash value instead of 25, 35 and 40 per cent of the real valuation. This was decided upon by the state board of equalization recently. It was made possible by the legislature adopting a resolution on March 3d, limiting the bonding power of the state. The governor and the attorney have power to remove from office any assessor for failure to perform his duty.

Articles of incorporation for the State Bank of Plummer, Idaho, have been filed at Coeur d'Alene. The institution is incorporated by Lawrence Connolly, lumber man, of Harrison and one of the directors of the Exchange National Bank of Spokane; Edwin T. Coman, president of the Exchange National Bank of

The Peoples State Bank, Huntington, Ind., has been incorporated with $50,000 capital stock, and a substantial surplus. The strongest citizens of Huntington county are identified with it. M. M. Seattle

Business in Seattle shows considerable improvement. The sentiment of merchants and bankers is extremely optimistic. Best advices from Alaska indicate that trade with that country will be large during the coming summer. Most merchants are preparing for one of the best seasons ever experienced in Alaska.

Bank clearings are again showing a gain over last year, notwithstanding the dullness of the lumber business which is the backbone of trade in the Northwest.

A feature of business in the Northwest is the heavy demand for flour and wheat from the Orient. February flour exportations from Seattle aggregated 267,000 barrels. The month's shipments were the heaviest of any month since just before the Russo-Japanese war. The flour shipments have shown an increase every month since September. Since the season opened 1,374,000 barrels of flour have been shipped.

Practically all of the Oriental flour business has been done by Puget Sound mills, more frequent callings from this port having done much to build up the flour trade here at the expense of Columbia River millers. It is said that practically all the space on the Oriental boats leaving Puget Sound between now and July 1st has been engaged for flour and wheat shipments.

The consolidation of the Odessa State Bank and the First National Bank of Odessa took place last week, and the Odessa State Bank has moved into the quarters of the First National Bank. The officers of the Union State Bank, for such is the name of the new corporation, are: G. W. Finney, president; W. R. Leslie and J. Kriegler, vice-presidents, and C.

T. Deets, cashier. The Union State Bank has a paid-up capital of $40,000, and undivided profits of $10,000.

The local money market is rather tight, although the demand for money is not particularly active. The 1911 canned salmon operations have been financed. Bank deposits are barely holding their own, but bankers always expect deposits to drop at this time of the year.

BANK BURGLARIES IN 1910

The Maryland Casualty Co. has just issued a complete record of the bank burglaries and bank hold-ups that occurred in this country during the year 1910. According to this record there were no less than 143 such crimes last year, resulting in money loss of $197,347 by burglaries and of $4,541 by hold-ups, a total of $201,888. The "Budget" of the Maryland Casualty Co. referring to the figures says: "These figures are as nearly accurate as it is possible to get them in a matter like bank burglary, which those most concerned do not care to advertise. As the list shows, the burglars are active throughout the country, and a noticeable feature of the 1910 raids was the frequency with which automobiles were used in escaping pursuit. Attempted burglaries and hold-ups are included in this list, because an attempt at burglary often destroys valuable bank property."

ANOTHER NEW CHICAGO BANK

Permission to organize the North Shore Trust Company, a new Highland Park financial institution, has been granted to J. Fred McGuire, Arthur O. Bercoe, and Charles A. Wrightman. Capital of $100,000 was authorized and a ninety-nine year charter granted.

In an article on wealthy men who walk to work the Minneapolis Tribune says of George F. Orde, who is vice-president of the First National; and such is fame: "George Orde, cashier of the First National Bank, is an enthusiastic pedestrian. The financier's special stunt is to walk homeward, straight up Lowry Hill without stopping for breath. Often Mr. Orde burdens himself with packages, scorn- ing to leave the health-giving exercise of carrying them home to delivery man or errand boy."

St. Paul has organized an association of commerce. An active membership list of 1,000 is expected before April 1st.

Des Moines, March 16.—Iowa bankers are coming into their own. Reports of the state banking department for condition of the state and savings banks and trust companies on February 8th show that from November 10th the date of the preceding call until February 8th, deposits in these institutions increased $9,865,494.06. The showing of the Des Moines national banks upon the date of the call of the comptroller for March 7th is taken as a good indication of other national banks in Iowa and is also flattering. The gain in the Des Moines nationals from the call of January 7th to March 7th is $2,768,000. The gain over the showing at the January call last year is $2,363,000. The combined deposits on January 30, 1910 were $14,852,000 as against $17,215,000 March 7th this year.

The net increase in the deposits for all the state, savings and trust companies of the state from February 10, 1910 to February 8, 1911 was $5,967,714.19. The increase in the number of banks during the year was 40 while there were eight new institutions launched between the date of the November and February calls. The decrease in overdrafts between the two calls was $376,080.73. The average reserve in all banks February 8, 1911 was 20.5 per cent.

Hear President Gurney

E. R. Gurney, president of the First National at Fremont, Neb., addressed the Des Moines Bankers Club at their regular monthly meeting at the Savery last week. "And he called upon them to pay up," was announced by Mr. Gurney as his text. Mr. Gurney thereupon preached a sermon on banking methods declaring that his text was taking from the thirteenth verse of the twenty-third chapter of the book of Hard Knocks. He declared that banking methods are not perfect to-day but showed how much better they are than ever before. Thus he drew a picture of what may be expected in the future.

Arrange for State Meeting

The state convention of the Iowa Bankers Association will be held at Mason City June 14th and 15th. This was the date decided upon at the meeting of the executive council of the I. B. A. at Mason City last week. Secretary Hall of the association was instructed to begin preparation for the program. It is expected that Frank Watts, president of the American Bankers Association will be one of the speakers. Secretary Hall has also written to Prof. Lawrence Laughlin of the University of Chicago and it is expected that he will deliver an address. Vice-President G. E. MacKinnon and former President Lee Stevens accompanied Mr. Hall to the Mason City conference. It is improbable that the executive council will be called together again prior to the state convention.

Penfield's Tangle

Another chapter has been written in the case of President E. J. Penfield, now missing, and the defunct Bank of Kelley. B. H. Gavitt has filed a petition to have an injunction dissolved which restrains him from disposing of a certificate of deposit for $1,000 which he accepted from Penfield in payment of a note which he says the banker had given him. The Central State of Des Moines secured the injunction. Gavitt alleges in his petition that he was told by the Central State that the certificate was good. Thereupon he took it over to the Century Savings which declined to make it good. He says he then went back to the Central State and was informed that the Century Savings had given him correct information and that the certificate was issued on a draft that had been discovered to be bogus. Gavitt demands judgment from the Central State for the amount of the bogus certificate.

Counterfeiters Taken

Officers from Savanna, Ill., took a little jaunt over into Iowa and apprehended four men near Sabula who were manufacturing counterfeit nickels. The officers found a quantity of the nickels hidden in the stump of a tree and confiscated a complete counterfeiters' outfit. The men arrested were John Carr, his two sons Benjamin and Eleny and a shoe string vender named Howard. Howard gave the tip which led to the raid when he was discovered with an unseemly number of the bogus nickels in his pocket.

Retires from Banking

Alonzo J. Barkley, who has retired from the Boone County Bank at Boone with which he was connected for twenty-seven years, is one of the well known pioneer bankers of Iowa. Mr. Barkley helped organize the institution in 1884. For the past twenty-two years he has been president. He recently sold his interest and has retired. Barkley served in the Civil War and was wounded in the shoulder. He was ten weeks in a Confederate prison. He has been active in politics and was representative in two Iowa legislatures.

Defeat Obnoxious Bill

Once more the bankers of the state have defeated the bill to abolish the office of school treasurer. The Iowa senate voted down the bill after a debate that consumed some little time. This measure comes up with each session of the legislature and each time it fails to emerge. Bankers oppose the bill because bankers are holding the office in most of the school districts of the state and they are successful in showing that they are in better condition to handle the funds than the county treasurers who are the interested backers of the bill each session.

Becomes Bank Examiner

Ellis D. Robb of Eldora has been made national bank examiner by Comptroller Murray and will succeed Examiner Jones of Algona who resigned recently. Mr. Robb was informed of his appointment upon his return from Washington where he successfully passed an examination. At one time, he was state bank examiner when B. F. Carroll was auditor but resigned because of business affairs that required his attention. There is still a vacancy to be filled in northwest Iowa where John Large resigned some time ago.

The lower house of the Iowa legislature has passed one of Representative Moore's bills relating to the publication of quarterly statements and providing for five yearly bank calls instead of four as at present. The section relating to the publication provides as follows: "The statement published in the newspapers shall not contain the name of the bank or banks in which the bank making the statement has on deposit funds subject to be drawn at sight nor shall said statement show the amount of liabilities due such bank on the part of the directors thereof." The bill does not exempt the banks from reporting to the state auditor the indebtedness of the officers and directors of the bank to the bank.

Two important bank bills have been introduced in the senate. The ways and means committee introduced a measure wiping out the present law taxing moneys and credits and establishing instead a flat rate of five mills. Senator Savage, an Adair banker, presented a bill enlarging the powers and duties of a trust company and providing that such companies shall serve as executors and administrators of estates or as guardians or trustees.

General Iowa Notes

Cashier Nelson of the Madison County Bank of Winterset and Miss Nell Whedon were married at the home of the bride in Winterset last week. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. W. S. Whedon, state president of the Iowa Women's Relief Corps.

P. J. Cilley has resigned as assistant cashier of the Citizens National at Spencer to become cashier of the Farmers at Hamburg.

The directors of the Farmers Savings at Roland have voted to convert the $10,000 surplus of the institution into capital stock. The institution has earned surplus and profits in excess of 50 per cent of its capital stock.

George Leopold, who purported to be an editor, took charge of the Demokrat, a German newspaper, forged the name of the owner of the paper to several checks, and decamped.

L. E. Stevens, president of the Century Savings, has purchased "The Boulders" a beautiful five acre tract in northwest Des Moines and will erect there a $10,000 residence for his father, W. H. Stevens of Ottumwa.

R. H. MacCartney, formerly well known in Des Moines has been advanced to the cashier-ship of the Security National at Cheney, Wash. Word has reached Des Moines that he has been instrumental to a large extent in the successful growth of the institution.

C. H. Martin, president of the People's Savings has been in New York and other eastern points on business.

Among the out of the city bankers in Des Moines recently were President W. C. Ralston and Cashier Geo. Schneider, both of the Bank of Pocahontas; Cashier R. C. Lilley, National of St. Paul; Cashier J. H. McCord, Citizens National of Spencer; Cashier T. R. Watts, Bank of Grand Junction; President O. J. Kalsen, Huxley Bank; Vice-President R. C. O'Malley, People's Savings of Perry; Cashier O. M. Thatcher, Luther Savings; President John Wilson, Banker of Reinbeck; Cashier J. H. Van Scoy, Bank of Rippey; President W. C. Berman, Newton Bank.

Aubrey Reynolds, son of President M. M. Reynolds of the Guthrie County Bank has been made assistant cashier of the Des Moines National. Mr. Reynolds is a nephew of George M. Reynolds of the Continental-Commercial of Chicago and of Arthur Reynolds, president of the Des Moines National.

Uninterrupted Service

From Pass Book to Collection Letter

The drudgery work can be done by machine, and old-fashioned hand methods in figures are positively a waste of money. Every detail of your work—every operation which you do—can be improved wonderfully with the use of a Burroughs Bookkeeping Machine. It will enable you to strike off balances of pass books, savings ledgers and cash in but a small fraction of the time formerly consumed in the same operations. With the Burroughs Bookkeeping Machine you can figure interest, take off depositors' statements and make up collection or remittance letters quicker, because right the first time.

When you place a Burroughs in your bank you acquire the greatest business helper of the age. But you also get with it Burroughs Service—that insures the greatest use possible from the machine.

Now think how Burroughs Service is managed; how it is divided into three distinct divisions in order that your bank may derive the fullest benefit from its purchase:

BURROUGHS SYSTEMS SERVICE—which is the gathering together of the very best ideas of the 110,000 Burroughs users; the improving and simplifying of them and placing them in form for presentation to you from time to time as suited to your needs.

BURROUGHS INSPECTION SERVICE—which is a careful and systematic method of keeping the machine itself in order. Not only that, but a new machine is furnished free, if any accident should happen—so that there is never a moment when you need be at a standstill.

BURROUGHS INVENTION SERVICE—which employs a corps of expert inventors and mechanics who are constantly at work endeavoring to make more widely useful machines—that will cover some extra phase of your work never before covered.

TROUBLE ABOUT AN OVERDRAFT

There is considerable interest in Coraopolis, a suburb of Pittsburgh, regarding an alleged overdraft made by a woman depositor of the Coraopolis National Bank, of Coraopolis, a suit instituted by the woman, and a statement issued by the bank's attorney. Mary Edna McKechnie, of New Sheffield, on February 10th, filed a suit against the bank, alleging that she had deposited $6,655, for which she had not been given credit. An investigation followed, in which it appeared that the cashier had permitted her to overdraw her account to the extent of $1,705. Cashier J. W. Heck made good the overdraft, and was suspended pending the suit. The bank states that the claim is unfounded.

BANK PENSION ESTABLISHED AT MINNEAPOLIS

At the beginning of the present year the Northwestern National Bank and the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company, of Minneapolis, joined with their officers and employees in the establishment of a fund to be known as The Northwestern National Bank Pension Fund.

The fund consists of contributions made by the members (the amount being a small percentage of each member's yearly salary), and contributions from the bank and trust company, the amounts of which bear a definite relation to the amounts paid by the members.

The moneys contributed are in the care of a board of trustees who have charge of their investment and proper application to the uses for which the pension fund was founded. These uses are, in brief, to care for officers or employees of either institutions in case of disability or accident, to relieve the necessities of their dependents in case of death, and to provide an old age annuity for those who have given their lives to the service and who may retire in security when too old.

BANKING BY MACHINERY

The Northwestern National bank letter for March has an interesting article on the modern way of "banking by machinery." Each year that passes says the letter is marked by the introduction of new forms of machinery to help the banker. Within the memory of even the youngest banker the use of modern machinery has lifted a tremendous mass of drudgery from the shoulders of the bank man. The criticism has been made that the boy who begins at the bottom with the modern bank does not learn to write or add. The force of this criticism is lessened directly as the need for hand work becomes less; and as a clerk escapes the drudgery of slow penmanship and arduous casting up of long columns of figures he is able to devote his abilities to more important matters not yet capable of being "run by machinery."

The experience of the Northwestern National Bank in this matter of mechanical helps is significant. Twelve years ago two adding machines, one telephone, one addressograph, a typewriter, and some obsolete money trays, a wash tub and wringer for copying letters, and a broken down pump for cancelling checks, comprised the bank's office appliances, which were fully up to the average standard of equipment of that day.

To-day over thirty adding machines are in use. An improved electrically operated addressing machine, with a complete outfit for making address dies and indexed card system, enables two clerks to furnish the addresses for over seventy thousand pieces of mail each month. This machine is also useful for heading statements, printing stockholders' lists, furnishing selected groups of addresses for the advertising department, etc. Three boys who used to operate the wringer and tub have been promoted to loftier employment by the introduction of a carbon system of copying correspondence and a like number who used to lick stamps and envelope flaps now see one sealing machine performing the last rite over all the outgoing mail as fast as one boy can feed it.

At the same time that machine operations increase the efficiency of the higher grades of bank clerks making them worth more money to their institutions by relieving them of hand work, and by giving them more time for headwork, the machines may be operated by employees whose salaries are less than it would be necessary to pay to persons capable of doing by hand the work of the machines.

It is hard to forecast with any certainty the mechanical possibilities of the future, but it would seem that signing his name for identification purposes is almost the only physical act of a banker or his customer which is beyond the reach of mechanics.

The whole transit business of the country bids fair to be handled by machine work as soon as the various bankers associations and their committees agree upon a satisfactory system of clearing house numbers for the banks in all the principal cities. Already machines are in operation furnishing printed statements with balances extended, and apparently the next sweeping improvement will be machine-operated ledgers. The whole situation of banking mechanics is one of peculiar satisfaction because there seems to be financial profit for every one concerned, including the machine man.

GARY ON RATE DECISION

Returning from Cuba, E. H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, a few days ago said: "It is my opinion that if the rate decision has had a depressing effect upon business conditions it will be temporary. From my information, it seems to me that business conditions are generally and materially improving. If this continues, as now seems probable, it necessarily follows that business of railroads will increase correspondingly, and in order to take care of their interests they must put and keep their tracks in good condition and largely increase their equipment. The different lines of business of the country are more or less tied together. It is time for all of us to take things as we find them and make the best of them. In such a country as this, where productive capacity is so great and increasing so rapidly, we shall find great opportunities for success.

"From present indications, new steel bookings will average between 35,000 and 40,000 tons a day, which marks a substantial improvement over average daily orders in January." The trouble with the country, Gary added, was politics. "But every one realizes that it is impossible to get rid of politics," he observed, "and therefore the only thing to do is to make the best of it."

HIGH PRICES FOR RARE COINS

One of the record premiums for coins paid in 1910 was $800 for a five dollar gold-piece made by the assayer Christopher Bechtler, who for at least twenty years conducted a private mint in Rutherford county, North Carolina. The price is all the more remarkable when it is considered that thirty years ago such coins were not even worth their stamped value.

It is its unique design that gives this coin its high value. It is thought to have been the first coin of the denomination made at the assayer's office. It is a good deal larger than the regular United States five dollar gold-piece and does not at all resemble it in design.

On the obverse, around the border, is inscribed, "C. Bechtler, Assayer." In the center of the field, in the form of a circle, are the words "Rutherford County." The reverse contains the inscription, in three lines, in the field, "5 Dollars, 20 Carats," while around the border is "North Carolina Gold."

The weight of the coin is 145 grains, although the five dollar piece of the United States of the period weighed only 135 grains, but the government's coin was of much greater fineness, and it is probable that the Bechtler coin had a value not in excess of $4.90, as the gold of which it is composed was strongly alloyed with silver.

This coin came to the notice of collectors for the first time last year and was regarded as the best preserved example of the Bechtler coinage known; it is also the only coin of the variety known. The design is similar to that of the other very rare Bechtler five dollar gold-piece; in fact, the new variety differs from it only in the omission of the inscription "150 Grs," which appears just below the line "20 Carats." The coin containing the weight in grains has a premium record of $785, but there are at least fifteen specimens known.

Among other finds made by coin collectors in 1910 was still one more specimen of the tiny silver half dime of 1802, which date is by far the rarest and highest in price of any coin of the denomination. All the 1802 half dimes are held at a high premium, while an unusually fine specimen brings an extraordinary sum.

BECOMES NATIONAL BANK

That it is the ultimate intention of the Corn Exchange Bank of New York to enter the national system as soon as the Aldrich plan is adopted, is the statement that was made by William A. Nash, chairman of the board, at an informal dinner last week, given to a number of bankers, at which Mr. Nash was the guest of honor. Mr. Nash declared that the Aldrich plan would make it feasible for the bank to carry the large number of branches which it has at the present time.

PROGRESS OF THE SOUTHWEST

San Antonio, Texas, March 15.—A hopeful spirit as the result of recent rains pervades all parts of southwest Texas and agricultural efforts are more active than they have been for some time. This hopefulness is not confined entirely to farming endeavors, but in a number of instances work of building cotton gins has been begun, those promoting the effort finding little difficulty in securing means to carry the work forward. Some time ago such work as this would not have been possible on account of unpromising conditions.

For the past month midwinter shipments of vegetables have been going on and this has brought a cash return that is serving to put agricultural interests in an easy condition. Of course there is a call for money with which to forward crop work, as is always the case at the beginning of the planting season, and while in some instances there has been an earlier call for this than usual, this is largely due to seasonable conditions making it possible for the farmer to begin his work earlier.

The last report by the banks of this city showed an increase in deposits and reserve fund. While the clearing house in this city does not give out a report, following the usage of many cities of this state and the country at large, it is known that the volume of business is satisfactory and constantly increasing.

For some time an effort has been on to build a railroad from this city to the Brownsville country and at a meeting Monday night it was announced by the committee having this work in hand that subscriptions to the primary fund, which will be used by a construction company, have been very liberal and obtained with little effort, more than $200,000 of the required half million has been guaranteed, and it was said little difficulty will be encountered in securing the balance of the initial fund. The manner with which men of means interested in the growth of this city and the country south have taken in hand the financing of the effort gives a very accurate notion of financial conditions here at present, and also that those who have a line on prospects of the future have implicit confidence in the stability both of the present and that to come.

WYOMING BANK LEGISLATION

The Wyoming Bankers Association announces that the legislature of that state has passed the following bills recommended to that body by the executive committee of the association, namely:

An act providing that chattel mortgages may be recorded, prescribing a form of mortgage, and fixing a uniform fee of one dollar for the service where the form agrees generally with the act. An act providing for the payment of deposits in trust. An act providing for the payment of the deposits where the same appear in two names. An act relating to derogatory statements affecting banks. An act exempting mortgages and the debt thereby secured from taxation. The bill relating to false statements to obtain credit failed to pass.

A bill was introduced in and passed by the senate exempting mortgages and moneys and credits from taxation but there were some grounds for believing this measure would not be favorably considered in the house. Subsequent action on the part of the house confirmed this judgment. In the meantime the association caused to be prepared and introduced in the house, a bill exempting mortgages and the debt thereby secured from taxation. This bill was passed by the house and likewise by the senate, and is a law.

James H. White, president of the First National Bank of Manchester, Ky., committed suicide last week by drinking carbolic acid.

CHICAGO

Favors Publicity

Atlanta, Ga., March 15.—At the Southern commercial congress last week, George W. Perkins of New York delivered the speech that attracted probably the most attention. He spoke on "Modern Industrialism," and in the course of his address strongly advocated publicity by business concerns.

"More and more is public opinion demanding full, open and honest accounting from business concerns," said Mr. Perkins, "and the more far-sighted business concerns that adopted such methods a few years ago are having less trouble with their labor and the public than other concerns, because both their labor and the public know what the profits of the business are and what percentage its labor is receiving in wages.

"And in connection with the relations of business to the government, I believe that publicity, full and frank, will go a very long way toward correcting any evils that exist and preventing any that may threaten.

"Each day it becomes more and more apparent that all questions in this country must be settled at the bar of public opinion.

"If our laws regulating large business concerns provide for proper and complete publicity, so that the labor of a concern would know what was being done, so that governmental authorities would know what was being done, so that stockholders would know what was being done, and the public, which was being served, would know what was being done, many of our present difficulties would disappear; and in place of this being an element of weakness to any given business concern, it would be an element of strength, for, under such conditions, a set of men operating a given business, if they were able enough mentally to be successful managers, would soon come to realize that they could only succeed by being fair to one and all.

"I believe, further, that there is more safety to the public and to labor in having very large business enterprises than in having small or medium-sized ones, for the larger the undertaking is the more generally it is observed and the more thoroughly its affairs are scrutinized. Then, too, the large concern provides more steady employment for labor and minimizes to almost nothing the chance of financial collapse and failure."

HEARINGS ON ALDRICH PLAN

Washington, March 14.—The national monetary commission will give hearings on Aldrich's plan for currency reform. This was decided at a meeting of that body. It is expected that the executive committee of the American Bankers Association will be heard in about 10 days, and that thereafter there will be a series of hearings for educational purposes.

It may be that some of the hearings, for purposes of convenience, may be held in commercial centers of the West.

Following the announcement that the President had signed the new Panama bond bill, which exempts these bonds from use as security for national bank circulation, and that $25,000,000 to $50,000,000 of the new Panama 3 per cent bonds will soon be issued, it was learned that the St. Louis Southwestern Railway Co. has sold $800,000 Central Arkansas & Eastern Railway first mortgage 30-year 5 per cent bonds and that the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Memphis Railway Co. has sold an issue of $2,700,000 refunding 4 per cent bonds.

William M. Gilbert, of Neenah, a wealthy banker, was married recently to Mrs. Mary Felker Cameron, of Oshkosh.

The expected pardon for John R. Walsh has not been issued.

SEEKS FOREIGN BOND MARKET

New York, March 14.—Comptroller Prendergast has sent to Albany a bill permitting the city to sell city bonds abroad. Although the details have not been worked out, it is understood that Mr. Prendergast's plan is to arrange that when there is a sale of bonds here bids shall be opened on the same day in London, Paris and Berlin. At present foreign investors bid through fiscal agents in this city. Another bill that the comptroller has drawn authorizes the sale of short time notes in anticipation of sales of corporate stock.

It is the opinion of the comptroller that the passage of these two bills, as well as the passage of his bill for the semiannual collection of taxes, should tend to advance the price of city bonds. This opinion is based upon his belief that owing to the flexibility which will come from the issue of short time notes he will not be forced into an unfavorable market, but will be enabled to take advantage of the best conditions for a bond sale.

in the case is quite beyond my comprehension. Didn't he confess to having misapplied the bank's funds, didn't he knowingly speculate with funds entrusted to his care for safe keeping? He said he did. Didn't he lose them? He said he did. Why under heaven shouldn't he have been punished for thus violating his trust? The fact that he and his family stood high in public esteem is but added reason why punishment should have been swift and severe. He knew better, he may not have planned deliberately to do it, yet he did it. That is the point, and he has received merited punishment. Now why should you of all men, why should THE CHICAGO BANKER of all papers, ask mitigation of punishment? Your remark about his family and friends reminds one of certain other remarks made by a certain United States senator recently. They are to my mind entirely foreign to the case. Innocent sufferers there must be always when men go wrong, but will it make fewer of them to condone and cover up wrong doing?

I CANNOT but feel that you are wrong. Dishonesty is rampant to an extent which is well nigh demoralizing. No odds whom, or where, or why, dishonesty is dishonesty, nothing more, nothing less. Bankers and bankers papers should be the last to advocate leniency towards dishonest bankers. Let us try to raise rather than lower the standard amongst ourselves. We can do more than anybody else in that line, and are blameworthy if we do not take the initiative in every case and follow it to the end. I am sorry you said what you did."

SPECIAL pleas generally are one sided. We admit all that Mr. Bigelow admitted and most of what our correspondent says. But the big, powerful organization erred when it robbed Mr. Bigelow and his family of honors it had bestowed upon them. It didn't even ask his consent.

IT isn't the business of any particular set of men to assume and bolster up false records as a preachment of honesty in banking. There are other kinds of honesty. Altering a public record isn't one of them. The big A. B. A. doesn't need to hoist up its reputation by altering its records. Altering the books of a bank is a crime but it may cause less suffering and injustice than altering the public records of "the biggest association on earth," as one speaker described it at Los Angeles.

HANOVER NATIONAL, New York, shows how it pays to go after bankers' balances. Its individual deposits are $27,486,770.26 while it has from national banks $34,357,551.33. It carries deposits of state banks and banks $12,685,008.84 and of trust companies and savings banks $18,043,525.30. Total due other banks $65,086,085.47. But few other banks can equal this showing.

JAMES M. DONALD (known to thousands of bankers as "Jim" Donald) was for years a conspicuous convention attendant and a power in A. B. A. circles. He was a bank builder of undoubted genius. Not long after THE CHICAGO BANKER began publishing bankers' portraits Mr. Donald started a scrap book. Every one of our thousands of faces were pasted up, and indexed.

WHEN Mr. Donald learned that an Iowa, Wisconsin or other western state banker was in New York he took out his scrap book and posted up. When Mr. Banker hove in sight he promptly was called by name. His fellow officials were inquired for by name and other bankers in the same town as well.

Mr. Donald often said it was the hit of his life in creating and cementing friendships.

Yes, there are others but they still are at it and "we shan't tell." Mr. Donald now is chairman of the board and William Woodward is president of the Hanover. Some say that Alex. Campbell has fallen heir to the scrap book, but he probably knows most of them without looking them up.

DIAMOND NATIONAL, Pittsburgh, has five and one half millions in deposits and the Diamond Savings one and a quarter millions. William Price is president of both banks. D. C. Wills, chapter enthusiast, is cashier of the national, and L. E. Heusman of the savings bank.

NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE, Kansas City, reports twenty-two and a half millions. Cashier Jas T. Bradley is reported as having fully "made good."

HERE is a too common swindle reported from Washington. We quote a look out notice from Secretary Kauffman: "Under name of Henry Clay, a party agreed to buy a $5,000 interest in a laundry at Hoquiam, and talked of other investments. Borrowed $25 from one of the owners and had him endorse a draft, dated February 5, 1911, for $150, drawn by Henry Clay on W. L. Moody and Co., bankers, Galveston, Texas, which was returned marked 'No such account on our books.'"

PROBABLY this scamp now is going under the name of some other of our country's great men, but the plan is just the same. By agreeing to buy for $5,000 something for which the seller would be glad to get three, he is enabled to get the necessary cash to keep up appearances and to reach the next town.

MARCH 18th will be view day at the new building of the Old National of Oshkosh, Wis. It is located at the corner of Main and Washington and one of the best in the state.

"A MILLION DOLLAR BANK" is the proud top line on the First National folder from Sheldon, Ia. It has been a regular dividend payer for twenty-three years. Frank, Fred, and J. E. Frisbee are three out of the five directors. F. W. Bloxham is cashier.

AT the annual meeting of the Illinois Fraternal Congress held in this city W. G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust, was elected a member of the executive committee, representing the Knights of Pythias. This congress endorsed the "Mobile Bill" and will urge its passage by the Illinois legislature. It provides state supervision and examination of fraternal beneficiary societies (but doesn't include private banks?).

"HAVING large resources, conservative management, and a representative board of directors, and being equipped with unexcelled facilities for the transaction of all branches of legitimate banking, the First Bank and Trust Company, Cairo, Illinois, solicits the accounts of individuals, firms and corporations as well as out of town banks, promising the utmost liberality of treatment consistent with prudent business methods. Inquiry is invited."

E. R. FANCHER'S bank, the Union National of Cleveland, aims to be a commercial bank and has deposits of over thirteen millions. Geo. H. Worthington is president, G. A. Coulton cashier. Mr. Fancher is the (very) active vice-president.

CENTRAL NATIONAL BANK of Buffalo, was organized five years ago with a capital of $200,000, which remains the same, and with no surplus. It has accumulated an earned surplus of $100,000 and fixed the quarterly dividend rate for 1911 at 8 per cent per annum, 1910 having paid 7 per cent, 1909 6 per cent, 1908 5 per cent, 1907 4 per cent, the first year paying no dividend. Deposits are one and three quarter millions.

A MERICAN TRUST, St. Louis, has twenty-five directors and solicits accounts of banks, trust companies, etc. The deposits are over three millions.

A RTHUR REYNOLDS' Des Moines National reports five and one half millions in deposits. CASHIER.

ELEVATED RAILWAY DEAL

It seems probable that within the next two weeks the directors of the different elevated railroads in Chicago, and through them the stockholders, will make an alternate offer of cash or securities for the several properties. Despite the fact that the eastern banking interests had it suggested to them that the Blair offer of last summer was too high, there is reason to believe that Henry Blair does not intend to minimize in any way the cash terms which were then agreed upon.

If the deal is to be carried out it is to be done on the advantageous terms, if such they were, that were originally proposed and agreed to by the boards of directors of the several lines.

The terms of the alternate offer of securities in a new company in exchange for stock in the present companies has not been made public. In this respect also there will be no change in what was originally contemplated. The entire matter is to be carried out in good faith.

There are yet some details to be arranged to the entire satisfaction of the bankers before an official offer can be made. But the matter has been thoroughly thrashed over and every angle of importance considered. It has been a long and persistent effort to get the bankers to agree to all the conditions, but it is believed that no serious matter remains in the way of presenting the cash and securities proposition to the different companies.

In the meantime it is announced that the $18,000,000 4 per cent bonds of the Northwestern Elevated will be taken up on September 1st, the date of maturity. The company will be obliged to do this regardless of the merger deal. In the event of the latter carrying, however, the redemption will be made easier.

The elevated stocks and bonds were quiet on the local exchange. One of the roads is reported to be making an indifferent showing, various reasons being ascribed, the principal one lack of enterprise. Two of the lines are showing fair improvement, but altogether the changes in earning power have not been marked in the last few months.

NEW YORK BANK CHANGE

Joseph S. House, cashier of Mechanics and Metals National Bank, New York, and Robert P. Zobel, president of the Brunswick Realty Co., were elected directors of Century Bank on Thursday to succeed Leroy W. Baldwin and Henry Dimse. J. F. Kennedy succeeds Mr. Dimse as vice-president, and C. S. Mitchell, cashier of the bank, was also made vice-president.

A change in the ownership of some Century Bank stock, acquired by friends of the Mechanics and Metals, is said to be responsible for the election of an officer of Mechanics and Metals to the board of Century Bank. That institution itself, it was said, is not concerned in the changes.

Big Banks Moving

An event of more than passing interest in Chicago is the removal of Fort Dearborn National Bank from its present offices to the magnificent building which its stockholders recently purchased on the opposite side of Monroe Street.

The new twenty-story building which has been acquired for Fort Dearborn National's permanent home has for some time been occupied by Continental-Commercial Trust and Savings Bank. The latter has just vacated the premises, moving to the Continental-Commercial building at Adams and Clark streets. For the next few days a large force will push the work of renovating and then on April 3d Fort Dearborn National will throw open the doors of its new home. The ground floor will be given up to the bond and savings departments and the main banking floor to the general commercial business.

Fort Dearborn National has practically doubled its business in the last two years. On February 5, 1909, its deposits were $11,600,000; on the 7th of the present month they were $21,500,000. And other features have grown in proportion. While this growth is phenomenal, the bank's record of development from the very first has been surprising and gratifying. The institution was organized 24 years ago and for 16 years has occupied the banking floor at the southwest corner of Clark and Monroe streets. For the last two years the lack of office space has been painfully apparent, hampering the business to some extent and preventing the organization of the contemplated bond and savings departments. With the acquisition of the new building on the northeast corner, diagonally across the street from the old location, there is ample room for the present business as well as for the contemplated expansion.

Not only will Fort Dearborn National and its auxiliaries have room enough for the next quarter century's growth in its three-million dollar building but its staff will have the satisfaction and comfort of conducting business in a structure which is at once substantial and artistic. This building is recognized as one of the most imposing and beautiful that the country can boast of. It is of steel and granite construction, with marble interior. Each of the many offices is a work of art and a model of convenience. On page 28 of this number are given illustrations to show some of the best features of the building.

The official staff of the bank is to remain practically unchanged. Vice-President Nelson N. Lampert is to serve as president of the trust company and there will be several appointments in that department early in April.

Money Easy

Chicago bankers state that the promised improvement in the money market is not up to expectations. Counter loans are rarely above 5 per cent and the market is quoted $4\frac{1}{2}$ to 5. Some 4 per cent commercial paper is reported. Real estate loans are 5 to 6 per cent, with a fair volume of business. Accounts are about stationary.

Bankers Who Advocate Soil Conservation

JOSEPH CHAPMAN, JR.
Minneapolis, Minnesota

Mr. Chapman is one of the forceful, thinking men who came up from the horizon early and stayed there. He was one of the speakers before the Chicago Association of Commerce on Wednesday. His state association has been quite active in the back-to-the-soil movement and in seeking some means of keeping the boys on the farm. Mr. Chapman is the real father of the chapter movement; the fight on the express companies doing a banking business, and, for real A. B. A. money orders. He is the kind of worker one would like to see made chairman of the big council, and it's about Northwest's time.

Mr. Harris will be the next president of the Illinois Bankers Association, at present holding the quiescent job of vice-president. As chairman of the council he started the ball rolling looking to a revised constitution and to the adoption of complete bank supervision over all forms of banking in Illinois. He has led in the soil conservation movement among Illinois bankers, and now is head of that committee of the state association. It is likely that his occupation of the chair in the Illinois association will lead to much improved conditions, higher working ideals in the association, and perhaps to better banking laws.

W. G. Edens of Central Trust had as his guests at the commerce association banquet Wednesday, Earle H. Payne and Ernest B. Thomas of Rushville, Ind. Mr. Payne is president of Peoples National Bank and Mr. Thomas an official of Peoples Loan and Trust.

Exchange Firmer

Foreign exchange rates during the week have been firm and steady with an upward trend. Strength in London exchange was due in a large measure to the demand to meet quarterly payments there. Discounts, however, have grown weaker, with the result that demand rates at the close of the week are slightly off. Quotations follow: Bankers' demand sterling, 486.20; Bankers' 60 days' sight sterling 484 $\frac{1}{8}$; Bankers' demand francs, 520 1-32; Bankers' 60 days' sight francs, 522 $\frac{1}{2}$; Bankers' demand marks, 95 1-16; Bankers' 60 days' sight marks, 94 7-16-1-32.

Banking Opinion

Jacob M. Appel, vice-president of LaSalle Street National Bank, Chicago, has returned from a trip to St. Paul, Minneapolis and some of the lesser Minnesota cities. His visit was mainly on business and he took occasion to study the financial aspect of farming conditions in the spring wheat states. He stated to a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER:

"A trip to the Twin cities and the Northwest is always interesting and exhilarating, particularly so when you find zero weather and good business. I encountered both. The clean streets, beautiful buildings, evidences of prosperity and the hustle and bustle remind the Chicagoan of Michigan Avenue and State Street of his own city. Minneapolis and St. Paul are great towns with a great future. I believe their growth and prosperity are in a measure due to the rivalry existing between them.

"Apropos of that rivalry there is an old story of Ole Olson, the Swede who was a member of the Minneapolis school board when that board was in a turmoil over the question

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

CHICAGO ASSOCIATION OF COMMERCE on Wednesday gave what our show friends would call a double bill. The two returned prodigal sons, Joseph Chapman, Jr., of Minneapolis and B. F. Harris, Jr., of Champaign were the orators of the day at a special meeting which the association devoted to soil conservation and vocational education.

THESE two Jr. bankers are just returned from a month spent along the shores of the Panama Canal and in visiting other tropical places. They were given a cordial reception, both talked interestingly, and everybody appeared to enjoy the occasion.

W. G. EDENS was the sable hued individual hidden in the cord wood. As secretary of the Illinois Bankers Association's committee on the "back to the soil" movement, Mr. Edens planned and arranged the whole matter. He is about as active in the Chicago Association of Commerce as he always has been in the forward movements of the Illinois organization.

TEXAS is to have an attendance of at least one thousand persons at its "old style" convention this year. This we have directly over the almost readable signature of J. W. Hoopes, secretary. Mr. Hoopes is a power in southwestern banking affairs and is considered always in the front rank among the potential secretaries.

M. R. HOOPES is very proud of acceptances which he already has from George M. Reynolds of this city and Charles H. Huttig of St. Louis to be among the speakers. Others mentioned in this connection are Joseph Hirsch of Corpus Christi, J. F. Scott of Houston, F. M. Law of Beaumont, and W. F. McCaleb of San Antonio.

TEXAS conventions are strong attractions to the ambitious builders up of balances among the big reserve city banks. No other state is going forward by such large strides in purely banking lines and no other state produces more desirable accounts. These conditions always coupled with the good times provided by the Texas bankers, draw the crowd.

NASHVILLE bankers already are preparing to give the members of the executive council of the American Bankers Association and the committeemen a good time when they visit that city the first three days in May. Many of the trust company members including Oliver C. Fuller of Milwaukee who is the head of the trust company section, will go direct from Nashville to New York City.

THE purpose of this eastern trip at this time will be to attend the big trust companies' banquet which has been arranged in that city to discuss questions of great interest to trust company banks and bankers.

THE CHICAGO-NASHVILLE special train of all compartment cars will leave this city Saturday evening, April 29th at about 6:20 p. m. over the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railway. Practically all the space is taken and a splendid time is anticipated. There will be a good dinner served in the evening and a diner will be prepared to serve breakfast in the morning. The train will reach Nashville about 8:25 a. m. This is Nashville's most favorable season of the year. A busy entertainment program will be in force practically all of the time the bankers remain in that city.

PRESIDENT WATTS of the American Bankers Association has been making it a point to provide something for everybody who will be present. The ladies in particular will be well cared for and it is expected that a large majority of those in attendance will bring their wives.

IOWA bankers are getting a great many communications these days from bankers outside of the state owing to the fact that the telegraphic announcement of the time for holding the state convention at Mason City contained a typographical error. The big meeting for June 14th and 15th has been heralded abroad as a convention of the Iowa Breeders Association instead of the Iowa Bankers. We call upon our old chum, Charles H. McNider, who put Mason City on the financial map and kept it there; to send out a few postal cards and correct this misinformation.

WORD has been sent out that the Bankers Guaranty Trust Company, located in the McCormick Building, Chicago, is preparing to complete an organization and that stock is being offered for sale. Thomas L. Matkins, Jr., is the vice-president.

H. H. OGDEN, formerly cashier of the Old State National at Evansville, Indiana, has accepted the presidency of the First National at Muskogee, Oklahoma. Mr. Ogden had a fine record at Evansville and his friends there predict his complete success in his new location.

C. C. BURFORD, with the Busey Bank, Urbana, Ill., and who is the handy man of THE CHICAGO BANKER for Central Illinois, dropped into Chicago for a day or two last week. On Wednesday he attended the regular meeting of the ways and means committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce, and he heard the report of the special committee of that body on the condition and needs of the University of Illinois, of which he is an alumnus after which the committee voted to endorse the request of the University for $2,700,000 appropriation at the hands of the present legislature. On Thursday Mr. Burford lunched with the Illini Club at the Boston Oyster House. The club is made up of former students of the University of Illinois.

AUSTIN (TEX.) NATIONAL reports over three millions in deposits which is going some, even in Texas.

ANOTHER crack bank is the Commercial National of Shreveport, La., "largest in the state outside of New Orleans." Deposits are five and a quarter millions.

JUST to show that there are dissenting opinions we quote Wm. Ingle, vice-president and cashier of the Merchants National, Baltimore, as saying that "an account reaching the bank through advertising usually is that of the floater who wants something for nothing, and one which in turn gradually is exhausting those who think that they want such business." Of course we have no information as to the character of the mediums used by the Merchants. The character of the replies are largely governed by this fact. If he advertised in a popular magazine, as one or two banks in Chicago did a few years ago, we are not at all surprised at his experience.

ON the other hand we quote from a letter signed by F. W. Ellsworth, publicity manager of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York and formerly holding the same position in the First National of Chicago. Mr. Ellsworth has gone into the subject of bank advertising at great length. For a time his Chicago institution was partly skeptical on that subject, probably owing to misplaced confidence in over estimated mediums. Mr. Ellsworth writes to THE CHICAGO BANKER from his New York station: "The Guaranty Trust Company would like very much to be identified with THE CHICAGO BANKER and its clientele and if the position indicated is agreeable, kindly let us know and we will forward contract."

NOW you have the two opposing opinions, one from Mr. Ingle of the Merchants of Baltimore, the other from Mr. Ellsworth whose experience and qualifications are undoubted. You can take your choice.

GUARANTY TRUST COMPANY of New York in statement issued in response to the recent call, as of February 28th, shows total resources of over $173,000,000, with deposits exceeding $133,000,000. This shows a comfortable increase in deposits in two months, or since the annual statement of December 31, 1910, of over $9,000,000, and again in total resources of over $20,000,000. The undivided profit account reaches total of nearly $4,000,000 as against $3,200,000 on December 31st.

LEVI P. MORTON is chairman of the Guaranty board, Alexander J. Hemphill is president, while Chas. H. Sabin is the executive vice-president. The bank is located at Fifth Avenue and Forty-third Street, and transacts a general banking business, giving particular attention to household as well as business accounts. Safe deposit vaults of the most modern construction are, together with the coupon rooms, located on the ground floor thus avoiding the necessity of ascending and descending stairs.

JOHN E. PRICE has sent out a statement showing the relative standing of the Seattle banks for March 7th according to deposits. The Seattle National heads the list with $14,745,461.43 in deposits. This reveals the secret of the bank's quarterly dividends of five per cent on one million capital. This bank has a

Bankers Aid Conservation Move

Joseph Chapman, Jr., B. F. Harris and R. E. Hieronymus speak at Chicago Commerce Association Meeting

A leading part in the national movement to bring business men and farmers into closer relationship is being taken by the Chicago Association of Commerce. The character and scope of this movement were fittingly brought out in the great program presented in Chicago Wednesday at the regular meeting of the ways and means committee of the association. The speaking was in connection with a noon banquet at LaSalle Hotel.

The subject of "Soil Conservation and Vocational Education" as affecting the agricultural and commercial interests of the state of Illinois and the city of Chicago in particular was discussed by the following speakers:

Joseph Chapman, Jr., vice-president, Northwestern National Bank, Minneapolis;

B. F. Harris, vice-president, First National Bank, Champaign;

Robert Enoch Hieronymus, secretary, Illinois educational commission, Springfield.

The program and speakers were furnished through the joint efforts of the members of subdivision No. 11, banks and bankers, and subdivision No. 65, education. The first named committee consists of W. G. Edens, acting chairman, James M. Hurst, W. C. Cook, W. T. Bruckner, and T. C. Neal. The members of the committee on education of the association are Morton McCormac, chairman, Edmund W. Burke, John J. Hattstaedt, Nathaniel Butler and L. S. Cook.

The meeting was arranged thus jointly that the subject of agriculture or soil conservation, and that of vocational education, in which the members of the Bankers Association of Illinois, educators and others are taking special interest might be considered at one of the gatherings of the ways and means committee, where there always is a good attendance.

Bankers are Brought In Special invitations were sent out by President Harry A. Wheeler of the association, to every bank president in Chicago, and to other bankers who it was thought might be interested in these subjects. Invitations were also sent to President Crabtree, chairman of the council, Phillips, Treasurer Lockwood, and Secretary Crampton, and to all members of the committee on agriculture and vocational education of the Bankers Association of Illinois. Messrs. B. F. Harris, chairman, Champaign, W. G. Edens, committee secretary, Chicago, Harry Schirding, Petersburg, William George, Aurora, and George Pasfield, Jr., Springfield, William Butterworth, president Peoples Savings Bank and Trust Company, Moline, and Dr. W. E. Taylor, soil expert of Deere and Company of Moline were also invited.

Special effort was made by the committees to interest the members of other subdivisions of the association, viz.; No. 17, railroad, R. H. Aishton, chairman; No. 25, packers and allied industries, A. N. Benn, chairman; No. 26, board of trade and kindred interests, A. J. White, chairman; No. 55, stocks, bonds and commercial paper, M. H. Cutter, chairman; No. 58, brewers, malsters, brewers and bottlers machinery and supplies, H. Scarborough, chairman; No. 66, trade journals, particularly the editors of dailies and the representatives in Chicago of leading financial papers published in the neighboring states; No. 73, members at large, Geo. A. H. Scott, chairman, and No. 78, live stock and horse commission, Kay Wood, chairman.

Elmer H. Adams, chairman of the ways and means committee, presided and put through the extensive program on time and with the happiest humor.

City Teacher Menaces Farm

Joseph Chapman, Jr., in his speech on the problems of rural life said in part:

"The city girl who goes into rural communities to teach is a menace to the agricultural future of the nation. She strikes at the backbone of the country's prosperity.

"From her position on the rostrum of the little red schoolhouse the teacher from the city turns the thoughts of her boy pupils into other channels than those leading to the raising of cattle and corn.

"The present system of education trains boys away from the farm," said the speaker. "As a result of this influence on his mind at a critical period the boy fails to see later the possibilities that lie in the scientific development of farm land, and, believing his future lies in the city, soon deserts the life of tilling the soil."

In the establishing of agricultural high schools Mr. Chapman sees the only hope of overcoming the prejudice against the farm and in getting out of the soil what it really owes to the country. He advised Illinoisans to take heed of the situation.

"Ten agricultural high schools were provided for in Minnesota two years ago," he said. "In a canvass of the state we could not find enough teachers to man the schools. Ten more schools will now be established.

"We must turn back to the soil—keep close to the dirt—if we are to continue as a prosperous nation. In the rural consolidated schools agriculture is going to have its place."

Harris on Importance of Work

B. F. Harris in the course of his remarks said:

As a business man and farmer, I am not in the habit of making a set talk, therefore as the subject is so wide and our time so limited, I will confine myself to manuscript.

In his letter of the seventeenth, making this appointment, President Wheeler said, of the questions for discussion, "You know these are matters of much importance to the business and agricultural interests of the state of Illinois, and particularly affect the Chicago market, and for that reason, this association's committee and your Illinois Bankers Association committee are joining hand on this occasion, to properly place these questions before the members of both associations."

I wish to thank you, therefore, on behalf of my committee, for the opportunity to co-operate in this good work and for the place you have given us on your program.

The Hon. James Bryce, British Ambassador, spoke recently of the "new force risen in American cities, which must be dealt with and which has a peculiar power for good. The commercial organization, properly constituted as to policy and personnel, wields an influence, not only in the promotion of industrial and commercial development, but also as a wholesome civic factor. This non-political commercial and civic body may become the strongest factor in collecting, focusing and diffusing public opinion; in cultivating higher aims and purposes."

Splendidly is the Chicago Association of Commerce doing its public spirited work and long since has it become a potent factor in matters for the public weal and in much of this good work all, or many of the class, trade or professional associations of the state should join. It is in this spirit, realizing the responsibilities and duties of good citizenship, that the Bankers Association of Illinois joins in this work for soil conservation.

The success and prosperity of every age and of every nation, their very existence and continuance, were and are based upon agriculture, and the character of that agriculture determined the life, the growth, the decadence or death of that age or nation.

So, to-day, a permanent, successful agriculture based on soil conservation, is our most prominent problem, for commerce waits on agriculture and banking on both.

I will not attempt to weary you with statistics, for your association has been addressed by Dr. Hopkins and is more or less advised of a declining soil fertility in this great country and state; to decreasing crop yields, due to lack of proper cropping methods and soil feeding.

In the face of all this, you are aware of a rapidly growing population, and that the last of the new land is in sight, in fact is soon to carry the furrows of the plow, for the earth has been encompassed and "Westward Ho" is no more, except as a by-word, and we must face the inevitable, for if we are not to have the makeshift of new soils, to keep up the volume of production, then assuredly we must have new methods in agriculture, if our agriculture is to sustain the nation or even itself, for now, in many localities, the problem is not so much to make two blades grow where one grew before as it is to keep the one growing.

Intelligent Farming Needed

A few years since we were a great grain exporting nation, now we are needing most of our crops at home.

Address, F18 care of Chicago Banker

Urges Bankers to Borrow

Rapids explains his hobby that Banks are too much averse to using their own Credit in times of need.

George M. Reynolds at a Clearing House Banquet in Cedar

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, March 20.—The use of its own credit by a bank is one of the things which George M. Reynolds, of Chicago, believes to be at times most advisable. In speaking before the bankers of this city, the other night, he strongly advocated banks to become borrowers at certain times. They are lenders of money, but they hate to be borrowers. They condemn in themselves what they practice toward others. When a bank appears as a borrower, he said, it is often used against it by other banks. But for a bank to be a borrower ought rather to be taken as an evidence of its strength of credit. A bank that can borrow $100,000 in some other place, where money at the time may be abundant and put it to use in the city in which it does business would be conferring many benefits upon that community and its business interests. Money is often cheap in New York, while it is dear in the West because New York has a surplus and the West has a deficiency. The thing for banks to do at such times is to go to New York and borrow what the West needs.

Mr. Reynolds strongly advocated this idea and urged it upon the attention of bankers. He could see in it some of the solutions of monetary problems with which this country is periodically afflicted. The main thing is always to have the money where it is needed at a particular time and the bankers are the men who should make provision for such distribution of it. The fact that Mr. Reynolds advocated such an idea will have great weight with bankers. He is himself the most eminent banker of the West, a man who has arisen from an $8 a week clerkship to the control of the destinies of a bank with assets that amount to a quarter of a billion dollars, and he has made the rise in less than a score of years. If he does not know banking business, who does know?

The Cedar Rapids clearing house gave a fine dinner at the Hotel Montrose at which President Geo. M. Reynolds, of the Continental and Commercial National of Chicago, was the guest of honor and the speaker. More than a hundred representative men, many of them from out of town, sat down at the well laden tables, beautifully decorated with flowers. The menu was an abundant one and the dinner was one of the best that the hotel has served.

After the eating came the speaking. Kent Ferman, of the Cedar Rapids National, had been selected as toastmaster, and he discharged the duties of that office in a most satisfactory and happy manner. His duties were few, indeed, for there was only one speaker and that was Mr. Reynolds.

Mr. Reynolds spoke for fully an hour. His special subject on the program "Impending Financial Legislation and the Duty of Capital to the Public." The pending legislation to which reference was had was the Aldrich bill, a tentative measure introduced by the senator from Rhode Island and intended to bring to a focus the much talked of need of monetary reform.

Mr. Reynolds does not pose as an orator, but he is a very convincing talker. He spoke throughout the evening in a conversational tone rather than in the oratorical manner. But toward the last, while he was dwelling upon the duties of capital to the country, he became fairly aglow with his subject and he spoke with both vehemence and with eloquence. It was an instance of a man thoroughly imbued with his subject and as thoroughly convinced of the duties of capital, that is of men who represent capital and who handle it as bankers. At the conclusion of his speech Mr. Reynolds was strongly applauded, the applause amounting almost to an ovation. It showed that he had made clear a somewhat mystical subject and the men who had listened to him were thankful to him for such a presentation of a subject in which all are so vitally interested.

In the beginning of his speech Mr. Reynolds referred to the fact that he is an Iowa man, born in Guthrie county, reared in its schools and who met with his first success in business life in Des Moines. He has spent thirteen years in Chicago and during that time he has risen from the position of a cashier in a bank of that city to the presidency of a bank that represents a quarter of a billion dollars in assets. Such a career is staggering to most minds. Of late years he has given much attention to the larger question of finance. So conspicuous have these services been that he was offered the secretaryship of the treasury, an office which he declined because his duties were already greater than those that pertain to that important national office.

GEORGE M. REYNOLDS
President Continental and Commercial National Bank, Chicago

Mr. Reynolds is an altruist as well as a great bank president. He does not believe that a man has rendered his full measure of service to the world when he has made money for himself or with which to endow his family. A man owes other services to his community and to the world. Mr. Reynolds has a sincere desire to be of service to his fellowmen in the settlement of great national problems. He is that kind of a man. He has not outgrown his Iowa birth and environments. He is as true now to the old ideals as he was when he came up from Panora, a country banker-boy with a career in his mind and an ambition in his heart.

It is almost impossible to fully summarize

Mr. Reynolds' address. After referring to the needs of a more stable monetary system, he took up the plan suggested by Mr. Aldrich, submitted to the national monetary commission and showed how that plan fitted the conditions of the country. He took up all the salient points in the plan and answered many of the objections that had been made to the proposed central bank which would simply be an association of all the national banks, with the government as a partner and the regulator of its affairs. He showed that the plan had at once strength and elasticity—that it would fit into every section of the country and have strength enough to take up any sag in business. It would help the whole country because it would mean that the money of the country could always be carried to that part of it where it was needed at a particular time.

In conclusion he asked the men who have the banking business of the country so to conduct their business that they can have the confidence of their fellowmen and then not to hesitate to take their part in the public discussions. To leave these great questions to the politicians, who might be demagogues at the same time, would mean to leave the country in uncertainty and suspicion all the time. He wants to see the business men take an interest in politics and see to it that politics should not mean antagonism to the business interests, the interests that were so vital to the welfare of all the people. The opening paragraphs of this dispatch give the essence of Mr. Reynolds' talk on another important—perhaps the most important—branch of his subject.

BENEFIT IN CORPORATION TAX

Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh recently expressed his gratification at the decision of the supreme court in upholding the constitutionality of the corporation tax law. He said that this would obviate the necessity of a $100,000,000 Panama bond issue. He pointed out that the $27,000,000 tax already collected would help to relieve the situation of the treasury department, and with the $35,000,000 tax which will have been collected from corporations by June 30th, next, will make the Panama issue in the neighborhood of $50,000,000, which will be small lots, appealing to the small investor rather than the banking institutions of the country.

Mr. MacVeagh declared that it would have been a severe blow to the financial system if the decision had been against the government. He said that the corporation tax was the nearest to the income tax of any tax ever levied.

INTERIOR BANKERS HERE

George W. Telling, cashier of Commercial Trust and Savings Bank, Danville, and J. F. Haworth, vice-president of First National Bank, Westville, were Chicago callers last week. Mr. Haworth reports a good line of deposits for the new bank, although located in a mining rather than an agricultural portion of Vermillion county. Mr. Telling expressed interest in the work of the committee on agriculture and vocational education of the Illinois Bankers Association, and states that the farmers and landowners are taking more interest in these subjects than heretofore.

By C. C. Burford

The First National of Freeport has decided to postpone the enlargement of the banking room until next year. The bank has taken over the Munn Building and intended to enlarge their banking space by using the adjoining room. However, this room is used by the American Fruit and Candy Company and as the confectionary people cannot find suitable quarters elsewhere the bank officers do not wish to force them out.

New Banks in Cook County

State Auditor McCullough has issued a permit for the incorporation of the Douglas State Bank in Chicago to Nicholas R. Jones, Carroll Caruthers, and Sampson Cusdorf. The bank will have capital of $200,000.

Morgan Park will have a new state bank to be known as the South-Cook County Bank and a permit to incorporate this institution has been issued to Daniel Gawne, John McGinniss, Robert Burns, and Charles M. Coulon. The capital will be $250,000.

A new down-state bank is the new one at Sidney, Champaign county, which will operate under a state charter. J. F. Rankin will be the cashier. The bank will have capital of $25,000. This bank will add another to the long list for Champaign county and that county has already more banks than any other county in the state outside of Cook. It is indeed a small village in Champaign county which does not have two banks.

Illinois Notes

The consolidation of the First and Third Nationals of Bloomington became effective Wednesday, March 15th. The combined institutions will be known as the First National.

The First National and the First Trust and Savings Banks of Springfield, which are allied institutions, report time loans of $1,854,539 and deposits of $2,251,400. The capital is $250,000. The Illinois National of Peoria, with capital and surplus of $288,213, reports loans and discounts of $1,250,393 and deposits of $1,825,860. William C. White is the cashier.

J. D. Lynch, president of the Monmouth Trust and Savings Bank, is mourning the death of his mother, Mrs. Mary Lynch.

Stephen A. Foley, president of the Lincoln National of Lincoln is at Hot Springs, Arkansas. Mr. Foley is so much interested in the affairs of his home town that he has sent his membership to the Lincoln Commercial Club to the president of that organization and is not waiting until he returns.

The German-American National of Pekin, a depository of the United States Postal Savings Bank of Pekin, reports deposits of $1,149,087 and loans of $656,376.

Bonds are being sold in Chicago and elsewhere for the promotion of an electric railroad to connect Springfield and Petersburg and also Pekin and Petersburg.

Advices from Cairo and Anna are to the effect that the recent cold weather was very hard on early peaches, pears and plums. Apples being later are thought to be safe so far.

The fruit crop of "Egypt" is becoming more important each year.

Fred Becker, cashier of the First National of Lincoln, is proud of a violin which he made himself. When the old courthouse in Lincoln was being torn down Mr. Becker secured a good block of old wood and being a master carver began the construction of a violin. The finished instrument is said to be a violin of good tone quality and of most beautiful construction. Mr. Becker is a good musician and he and his friends are especially pleased with his unique piece of manufacture.

The Bank of Tallula was recently damaged by fire which swept the business portion of that village. The Farmers and Merchants Bank of the same village also suffered from the fire. Both of these banks are now occupying temporary quarters.

Ira Rigdon is the new cashier of the Peoples State Bank of Mansfield, Piatt county.

The State Bank of Clinton is to have an extensive remodeling, the front of the bank being rebuilt and the banking room being enlarged. $20,000 will be spent in these repairs. L. R. Murphey is the cashier.

R. D. Aitchison, formerly of Mount Pulaski, is now in charge of one of the banks in Colfax, Iowa.

BANKERS MAKE AUTOMOBILES

The Orson Automobile Company, organized less than a year by 100 prominent New York bankers, is now turning out cars of a high type. These bankers, it will be remembered, decided to co-operate in having their own cars built and to this purpose arranged for their construction at Springfield, Mass.

Finished cars, turned out at Springfield plant, have for some time past been on exhibition at the Beluord Apartment House. The bankers have endeavored to produce a car which would meet the requirements of users of the highest type automobiles at a reasonable cost. In this, they assert, they have been successful.

DAVIS HEADS TRUST COMPANY

Abel Davis, recorder of Cook county, has resigned his official position in order to become the president of the reorganized Real Estate Title and Trust Company, whose proposed mortgage insurance project is at present arousing agitation in real estate circles.

Mr. Davis admitted that he had been offered the presidency of the company and of the proposed mortgage guaranty company to be affiliated with it, and that he practically had decided to accept the offer.

Besides being recorder he is register of the Torrens system, in which he is greatly interested and to the development of which he has given much attention.

Mr. Davis is a lawyer and a member of the firm of Gardner, Stern, Anderson and Davis. He was admitted to the bar in 1901, and for a time was associated with Sigmund Zeisler.

He also has a military record, having served through the Spanish war with the First infantry, Illinois national guard, of which he is now a major.

Mr. Davis gave out the following statement regarding the matter:

"I have been offered the presidency of the reorganized Real Estate Title and Trust Company and of a mortgage guaranty company which will be affiliated with it.

"The acceptance of this offer means my retirement from public office. While this step is to my financial interest I will leave the public service with the deepest regret."

BANKERS OF ST. LOUIS FEEL FINE

George M. Reynolds, President of The Continental and Commercial National Bank, returned on Monday from St. Louis. He said he found a comfortable feeling there among the bankers. Business, however, was inclined to be quiet and the demand for money not as brisk as the bankers would like. The South, with which the St. Louis bankers deal largely, was reported by them to be prosperous.

HARRIS GET DES MOINES LINE

C. B. Hippee, president of the Des Moines City Railway Company, announced at a meeting of the greater Des Moines committee Saturday that the street car company property has been sold to N. W. Harris and Co. of Chicago.

J. R. Harrigan, who has been stationed at Columbus, Ohio, as manager of the Columbus, Delaware and Marion Railway, will become manager of the Des Moines property. The system, which has been in the courts for some years and which the city recently contemplated buying, will be improved immediately.

The property was valued at $4,500,000, including 52 per cent of the stock which the Harris Company already owned. The Harris Company has also controlled the company's bonds. The actual cash transfer was about $600,000.

CONVERTING FROM PRIVATE BANK

Chicago is not behind the rest of the state in the process of converting private to metropolitan banks. Charles L. Norton, Richard W. Saunders and Mat Smith have received from the state auditor a permit to organize The Hyde Park Trust and Savings Bank, with $200,000 capital. It will take over the business of The Hyde Park Bank, a private institution now owned by Messrs. Norton and Saunders. It has done business at 1544 E. Fifty-third Street for more than twenty years. Much of the stock of the new bank will be held by other prominent residents of the Hyde Park and Woodlawn districts who have done business with the old institution for years. Mr. Saunders is a trained, up-to-date banker, with good banking experience in larger banks.

OREGON BANKER IN TOWN

Cashier Guy L. Lindsay of Citizens National, Baker City, Oregon, was a caller at Fort Dearborn National Monday. Baker City is a fruit center and its remarkable prosperity is founded largely on modern and successful horticulture, a fact which Cashier Lindsay made plain to many inquirers in Chicago. It is a well known fact that the people go from all parts of the world to study diversified agriculture as it is exemplified in that part of the United States.

DEATH OF DAVID H. MOFFAT

David Halliday Moffat, president of First National Bank of Denver and of the Denver, Northwestern and Pacific Railroad, died suddenly at the Hotel Belmont, New York, Saturday, from heart failure, following a slight attack of the grippe. He was seventy-two years old.

HAUGAN'S $2,000,000 BOND

The bond of the treasurer of the University of Illinois, elected at the annual elections of the board of trustees was placed at $2,000,000. This, it is said, is one of the largest bonds of any university treasurer in America. Henry A. Haugan, the treasurer-elect, is vice-president of the State Bank.

SOUTHERN BANKER HERE

R. L. Goolsby, president of Greenfield Bank, Greenfield, Tenn., was a visitor at Fort Dearborn National the fore part of the week and inspected with great interest the new banking home across the street to which Fort Dearborn will move April 3d. Mr. Goolsby stated that southern bankers were coming more and more to appreciate the advantages of coming to Chicago and doing business here.

BANK ROBBERS BREAK JAIL

Monmouth, Ill., March 22.—Carl Carroll and George Reed, charged with the robbery of the Swan Creek Bank January 31st, escaped last night. Friends from the outside cut a hole through the jail wall and then filed open the cells. There were no other prisoners in the jail.

SAYS SOUTH IS CORDIAL

Vice-President William C. Cook of Western Trust and Savings Bank has returned from a vacation trip in the South. He went as far as Bellaire, Florida, but on the way visited several interesting points, including Chattanooga Park.

Mr. Cook says the thing that most impressed him during his visit was the cordial feeling toward Northerners which was everywhere manifest. This friendly and hospitable spirit makes it a pleasure to visit the South or to do business there. He found a keen interest regarding the rapid growth and the multitudinous commercial interests of Chicago. Dealings of Southern bankers with Chicago institutions have increased very rapidly in the last two years.

NEW ORLEANS WANTS A. B. A.

New Orleans, La., March 20.—Fred E. Farnsworth, secretary of the American Bankers Association, came here to look over the ground preparatory to the meeting of the executive committee, to be held May 1st, at Nashville, to decide where the next annual meeting of the association is to be held. Mr. Farnsworth is gathering data on hotel accommodations, etc., but, as the bankers held a meeting here nine years ago, and many of them want to come back here, it is believed that there is no doubt about the selection of New Orleans for the next meeting.

One of the features of the meeting, if it is held here in the fall, will be an excursion trip to Panama so as to give the bankers an idea of the canal work.

The principal business of the next session of the association will be the discussion of the monetary system of the country, with plans to work in co-operation with the national monetary commission to reach a solution of the problem. San Antonio, Tex., is so occupied with the troops and New Orleans so disappointed over losing the fair, that the chances for the A. B. A. coming here look good.

Postal Savings

Washington, March 22.—On January 3, 1911, postal savings banks were opened in forty-eight offices. On February 28, 1911, 3,923 accounts had been opened in these offices and 6,864 individual deposits made. The average deposit reached the unusually large amount of $21.50. During this period only 259 accounts were drawn out and closed.

The net amount of deposits at the offices after two months' operation is $133,869, and it is estimated that if the business retains its present volume at the close of twelve months the deposits will amount to $803,214.

The forty-eight postoffices selected for the introduction of postal savings banks are small offices, the combined population of all the cities being only about 370,000. Among the forty-eight offices Pekin, Ill., ranks thirteenth in the volume of business. It had 137 accounts at the close of February, with $3,313 in deposits, and an average of $24.18 per depositor.

Congress at the last session appropriated $500,000 for the extension of postal savings banks. The board of trustees had asked for $1,000,000 for this purpose. It is the board's intention to use the appropriation to open several hundred more banks throughout the country. Washington will be the only first-class postoffice to be given a postal savings bank at this time.

Experience to date has proved that the banks are most successful in mining communities, where the foreign population is largest.

Leadville, Colo., has been the banner postal savings bank office to date. With 362 accounts, $21,253 has been deposited, or an average of $58.71 per account.

It is reported that Oscar Krimbill will be president of a new national bank which will be organized at Hammond, with a capital stock of $100,000.

A PLEA FOR BRANCH BANKS

H. M. P. Eckardt, the author of "A Rational Banking System," published this week by Harper & Bros., was for nineteen years in the service of one of the great Canadian banks—the Merchants Bank of Canada—passing from junior to branch manager, and finally occupying an important post in the head office. Since his retirement in 1905, Mr. Eckardt has resided in the United States, studying and writing upon financial topics. "A Rational Banking System" shows by the workings of two hypothetical branch banks how, under a good system of such branch banks, each important geographical division of the country might be more independent of the New York money power than it is to-day. The relations of the United States Treasury with the banks, the matter of regulation and control, external and internal examinations, of the massing of cash reserves, of international standing, and of business morality are also discussed.

BALTIMORE BANKS MERGE

Announcement is made that the merging of the National Bank of Baltimore and the Commercial and Farmers National, of that city, has been ratified by both boards, more than two-thirds of the stockholders of the Commercial and Farmers acquiescing in the transfer. With a capital of $500,000 and undivided profits aggregating $114,000, the latter bank was acquired by the National Bank of Baltimore on the basis of liquidation value. At the same time the National Bank of Baltimore takes over deposits of $1,300,000, which, added to its own line of $6,300,000, now gives it a total of $7,600,000.

Aside from its financial and business significance, interest is lent to the merger through the fact that it unites two of the oldest banking institutions in the country, the National Bank of Baltimore, the third oldest in the United States, having been established in 1795, and the Commercial and Farmers National, in April, 1810.

J. W. Spangler

J. W. Spangler, for the last five years manager of the credit department of the Dexter Horton National Bank, at Seattle, Wash., has been elected an active vice-president of the Seattle National Bank, the change becoming effective at once. His election fills a vacancy that has existed in the big financial institution since the first of the year. Spangler's acquaintance in banking and commercial circles extends throughout the United States. Regarded as a high authority on bank credits, he is vice-president of the National Association of Credit Men, New York City; secretary of the Seattle Clearing House Association, and just has resigned the presidency of the Seattle Association of Credit Men.

The newly elected vice-president represents the type of aggressive business men, thoroughly experienced, though still young in years. He has resided in Seattle for nine years, during about three of which he was superintendent of Bradstreet's. During the panic of 1907, when financial conditions were in a chaotic condition, he was a conspicuous figure in handling the affairs of the associated banks of the Queen City. In the matter of bank credits he is rated as one of the most qualified men in the country. In financial and commercial circles, the appointment of a man of his years to a position of such responsibility with the largest bank in Seattle is regarded as a most signal honor.

Of much interest to eastern bankers who advance money to western cattle shippers, is a recent decision handed down by the court of appeals in Kansas City. In this case it was held that the attaching creditors at a livestock market cannot take possession of cattle shipped for sale when the owner had previously assigned his title to a bank that had loaned him money for feed and delivery charges.

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER By Mortimer I. Stevens

WISCONSIN

Clearings for Milwaukee banks during the past week have shown some falling off from the levels established for the same period a year ago. This, however, is not taken as evidence of any decrease in the volume of business being transacted by various manufacturers and merchants for on every hand sales are reported as satisfactory and in a number of instances the manufacturers claim that they will greatly increase their working forces within a few weeks to take care of the summer and fall trade now commencing.

For some time Milwaukee newspapers antagonistic to the Socialistic regime have been publishing statements claiming that there was a vast army of the unemployed in this city amounting to at least 50,000 men, but bankers and leading manufacturers claim that this figure is grossly exaggerated and that the total of men out of work would probably not exceed 20,000 or little better than normal for this time of the year.

Bond salesmen returning from points out-in-state claim that they have been making good sales of late in the higher grade securities and that there is a healthy inquiry for good bonds from the country banker indicating a good volume of trade this summer.

Progress of Bank Legislation

According to a report sent recently to members of the state association by Secretary George D. Bartlett, progress has been made with some of the minor banking measures at Madison during the past week. Senator Owen is reported to still have his pet guaranty bill pigeon holed awaiting more favorable opportunity to present same to the legislature.

The segregation of deposits bill will also be withheld until the guaranty bill is settled.

The following bills have recently been acted upon in the assembly :

254 A—Prohibiting loans upon certain stock in banks.

261 A—Restricting loans upon real estate to Wisconsin and adjoining states.

266 A—Doing away with "loose-leaf" books of original entry.

267 A—Requiring monthly meetings of directors and requiring all directors to be residents of Wisconsin.

All of the above have been ordered engrossed and came up for final passage March 22d.

Bill 264—Prohibiting loans to managing officers of banks was reported favorably by the assembly committee but laid over for a few days.

Bill 273—Assemblyman Rupp's guaranty bill was recommended by the assembly committee for indefinite postponement, this being practically a duplicate of Senator Husting's bill. It was re-referred to the committee on banks by a vote of two to one.

Lawyer's Guaranty Bill a Joke

"There is a good deal of amusement among legislators and bankers of the state," says Secretary Bartlett of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, "relative to the lawyers' guaranty bill submitted before the legislature recently. This bill provides that lawyers shall be required to pay a certain amount each year into a guaranty fund to protect present and prospective clients. The bill is based upon the theory that unless clients are protected, the lawyers will take everything they win, in lawsuits. It is a burlesque on the proposed bank guaranty law.

New State Bank at West Allis

The furniture of the new state bank at West Allis has been installed. The bank building is triangular in form and the receiving and paying department is enclosed by walls of mahogany and plate glass set in the form of a horseshoe. Between the two points of the "shoe" is the entrance to the main vault back of which is the vault for the safety deposit boxes. A private room is provided for patrons of the safety deposit department and there is a room for the bank directors. Directly over the main vault is another vault for the storage of valuables such as gold and silver and other articles of value. A burglar alarm system is to be installed and this will be placed in the front end of the building directly over the entrance.

Beloit Has Two $1,000,000 Banks

Beloit's splendid showing in banking resources and gain in deposits at the publication of the recent statements places the banks of that city in the million dollar class. The Beloit State Bank has now reached that distinction with resources exceeding that amount while the Savings Bank shows resources of more than a million and one-half. The combined deposits of Beloit's four banking houses totals more than three and three-quarter millions, in actual figures, $3,754,143.16.

It is interesting to note that the combined deposits of the four Janesville banks, Beloit's business rival city, taken from the statements of the same date was $3,874,530.09, or, only $120,386.93 in excess of Beloit.

Oshkosh Bank Gives Banquet

Fifty men, including the officers of many of the leading banking institutions of Oshkosh, Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Neenah, Fond du Lac, Sheboygan and other cities, sat down at the banquet table in the English room of the Athearn Hotel, Oshkosh, last Friday evening, as guests of the Old National Bank of that city. The banquet was given in honor of the completion of the bank's new building.

Informality was the rule of the banquet and although there were numerous short addresses, there was an absence of restraint and the men around the festive board said sincerely pleasant things spontaneously. The cashier of the bank, Louis Schriber, occupied what would have been the rôle of toastmaster had the dinner been a more formal one.

Among those present from outside cities were the following: E. J. Hughes, Walter Kasten, Walter Denning, Gardner P. Stickney, W. L. Cheney and George D. Bartlett, of Milwaukee; Harvey Vernon, George S. Channer, H. Judson, C. R. Pierce, Merrill Coit, E. A. Channer, of Chicago; George Utz, Appleton; R. A. Christie, Berlin; T. C. Ebernau and E. J. Perry, Fond du Lac; H. A. Fisher, Menasha; S. B. Morgan and John Shieles, Neenah; A. J. Marble, Omro; F. W. Luck, Waupun; T. F. Wilson, Weyauwega; James Stone, Ripon; E.

A. Dow, Plymouth, and L. A. Pomeroy, Amherst.

State Banking Notes

Commissioner of Banking Kuolt has issued a charter authorizing the Farmers and Merchants State Bank of Kewaunee with a capital of $2,500. O. H. Bruemmer is president with J. E. Hutchinson, cashier.

Articles of incorporation have been issued to the Ferryville State Bank at Ferryville with capital of $10,000. The incorporators are Eugene C. Amann, M. Burham and Fred Copsley.

Henry Nelson succeeds to the position in the Old National Bank of Oshkosh made vacant by the promotion of Irving Hanson who fills the place of Myron Johnson, resigned.

The work of putting in the burglar alarm in the Montello State Bank was commenced this week and in a few days the system will be complete.

John Pratt, cashier of the Citizens State Bank at Menominee, was a recent visitor at Madison.

It is reported that a new bank is assured for Oconto and that nearly all of the stock has been subscribed.

The First National Bank of Rhinelander has let a contract for the erection of a $60,000 building on the site of its present quarters and the work will be commenced as soon as the frost is out of the ground.

Application has been made by Thos. E. Anderson, George A. Steven and William J. Brennan for a state bank to be located in the city of Tomah to be known as the Farmers and Merchants Bank. The capital will be $25,000.

E. P. Ainsworth of Neillsville has announced his intention of organizing a state bank at Ladysmith and to have same ready for business by June 1st.

Architects Van Ryn and De Gelleke are drawing plans for a new bank building for the First National Bank at Antigo to cost approximately $20,000.

BANKERS MEET IN TEXARKANA

The third annual meeting of Group Six, Arkansas Bankers Association, comprising Miller, Lafayette, Kempstead, Columbia, Howard, Clark, Pike and Little River counties was held in Texarkana was a large attendance. The address of welcome was delivered by Charles M. Blooker of the State National Bank of Texarkana, and the response by Ivie E. Howell of the Bank of Waldo.

Reports of officers showed marked progress during the last year. Judge W. M. Kavanaugh and Judge W. E. Hemingway of Little Rock were among the speakers. A. P. Beasley of the Bodcaw Bank at Stamps was elected president, and Stuart Wilson of the Texarkana State National, secretary for the ensuing year. Among the visitors attending the meeting were George F. Baker of the National Bank of Commerce, St. Louis; L. C. Stuart of the Third National, St. Louis, and C. L. Boye of the Mechanics-American National, St. Louis.

St. Louis, Mo., March 22.—Marked improvement in the general commercial demand for credits was reported by leading financial institutions this week. Deposits are slumping and the loans item is larger in the aggregate than has been the case for some time. Country balances with the larger nationals are being reduced, and agricultural needs are being gradually felt. The shipments for currency and gold to the interior thus far this season have been light, but the volume is increasing right along. However this movement has had no appreciable effect upon the general situation here. The various trade bureaus report a greater number of country buyers here now than any similar period since the last panic. Sales of the big wholesale houses on Washington Avenue are running well over those of last year, and indications for spring and summer trade are extremely hopeful in the region tributary to St. Louis. This is especially true of the Southwest, where crop prospects are bright. Some damage to fruit crops was sustained in the recent cold snap, but winter wheat is in splendid shape, and with no unforeseen incident, the yield will surpass that of last season. In addition to the increased acreage, actual conditions of soil and plant insure bigger returns. It is expected that the needs of the country for spring planting will be felt earlier this year than the average, and the banks handling that business have made full preparations to take care of it. Withal there are ample funds still on hand, and outside of a tendency to tighten, the market shows no change as compared with the last two or three weeks. Quotably the range of rates is from $4\frac{1}{4}$ to $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent, with the majority of accommodations being granted between $4\frac{1}{2}$ and $5\frac{1}{4}$ per cent.

Francis on Mexican Situation

David R. Francis, vice-president of the Merchants-Laclede National, is watching closely developments on the Rio Grande. As a financier he is interested in investments of Americans in Mexico, and as a former cabinet officer, the international problem appeals to him. Besides Mr. Francis has two sons in the cactus republic. Speaking of the situation Governor Francis said: "I do not anticipate serious trouble. In addition of the desire of the president to give the officers of the army experience in handling brigades and divisions, I think there is undoubtedly the purpose of serving notice to Mexico, by the fact of the presence of the army on the border, that we are able in case of Mexican inability to preserve order, to protect not only our citizens and their property, but those of foreign nations also. Information which I have received from confidential sources inclines me to believe not only that this is the purpose of the mobilization, but also that President Taft is eminently wise in ordering it in view of the situation."

Arkansas Bankers Want Safe Law

Bankers of south Arkansas, at the annual meeting of Group Seven at Pine Bluff, went on record as favoring a safe, conservative law regulating the organization and conduct of the banking business of the state. Legislators were urged to promote the enactment of such a measure. The resolution was presented by B. C. Powell of Camden, and met unanimous favor. An amendment opposing the Deaton and Turner bill now pending, failed to carry. In the selection of officers H. D. Palmer of Star City was made chairman, R. L. Hyatt of Monticello, was elected vice-chairman and Joe Nichol of Pine Bluff secretary-treasurer. Chairman Palmer named the following committees: program, M. E. Bloom, Pine Bluff; H. J. Martin, Warren; H. B. Strange, Pine Bluff. Publication, B. C. Powell, W. D. Atwood, and Albert Rowell. Seventy-five bankers were in attendance, including financiers from St. Louis, Chicago, Little Rock, Memphis and other western centers.

More Examiners Needed

Advices from Austin, Tex., are to the effect that the department of insurance and banking is at present facing a grave problem. It seems almost impossible, with the present force of examiners, to complete the examination of the state banks for this quarter. There are now 671 state banks in Texas, over thirty have been opened since the first of the year, three applications for licenses are now pending and inquiries have been received from seven more prospective banks relative to charters. At present the force of examiners numbers twelve. The law contemplates that there shall be one examiner for every forty banks, while the appropriation bill makes allowance for only twelve. Hence B. L. Gill, commissioner of insurance and banking, believes that under the present law it is impossible to increase the force until the appropriation bill for the next two fiscal years is passed and becomes effective. This would continue the present force until September 1st. The appropriation bill drafted by the regular session allowed fifteen examiners for the next year and seventeen thereafter.

Missouri's Taxable Wealth

According to a report issued this week by the Missouri state board of equalization the total taxable wealth of the state is $1,547,592,299, or $64,115,603 more than it was one year ago. The document shows that banks grew in numbers and valuations increased enormously.

Whitaker a Modernist

Edward Whitaker, president of the Boatmens Bank, has some ideas on the conduct of modern banking which might be called ultra modern. These he has put into practice, since becoming president of the Boatmens Bank, and the increase in business and general aspect of that institution indicates that these ideas are pretty good. "Accessibility is the keynote of modern banking," said Mr. Whitaker, "the bank president behind a series of doors with guards at each doorway, is a figure of the past. To-day the bank president is out in the open, often at a desk less elaborate than those of many of his assistants. The nearer the desks of the president and cashier are to the course usually traversed by customers, the greater, broadly speaking, the advantages for both customers and bank. Many persons whose bank accounts are small erroneously think that the president and cashiers of the bank at which they do business are not sufficiently interested in them to know them. Even from a selfish standpoint the bank officers desire to know all their customers, for it is a well established fact that small accounts to-day become large accounts to-morrow. An alert president will seek to know not only the customers proper, but the clerks who represent their employers at the bank. These clerks as a class are persons of integrity, and hence many of them are destined to become executive heads. The farsighted bank president desires to know these

Third National Changes

Thomas Wright, for many years a director of the Third National, was elected to succeed the late William B. Wells as vice-president. The vacancy on the board of directors was filled by the election of Elliot K. Ludington. Mr. Wright will not be an active officer in the bank proper, but will manage the Third National Bank Building, as Mr. Wells did. Mr. Wright was formerly in the cigar manufacturing business. He has extensive realty holdings, the Wright Building, at Eighth and Pine streets, being named for him. Mr. Ludington the new director, is a member of the H. and L. Chase Bag Company.

Morath Leaves Mississippi Valley

Charles W. Morath, safe deposit officer of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company, and one of the ablest of the younger financiers of St. Louis has resigned to engage in business in the West. Officers and employees of the company paid an exceptional tribute to Mr. Morath. Upon the acceptance of his resignation, W. G. Lackey, vice-president of the company, presented him with a testimonial of esteem, the gift of his fellow workers and the officers. Mr. Morath has been with the Mississippi Valley Trust Company for fourteen years. He held various positions, serving for several years as secretary and assistant to President Breckinridge Jones.

Oklahoma Banks Consolidate

The First National and the Hobart State Bank of Hobart, Oklahoma, were merged this week, with Doctor E. F. Dunlap as president of the consolidated institutions. Other officers are: F. T. Chandler, vice-president; G. E. Sutton, cashier; and J. E. Medlock, C. Griffith and J. A. Byndman additional directors. This consolidation is significant, not so much on account of the size of the banks concerned, but because it is the eighth state bank to nationalize in Oklahoma within two weeks because of the deposit guaranty system being too burdensome. Financiers in the state predict that 25 per cent of the state banks will join the national ranks before the expiration of this year.

Grunberg Heads First National

David Grunberg, formerly of Buffalo, N. Y., has been elected president of the First National of Nowata, Oklahoma, succeeding W. E. Roberts, who had held the position since the organization of the bank in 1896. Mr. Grunberg gained control by the purchase of Mr. Roberts' stock.

M. F. Parrish was elected to the presidency of the Monroe State Bank at a recent meeting of the directors.

Edw. C. DeHority has been elected president of First National Bank of Elwood in place of Joe A. DeHority; Chas. D. Babbitt, cashier, in place of Edw. C. DeHority.

The new Jay County Savings Bank and Trust Company at Portland, has elected the following officers: John F. Lafollette as president; George H. Smith, vice-president, and Thomas W. Shimp, secretary.

Sanford M. Keltner is president, and Thomas B. Orr, vice-president of the Anderson Trust Company. The Indiana Trust Company, Indianapolis, is reported one of the correspondents.

The following officers are reported for the H. M. Lukens and Company at Evansville: C. H. Battin, president; A. W. Funkfaurer, vice-president; H. M. Lukens, and A. F. Funkhausen, secretary.

The Citizens Loan and Trust Company of Lebanon at the regular meeting of its board of directors, on Tuesday, declared a semiannual dividend of six per cent. The company is now doing business at the old Lebanon National Bank stand on the west side of the square.

The mysterious murder of Norman E. Black was recalled in the Delaware circuit court when Harry G. Kansas City

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

Discussing the financial situation in the nation last week, J. N. Dolley, state bank commissioner of Kansas, said:

"Many of the large banks of the country are now undertaking an interesting campaign in the interest of educating the general public about the necessity of remedying the defects of our currency system. This campaign will be inaugurated on a large scale, and will be virtually in the hands of the national monetary commission, which has been making an exhaustive study of foreign banking systems in the effort to formulate a plan which would be favorable for adoption in the United States. It is generally believed that the proposal for the needed currency reform lately made by Senator Aldrich will be adopted in some form and there will be an earnest and strong effort made to pass some reform measures within the next year or so. It is generally recognized, however, that it will probably be difficult for the banks to persuade the people that such reforms are necessary and that in order to bring the change about they will have to show that this proposed system can be made absolutely free from political entanglements.

"The outlook for business in the United States is fairly good. Some branches of industry still report very good gains over last year, but returns as a whole are not suggestive at all of a heavy revival all along the line. The best thing about the situation is that there is very little speculation in either securities or commodities, and that there is no 'land craze' to contend with in the West. Besides this, there has been decided headway made in reducing the cost of living and the steady decrease in the price of commodities is one of the most suggestive developments of the present situation. There is no doubt whatever that the people are living more economically than they were a year ago, and that the bank position of the United States is being strengthened and that the disposition on the part of bankers everywhere is to refuse to make loans to syn-dicates or to speculators who are conducting enterprises of any kind.

"Although there has been a good deal of talk concerning the possibility of general tariff revision, I do not believe that it will be undertaken at the special session of congress. The administration has, in fact, come out squarely against any such proposition and beyond the acceptance of the reciprocity treaty with Canada it seems likely that nothing will be done changing existing schedules. The very decided betterment in the foreign trade situation is one of the most gratifying features of the present outlook in the United States."

Queer Case of Naftzger

Charged with having bought and sold stolen postage stamps, L. S. Naftzger, formerly president of the Fourth National Bank of Wichita, Kan., was found guilty on one count in the federal court at Wichita last week. Mr. Naftzger is reputed to be worth half a million dollars and for many years he has been a powerful financial figure in southern Kansas. Until the disclosures in regard to the stolen stamps Mr. Naftzger was highly respected with no breath of suspicion directed against his personal or business integrity. But with his confession is a story that is somewhat remarkable.

For more than twenty years Mr. Naftzger has toiled many hours each day building up his banking interests until his ambition was achieved. He was worth half a million dollars. He had set that mark and was ready to take matters easy. So far as anyone knows he had never been guilty of an illegal act. And yet at the very end of his career he appears to have entered into a conspiracy with a former chief of police of Wichita and John Callahan, for years leader of a notorious gang of bank and post-office robbers, whereby he, Naftzger, was to dispose of stolen stamps. He confessed to having sold stolen stamps but it is not believed that in the entire transaction he made a profit of more than a few hundreds of dollars. Now this man who is well over 50 years of age faces a prison for this strange transgression. Frank S. Burt, former chief of police, will escape conviction because it was his testimony that led to Naftzger's arrest and consequent confession. Callahan was also found guilty and will be sent to prison for a maximum term of ten years. Strong influence is being exerted in the hope of saving Naftzger from prison.

Not Like Oklahoma

While the bank deposit guaranty law has had the tendency of causing state banks in Oklahoma to nationalize to escape the tax levy to rehabilitate the guaranty fund, in Kansas there is a tendency in the other direction. Kansas has had no serious bank failures since the bank guaranty law went into effect there, while in Oklahoma the drain has been heavy. There are 409 banks under the Kansas deposit guaranty law. Sixteen applications to come under the law have been received by the bank commissioner since the recent decision of the United States supreme court that the state has police power over the banks. A total of $327,000 is the bank guaranty fund of Kansas. The bank commissioner has had to call upon the fund only once so far and that was because of the failure of the Abilene State Bank. The depositors were paid off at the rate of $10 per day each until 400 were paid off, and the commissioner issued certificates drawing 6 per cent to all other depositors. About $40,000 was needed to do this which came from the fund. The bank commissioner says that about half of the national banks in Kansas have their deposits insured under the Bankers Deposit

Guarantee and Surety Company

The Kansas banking department is preparing to issue a call under the new law recently signed by Governor Stubbs to all the companies in the state selling stocks and bonds, requiring them to file statements in detail. The law is referred to as the "Blue Sky" law inasmuch as its intention is to protect the investors of Kansas against dealers in fake securities. The state banking department will investigate every project for which bonds or stocks are offered for sale in Kansas so that prospective investors can find out all about them by writing to the bank commissioner at Topeka.

General News

The First National Bank of Hobart, Okla., has absorbed the Hobart State Bank. Dr. E. F. Dunlap is president of the merged institution; E. T. Chandler, vice-president; C. B. Sutton, cashier, and N. E. Medlock, C. H. Griffith and J. A. Hindman are additional directors. This makes the eighth state bank to nationalize in Oklahoma within two weeks because the guaranty system is too burdensome.

Three months ago four men were arrested at Marysville, Kan., under suspicion of having been implicated in the robbery of the bank at Beattie, Kan., on the night of November 8th last. One of these men, Dan Carney, was allowed to go because there was insufficient evidence against him. It now develops that Carney was probably the ring leader and he has been rearrested in Portland Ore., and will be held pending further investigation.

The Missouri Savings Bank of Kansas City will move in a few days into its handsome granite and marble home at 920 Walnut Street. This will be the fourth move of this bank within ten years but this is the first time that the bank has owned its own property. The new bank is three stories high and stands next to the fifteen story building of the National Bank of Commerce. It will be occupied exclusively by the Missouri Savings Bank.

Among the visiting bankers in Kansas City last week were: M. F. Ward, cashier of the Bank of Commerce, Chanute, Kan., T. M. Walker, president of the Atchison Savings Bank, Atchison, Kan., C. J. Webster, president of the Night and Day Bank of Oklahoma City, Okla., A. C. Stewart, general counsel of the St. Louis Union Trust Company, and I. A. Hyde, president of the Bank of Mercer county, Princeton, Mo.

IMPROVING TOLEDO CLEARING SYSTEM

Wm. J. Wedertz, assistant cashier of the Security Savings Bank and Trust Company, Toledo, Ohio, called on the officers of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, Saturday, and in company with their representative visited the Chicago clearing house. Mr. Wedertz represents the Toledo clearing house through their committee, Messrs. R. H. Scribner, treasurer of the Security Savings Bank and Trust Company, and Chas. Tanner, assistant cashier, First National of Toledo. Mr. Wedertz visited Chicago to observe the workings of the Chicago clearing house and to secure such information as he could that would be of assistance to the Toledo clearing house in installing certain new features decided upon by the managers of the Toledo clearing house, one of which will probably be the selection of a permanent secretary. Mr. Wedertz expressed himself as well pleased with his visit to Chicago and the treatment accorded him by the Chicago bankers and representatives of the Chicago clearing house. He states that the Toledo banking situation is satisfactory. Deposits are high and rather a slow demand for money. The Security deposits at the present time are $2,600,000.

PRIVATE BANKS UNDER STATE EXAMINATION

On and after July first of this year all of the private or unincorporated banks doing business within the state of Montana will be subject to state examination and will make public statements four times per year, all under an act of the assembly which provides penalties for all violations. The Montana Bankers Association for several years past has been agitating in favor of a law putting all forms of banking within the state under supervision and inspection. The state association went so far as to furnish a bill which passed the senate, but for which another bill was substituted in the house. This substitute bill is the one which passed. Into the new bill the private bankers of the state are said to have managed to insert quite a number of amendments favorable to their continuing in business.

Section 1 of the new law makes it unlawful hereafter for a private individual or a co-partnership, or any unincorporated association to conduct a bank without naming at least one actual and responsible member in its title. The new law will restrict private bank titles to such names as "Bank of," "Banking House of," "Banker" or "Bankers" with the name of the individual inserted. Private or unincorporated bankers in Montana hereafter shall actually own and possess approved property or assets not exempt from execution in sums varying from $20,000 up to $100,000 in a direct ratio to the population of the city in which the bank is located. This statement of financial condition must appear and be carried on the books of any such bank or banks unimpaired. This provision is applicable separately to each and every private bank conducted by any person, co-partnership, or association, and no asset or assets shall appear upon the books of more than one bank. This provision is aimed specifically at chains of banks which have been so largely operated in the Northwest.

Every private bank in the state will be subject to examination and visitation from the state examiner once each year, and oftener when deemed necessary by the examiner. He will exert all of his usual powers and authorities to investigate and examine all books, papers, and effects. He is empowered to learn the exact financial condition of such bank or chain of banks and may administer oaths to any person or agent conducting such private bank or banking business. All private banks in Montana will hereafter make report to the state examiner at his call. These reports are to be made under oath or affirmation and are to be as full and complete as those submitted by state banks. Furthermore the reports must be published once in a newspaper of general circulation in the place where the bank is located. The state examiner will have power under the new law to call for special reports when necessary.

solvent private banks, the state examiner will work in conjunction with the governor and attorney-general. This part of the bill might under certain circumstances defeat the purpose of the act, but leading bankers of the state think that the law will be carried out according to its intention in spite of certain hobbling amendments which were inserted. However, with the agreement of the governor and attorney-general, the state examiner may act as promptly as in the case of state banks and most likely they will give him their support. Governor Norris signed the bill very promptly upon its passage and at least during his administration it will be carried out effectively. The bill provides for receivers being appointed by the courts and allows the state examiner discretion as to whether or not the bank shall be liquidated or an attempt made to bring it back to solvency. This part of the law seems to be about the same as those recently passed in South Dakota, Alabama, and elsewhere.

Any person or the members of any co-partnership or banking association or any private banker who willfully receives deposits of money, commercial or credit paper, when such person or co-partnership is insolvent, under this law will be guilty of a felony punishable by imprisonment in the state prison for a term not exceeding five years. This same penalty applies if a banker makes any false entries or exhibits any false papers with a view to deceive the state examiner. The refusal to permit examination will bring about practically all of the forces of the entire act. Such a bank will be seized by the examiner upon such refusal being made. While this new Montana law is far from being up to the quality of other state banking bills recently passed, it certainly will put all forms of unincorporated banking in the state under strict state supervision and inspection and will compel such publicity as will keep the public informed about the resources and responsibilities of private banks. To this extent it is a great advance over previous conditions in Montana and furnishes one further incentive for agitation for similar action in the states of Illinois and Iowa, and in the two or three other states where no provision has been made for supervision and publicity for unincorporated banks.

TENDENCY OF TARIFF SENTIMENT

"Tariff sentiment remains strong in Germany, where the theory of protection is credited with contributing largely to the country's progress. Belief in the wisdom of a protective policy is spreading in England also."

This is a conclusion reached by William T. Fenton, the Chicago banker, after spending several weeks in Europe. It is probable he has gauged public sentiment correctly, for it is well known that Germany's moderate protective tariff is universally credited with having greatly contributed to the prosperity there. Perhaps it is equally true that tariff sentiment is growing in Great Britain.

With such facts at hand the student of political economy will begin to wonder at the rapid development of sentiment in the United States in favor of a reduction of tariff duties.

When James G. Blaine so masterfully vanquished Gladstone in a tariff argument public opinion in favor of protective duties received new impetus on both continents. Another powerful argument was furnished about the same time when Grover Cleveland undertook to give this country a taste of free trade. How is it then that America again seems to be moving toward a sweeping reduction of the protective tariff while Germany and England are giving strong support to that principle?

Perhaps it is sufficient to answer that the United States has overdone the protection business. No doubt many of the unreasonably large fortunes owned by Americans were gained by tariff inequality and unfairness. The duties are more equable in Germany than in this country. While the wisdom of the principle is universally recognized, it has been subject to grave abuse in the United States, and this abuse may be sending public sentiment to the other extreme.

THE CHICAGO BANKER is in full sympathy with the public demand for an honest and fair revision of the tariff, but this nation must guard against the extreme of free trade. In Mr. Fenton's article last week he made it clear that the aggressive commercial spirit prevalent in Europe would be quick to take advantage of the American market were we to recklessly let down the tariff bars all at once.

NEW YORK FOR REFORM

In connection with irregularities recently discovered by the banking department of the New York state administration Superintendent Cheney is moved to recommend the extension to all financial institutions subject to state control the prohibition against loans to officers, directors, clerks or agents of a bank without the approval of a majority of the directors. He would require that reports be made to directors or trustees at their monthly meetings of all advances and overdrafts as well as of loans and discounts; and he urges that the laws be made to require the ex-action in January of each year of an oath from every savings-bank trustee that "he has, so far as devolved upon him, diligently and honestly administered the affairs of such corporation and that he has not knowingly violated or willingly permitted to be violated any of the provisions of the law applicable to such corporations."

There can be little doubt that, with these safeguards in existence two years ago in addition to those already on the New York statute-books, the "irregularities" referred to by the superintendent would have been prevented, and the Northern Bank, the Carnegie Trust Co. and the Washington Savings Bank would all be open and solvent and doing business to-day.

WASHING AIR FOR THE COUNTING ROOM

A part of the equipment in most of the modern banking buildings is an air washing machine. Hotels, high-class clubs, and libraries have adopted this modern convenience. The system is simplicity itself. The air washer is installed, equipped with a mechanical arrangement which produces innumerable sheets of water through which all the air for the building is pumped. There is no way for outside air to enter the counting room where this plan is in force except through these sheets of water. All of the dirt, bad odors, and other impurities are absolutely washed out of the air and it comes into the bank fresher and cleaner than that enjoyed by even the denizens of the woods or the lake resorts.

Enthusiasts have estimated that the average busy bank president will live at least ten years longer in such an atmosphere. It also keeps the person and the clothing clean, preserves mural decorations from grime, and preserves the books and papers of the institution in a state of cleanliness almost unbelievable to those who continue to do business in the dust and soot which blows into the buildings where the washing machine has not been installed. The city with her thousands of smoking chimneys furnishes clouds of dust that are imperceptible almost, and even this form of dirt is taken completely out of the air by the modern washing device. That there may be no evil effects from dampness, the air after being washed is dried for the consumption of those who breathe it, and to better protect fine interiors and fine office equipment. So perfect is the modern arrangement that attention is required not more than once or twice a week, and no extra help need be employed when the air washing device is installed.

Another thing not to be overlooked is the elimination of disease germs. No other vehicle conveys so much disease as dust. When the dust has been entirely washed out of the air, the disease germs go with it. Those who have adopted this modern system of air purification tell us that they feel refreshed after a day's work rather than tired. Tests have been made showing that even when heavy smoke was directed into the air washer, pure, clean air came out of the other side, and all of the impurities disappeared. This air washing system should be adopted in all public libraries, banks, and in public buildings where cleanliness of the air is of great importance. It contributes to health, comfort, and cleanliness in even degree. No modern heating or ventilating system is complete without it. It furnishes moisture to steam-heated buildings in the winter and cools and renders invigorating the warm atmosphere in the summer. Every school building in Chicago should be so equipped.

Chicago is fortunate in having a very active manufacturing firm in this particular line of business. Thomas & Smith (Inc.) of 116 and 118 North Carpenter Street, Chicago, have made over four hundred installations of air washers. Fine examples may be found in Chicago in the new City Hall and Court House, Blackstone Hotel, Peoples Gas Building, Graham & Sons Bank, Chicago Post Office, Chicago Public Library, LaSalle Hotel, University Club, Commercial National Building, Majestic Theater and in a great number of stores and churches. It also has been installed in the Municipal Building, the new Congressional Library and Treasury Building at Washington, and in practically all of the new modern office and hotel buildings erected in New York and elsewhere. A fine air washing plant has been installed in the Northwestern National at Minneapolis and in a long list of college and school buildings all over the United States. It is not necessary to wait until a new building is to be erected, for the device can just as easily be applied to buildings already in use. No case is upon record where an installation of an air washing machine has been discontinued after its wonderful benefits are known.

New York reformers are agitated over an alleged corner in prunes.

A TIP TO AUTOMOBILE OWNERS

A set of tire resting, tire saving jacks is about the best small investment an automobile owner can make. The Ashland Manufacturing Co., Ashland, Ohio, has put on the market a complete line of tire saving jacks. One kind is ever set, and one move of the handle lifts the car off the floor and gives the tires a rest. One kind is a storage stand at only $2.50 for the set. Holds the car up for a week or a month or a whole winter of idleness and saves many times its cost every time it is used. There also is a perfect, quick acting jack for ordinary repair use, better than the limping, buckling things called jacks which preceded it. Remember, the price of rubber is advancing each year, and you can prolong the life of your tires at least one-third by using a set of Crown Tire Savers one for each wheel, recommended by all the leading tire manufacturers in the country. The Crown Tire Saver is quickly adjusted to any size or style of car, either under axle or hub. It has a leather faced saddle on a swing bracket, which allows it to be set in any position. Get a description of the Crown output (see advertisement in this issue) or get your dealer to furnish them to you. Address the Ashland Mfg. Co., Ashland, Ohio.

BANK SAVED FROM LOSS

To protect the Mt. Holly National Bank, Mt. Holly, Mich., from loans made by Cashier Frederick H. Lee to himself, that official has given a mortgage on his real estate holdings to the banking institution. It was said that Lee's borrowings amount to $10,000.

At the board meeting Lee insisted upon his resignation being accepted. Several members voted not to accept it, but it was finally carried and Albert Walters, the receiving teller of the bank, was elected to fill the vacancy.

The board then made a statement to the effect that Mr. Lee's indebtedness to the bank would not exceed $10,000; that this was amply secured by collateral and that the banks solvency was beyond question.

Some time last summer Mr. Lee presented his resignation as cashier. This was shortly after the assistant cashier, C. S. Heller, had robbed the bank of $18,000 and fled to Germany, where he is still supposed to be in hiding.

Jacob H. Shanard, banker of Bridgewater, S. D., is dead.

PROF. GOODE'S LECTURE

At the last meeting of the Chicago Chapter, Tuesday, March 14th, Prof. J. Paule Goode gave his stereopticon lecture on "The Age of Steel" showing the enormous advance in civilization since the art of making steel out of iron ore was discovered. In fact Prof. Goode attributes our wonderful progress during the past half century to this fact.

Prof. Goode has just received a flattering offer from the Philippine Government to investigate its harbor problem, etc. He will leave shortly for the Isles.

As arranged, Messrs. Tesmer and Grier of the Merchants Loan and Trust Company favored the boys with a song entitled "Never Again." The music was composed by Mr. Tesmer, while the words were written by Mr. Grier. Both the words and music were catchy and were worthy of many professional writers.

In the past the Chicago Chapter has had an athletic meet each spring at Bartlett's Gymnasium. This year, however, it has been decided to omit this event from the program.

IMPORTANT LEAGUE MEETING

Tacoma, March 21.—The second meeting of the North Central Washington Bankers League, being the group of bankers belonging to the counties of Chelan, Douglas, Grant and Okanogan, was held in the city of Wenatchee, Saturday, March 11th, and proved to be one of the most successful and interesting bankers' meetings ever held in the state.

In addition to the regular members of the league the following bankers from outside cities were in attendance:

Walter L. Clark, auditor Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, Spokane; P. C. Kauffman, vice-president Fidelity Trust Company, Tacoma; Thomas H. Brewer, president Fidelity National Bank, Spokane; J. S. Swallow, vice-president National Bank of Commerce, Seattle; C. T. Clark, cashier National Bank of Commerce, Seattle, B. L. Jenkins, auditor Union Securities Company, Spokane.

The morning session was a routine one, being taken up with the reports of the officers, and other routine matters. After adjournment automobiles were in waiting which took the visiting bankers a ride around through the city of Wenatchee and across the Columbia River, by means of the steel bridge recently purchased by the state, and through the orchards that fill the valley. At two o'clock the regular session was held at which addresses were made by J. A. Swallow, vice-president National Bank of Commerce, Seattle, on "Present Conditions," Walter L. Clark, auditor Spokane and Eastern Trust Company on "Interior Work of the Metropolitan Bank," P. C. Kauffman, vice-president Fidelity Trust Company on "The Daybreak of a Sound Currency" being a thorough exposition of Senator Aldrich's National Reserve Association Plan, G. P. Wiley, cashier Waterville Savings Bank on "Banking as viewed by a country banker," George R. Fisher, cashier First National Bank, Wenatchee, had a very interesting paper on "Over-Speculation."

In the evening a very interesting discussion arose covering a number of important subjects such as "Overdrafts," "Conservatism," "Protective Work," which discussion was participated in by the members present generally. Short addresses were made by a number of visiting bankers including Thomas H. Brewer, president Fidelity National Bank, Spokane, B. L. Jenkins, auditor Union Securities Company, Spokane; Bank Examiner Barber and others. As it had been announced that the bankers of Wenatchee had determined to extend an invitation to the executive council of the Washington Bankers Association to hold its 1911 convention in the city of Wenatchee, which invitation was most heartily agreed to by the Wenatchee Commercial Club, an organization with a membership of 500 in whose rooms the meeting of the North Central Washington Bankers League was held, a resolution was unanimously adopted expressing the earnest desire of the North Central Washington Bankers League that the invitation should be accepted and pledging their support to the effort made to make the 1911 convention one of the most successful in the history of the association. After adjournment the visiting bankers were the guests of their Wenatchee hosts at a splendid banquet held in the rooms of the Commercial Club. Sheriff Ferguson of Chelan county entertained the guests with a number of his inimitable stories told in a manner which has made him famous throughout the state. The banquet closed at midnight giving the bankers from the Sound time to catch the one o'clock train for home. Election of the officers of the league resulted as follows:

President, George P. Wiley, cashier Waterville Savings Bank; vice-president for Chelan county, E. F. Stowell, cashier Cashmere State Bank; vice-president, Grant county, A. L. Tucker, cashier Coulee State Bank, Coulee City; vice-president Okanogan county, Harry J. Kerr, cashier First National Bank, Okanogan; vice-president Douglas county, A. Kirkpatrick, cashier Mansfield State Bank, Mansfield; secretary and treasurer, J. M. Gangler, cashier Tumwater Savings Bank, Leavenworth.

In addition to the visitors, visiting bankers and officers named the following were present:

P. M. Snyder, manager Commercial Bank, Okonagan; O. W. Tupper and J. W. Brewer, cashiers Citizens State Bank, Wilson Creek; William G. Hughes, cashier Commercial Bank of Twisp; W. A. Thompson, president and F. G. Hamilton, cashier Farmers and Merchants Bank, Wenatchee; W. T. Clark, president, George R. Fisher, cashier, and J. D. Wares, assistant cashier First National Bank, Wenatchee, Guy C. Browne, vice-president; Charles E. Owens, cashier; F. D. Case, assistant cashier, Columbia Valley Bank, Wenatchee; F. D. Case, assistant cashier, Columbia Valley Bank, Wenatchee; F. S. Jacobsen, vice-president Tumwater Savings Bank, Leavenworth; R. B. Field, cashier Leavenworth State Bank; W. W. Downie, cashier First National Bank, Harrington; O. A. Barber, deputy state bank examiner.

The meeting was presided over by F. S. Jacobsen, first president of the league, F. D. Case, first secretary and treasurer, to whose efforts the remarkable success of the league is largely due, which was recognized by the earnest resolutions of thanks to them unanimously adopted just prior to adjournment.

PITTSBURGH HEARS DR. HUEBNER

On March 14th, Pittsburgh chapter of the American Institute of Banking was addressed by Dr. S. S. Huebner of the Wharton School of Accounts and Finance, Philadelphia, on the New York weekly bank statement.

Dr. Huebner's address was a revelation to all present, his analysis being clear and concise. Pittsburgh chapter will endeavor to have this address printed in pamphlet form for distribution.

On the evening of March 16th, about one hundred of the Pittsburgh chapter members attended a banquet in honor of the president of the National Institute, E. H. MacMichael, who is a member of this chapter.

A very delightful evening was spent; entertainment being furnished by members of the chapter, and a number of addresses were made in addition to that of the honor guest. This is the first large gathering of this kind within the chapter, and it was such a decided success that it may be an annual affair.

JOHN DEM WERTS.

BANK WITHOUT A PRESIDENT

It is now nearly two months since Valentine P. Snyder tendered his resignation as president of the National Bank of Commerce, New York, to take effect April 1st, but so far there has not been any intimation as to his successor. The banking world is naturally interested to know who is to be the man on whose shoulders the powers that be are disposed to place the responsibility of heading this great banking institution, the second largest in the country. It is characteristic of Mr. Morgan, however, to take his time about such matters. Unless Mr. Snyder's successor is chosen within the next few weeks the presidency may remain unfilled, as is the case at present with regard to another Morgan institution—the Equitable Life Assurance Society.

FORMER TELLER A PRINTER

From receiving teller in a national bank at a salary of $1,000 a year to the position of an unpaid apprentice in a print shop, was the change made last week by Charles Schimer, formerly teller for the Minnesota National Bank, who is now on probation, following his plea of guilty to a charge of embezzling $480 of the bank's funds.

In overalls and with grimy hands Schimer is now starting at the bottom of the ladder and expects before the year is over, to be earning more money as the operator of a linotype machine, than he ever did in the bank's employ, where he handled thousands daily. A linotype operator earns $25 to $30 a week.

Bonds and Stocks

Stockholders of the Booth Fisheries Company met Wednesday and adopted unanimously the plan of financial reorganization. After the meeting of the stockholders the directors met and declared a cash dividend of 3 per cent on the preferred stock. The preferred issue will be placed at once on a 6 per cent dividend basis, payable semiannually. The dividend declared will be paid on March 31st to stock of record March 30th.

The new financial plan provides for an authorized issue of $5,000,000 6 per cent debenture gold bonds, of which amount $4,000,000 has been issued.

Sears-Roebuck common was brought actively in the Chicago market early this week and was advanced more than three points in price to 149 at the end of the session. Transactions in the stock aggregated more than 3,100 shares. A considerable part of the buying is understood to have been for people who have carried Sears for some time and have built up large margins of profit on their holdings. The range of prices since the extra stock dividend came off has made speculative buying a less formidable matter than it was when the quotations were up around 190.

Commonwealth Edison was considerably less active than it had been for some time before the increase in the dividend was announced. Quotations were in a narrow range, the closing being at 128 $\frac{1}{4}$.

Booth Fisheries preferred was run up to 82 again in the early trading, but liberal offerings of the stock broke the price back to 80. The common stock and the voting trust certificates were a fraction higher. Swift shares were in some demand and up around 101.

The acquisition of the entire capital stock and all the assets of the Northwestern Fisheries Company by the Booth Fisheries Company nearly doubles the earning capacity of this organization, making it about $1,000,000.

It was stated that the issue of $4,000,000 of Booth Fisheries debentures had been oversubscribed.

The only trading in the elevated road shares was in Metropolitan common and preferred and that was for small amounts without important price changes. There are still some important details of the offer for the properties in the merger deal to be worked out.

Chicago railways 5 per cent bonds were handled in liberal amounts at 98 $\frac{1}{4}$ and a shade higher and the consolidated B bonds were firm at 84. City railway 5s had some call at 102 $\frac{3}{8}$. Metropolitan "L" extension 4s were taken at 81 $\frac{1}{2}$, that price representing an advance of 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ points in the past few weeks. Edison 5s were slightly easier.

Bankers figure in the commission appointed to take charge of the proposed art museum in Minneapolis. The banks receive the subscriptions. On the commission are W. H. Dunwoody and Judge M. B. Koon, respectively president and vice-president of the Northwestern National. On the finance committee are E. W. Decker, vice-president of the Northwestern; C. T. Jaffray, vice-president of the First National; and Perry Harrison, vice-president of the Security National.

NOTICE OF BOND SALE

The Hood River Irrigation District, Hood River, Oregon, will sell $70,000.00 completion bonds at the office of its secretary on April 17th at 2 p. m. The irrigation district is not a Carey Act project but is organized and operates under state law practically the same as a school district. These bonds bear 6% interest, semi-annual, are retired in 20 years, and are a first mortgage on the lands of the district, and a prior lien against the lands to everything else. The District has been operating 5 years and must now complete its system. The lands within the District are mostly bearing orchards and strawberry fields, and were last year assessed for state and county taxes at $820,701.00. Further information will be furnished by

R. W. KELLY, Secretary.

New Iowa Move

Des Moines, March 24.—Officials of the various trust companies in Iowa at a meeting in Des Moines this week, decided to organize a state association apart from the Iowa Bankers Association. It is probable that it will be known as the Iowa Association of Trust Companies. A committee on organization was named. It is composed of E. L. Johnson of the Leavitt-Johnson Trust Company of Waterloo and W. E. Coffin, president of the Iowa Loan and Trust Company of Des Moines. It is expected that a meeting will be called soon at which officers will be elected.

At the sessions held in Des Moines, James F. Toy of the Farmers Trust and Savings of Sioux City presided while H. S. Merrick, president of the Phoenix Trust Company of Ottumwa was secretary.

The officials present endorsed the bill now before the legislature giving trust companies the power to act as executors of estates or as guardians or trustees for children and estates.

At a banquet at the Savery Monday night, 144 trust company officials and legislators were present. Speeches were made by Mr. Toy, William T. Abbott of Chicago; Auditor of State H. L. Bleakly; Judge D. J. Lenehan of Dubuque; Judge Lawrence DeGraff of Des Moines; Roger Leavitt, vice-president of the Cedar Falls Trust Company; Senator Robert Hunter of Sioux City and Representative Karl Johnson of Osage.

KANSAS CITY GRAIN FAILURE

Kansas City, Mo., March 20.—Liabilities of the Perry C. Smith Grain Company, which failed on Saturday will be $250,000. The assets are estimated at $150,000.

Three banks in Kansas City are said to have been caught. One holds elevator receipts to secure $120,000, another for $40,000, and a third for $10,000. There is a question as to the ownership of the grain.

Louis Betz, banker, addressed the St. Paul chapter at its last meeting and Elliott Hensel gave a program of readings. A nominating committee was chosen for each of two tickets to be put in the field and for delegates to the Rochester convention. The members adjourned to a cafe for luncheon.

Democrat Plans

Washington, March 22.—Looking forward to the presentation of a bill embodying the Aldrich plan of currency reform, democrats are preparing plans of their own to be presented in opposition. It is not certain as yet whether this plan will be given an official party endorsement or whether that will be left to inference and assumption. A draft of a bill is being worked out by Senator Newlands of Nevada, and it is believed that it will get the support of many Democrats who are interested in banking and currency legislation.

The outlines of Senator Newlands' plan are indistinct thus far, but the main idea of it, as now understood, will be the establishment of a centralizing mechanism analogous in certain ways to the Aldrich plan for a reserve association. One of the distinguishing characteristics of the plan is that it will require the co-operation of state institutions as well as of national.

Other Democrats are also working upon currency plans and it is likely that several will make their appearance. One which has been presented to Democratic members of the House Banking and Currency Committee and which is apparently favorably regarded by some of these men is a scheme for a combination of life insurance with central banking. The proposition would be to give the sole power of issue to the central bank just as in the Aldrich scheme, but the stock will be held by individuals who would also be policyholders. This plan has already been developed in great detail and is being urged here by one or two southern Democrats who are not members of congress, but who are taking a vigorous interest in promoting the scheme.

The interesting feature of the currency situation is that Democrats have undoubtedly become aroused to the fact that they cannot simply rely upon opposition to the Aldrich plan but must begin to formulate a proposal of some kind that can be presented as a substitute. Such a substitute would, it is supposed, receive due consideration in congress and would relieve the party of the charge that it is not fertile in currency reform propositions. It is noted that the plans of Democratic currency reformers all seem to contain a centralizing mechanism designed to perform the same function that would be afforded by Senator Aldrich's National Reserve Association of America. It is felt that some method of bringing about association and co-operation between the banks is absolutely indispensable.

The two points at which the most criticism is visited upon the Aldrich plan, according to Democratic students of the situation, is in connection with the method of control of the institution and the ownership of the stock. The Democrats will not be willing to have the stock owned by national banks and probably not even by national and state banks together. On the other hand, they do not appear to be willing to have the issue function as closely centralized as it would be under the Aldrich proposition. Senator Bailey has recently again declared in favor of having all paper currency issued by the government and none of the banks. How this would fit in to the centralizing plans is not known, but Senator Bailey has only a moderate following on this point.

DEATH OF EDWARD L. BREWSTER

Edward L. Brewster, who died on Tuesday, as a result of an operation last Saturday, was one of the oldest as well as one of the most highly regarded stockbrokers in Chicago. He entered the business in 1872 as a member of the firm of Wrenn and Brewster. John H. Wrenn, who retired from business the first of this year, was his partner at that time. Mr. Brewster had high ideals and high standards in business and during his career he enjoyed the confidence of many of the foremost men in the city.

POPULAR TEXAS BANKER

Joseph Hirsch, an active official of Corpus Christi National Bank, has been visiting Chicago bankers this week. Mr. Hirsch is in a position to know about affairs in Texas and declares that the state is enjoying an era of great prosperity. There is the most gratifying progress in agriculture and land development.

New Bond House

F. J. Lisman and Company of New York, with offices in Philadelphia, Hartford and Baltimore, and members of the New York stock exchange, has decided to open an office April 1st, at 184 LaSalle Street, Chicago, under the management of Frederick Carles, recently of the bond department of the Farwell Trust Company of Chicago. This is a well known firm and will add to the strength of the local situation. Mr. Carles has a wide acquaintance with Chicago investors and knows the likes and dislikes of his clients in a way which greatly increases his effectiveness.

whether or not the Bible should be taught in the public schools. When the question came up for vote, Ole refused to go on record, stating that while he had heard of the book he had never read it. By unanimous consent disposition of the matter was postponed until the next meeting, enabling Ole to post up on the subject. When the time came and the final vote was taken, Ole voted in the negative and explained his action by saying that he was a patriotic citizen of Minneapolis and since the last meeting he had secured a copy of the Bible, read carefully and had noticed the word St. Paul advertised therein at least one hundred times and in spite of a thorough search he failed to find once the name of Minneapolis.

"Incidentally St. Paul and Minneapolis are great banking centers. From conversation with several bankers, I am led to believe that deposits are not now at a high water mark and that the situation in that section is one that will test the sagacity and strength of bankers and merchants. Business will be below normal during the next few months owing in part to a feeling of caution and no less to the empty granaries, hay-mows and depleted flocks and herds following a drouth in the states of Minnesota, Wisconsin and the Dakotas.

"A day was spent in a country town forty miles out, where in addition to country banking I talked potatoes, rye, barley and dairy products. Bankers expect deposits to fall off until another crop is made. The disposition is to carry farmers of standing and reputation.

"Two things new to me were brought to my attention—first, call loans, a joke in Chicago, but claimed to be a reality in the Twin cities as they are in New York. Second, Minnesota number thirteen seed corn, which it is claimed is bred up to a point where it will mature in eighty-four days, which means much to the corn grower of the Northwest. As a banker and a farmer I was deeply interested in both."

Charles R. Frost, secretary of the Minnesota Bankers Association and manager of the Interstate Protective Association, has returned to his office. The significance of this statement is that Mr. Frost has been absent from his office. Several days ago Mr. Frost in a contest between a trolley car and himself was bested. The car tossed him handily several feet. Mr. Frost cries foul because he was not warned. He had to go to bed and still suffers from the shock, bruises and cuts.

North Dakota's New Law

Regarding North Dakota's new banking law Senator W. C. McDowell, chairman of the senate banking committee, father of the bill and president of the state bankers association, says:

"One of the very important results of the enforcement of this law is the fact that it will restore greater confidence to the banks. The fact that the state banking department is compelled to make semiannual examinations of the banks under the law means that the bank examiners will be in closer touch with the activities of the banks. The bank examiners, too, will be appointed to a certain district in which there will be about 100 banks, thus giving the examiner sufficient time in which to make the examination thorough.

"Under the present plan it has not been possible to keep a bank examiner in one section of the state, but under the new law, each examiner having a certain district to cover and being constantly in that district soon places him in a position to become conversant with the affairs of every banking establishment under his jurisdiction.

"I am very sorry that we are obliged to make certain concessions in the bill," continued Mr. McDowell, "but I felt, as did others interested in the measure, that there were so many exceptionally good features that we could afford to recede from some of them. I am firm in the belief that the minimum capital stock that was proposed, that of $20,000, was not too great, and that, had the measure been passed in that form, it would have provided even further safeguards for the people of the state.

"Then, too, there are other provisions. The one, under which the appointment of receivers for defunct banks will be placed in the hands of the state banking board instead of the district court should have the effect of securing better administration of the affairs of such institutions.

"In carrying out the provisions of this bill the expense falls entirely upon the banks. The annual inspection fees, by reason of the fact that there will be two inspections hereafter instead of one, has been increased and, had it not been for the action of the assembly in refusing to create a separate banking department, those fees would have been even higher.

Northwestern Notes

Plans for raising an additional $25,000 of stock to float the Provident Loan Company at St. Paul have been renewed with the return of manager Arthur W. Gutridge from Pittsburgh. More than half the $450,000 has been subscribed. The organization is anti-loan shark.

Senator M. J. McGrath has introduced a bill in the Minnesota legislature amending the banking law to make it the duty of the state superintendent of banking to judge of local need of banking facilities. The bill would regulate establishment of banks where there are banks already. The suggestion is followed in this bill of the former banking superintendent.

Legislative action is to be asked to pay $22,000 and interest to the holder of Minnesota bonds issued by the state in 1858 and 1859 to aid in railroad construction. The bonds were repudiated. Later the legislature paid 50 per cent on the face of the securities. Mr. Temple would like the remaining 50 per cent and interest. The bill introduced provides that the state pay interest at 7 per cent from March 15, 1859. This will be $80,080 on the one-half unpaid of the bonds.

J. A. Latta, vice-president of the Northwestern National, and P. G. Leeman, assistant cashier of the First National, attended the annual meeting of Group Three, South Dakota Bankers Association at Watertown. Bankers who attended the meeting predicted larger acreage sown to grain than last year.

H. C. Delaney, charged with accepting deposits when he knew the bank with which he was connected was insolvent, is to be taken to Culbertson, Mont., on requisition. He has been at Williston. The point of law to be raised is that Delaney had sold out before the crash came. The prosecution says he was interested at the time.

Twin City people are having trouble with Mexican $5 bills, worth $2.40, which they have accepted as Canadian bills because of resemblance to that paper which passes at par in the Northwest.

The Fort Pierre National Bank, S. D., and Masonic Building is to be built by a Chippewa Falls contractor. The Wisconsin man got the contract at $16,588.

The state board of investment has taken action on an issue of $82,000 South St. Paul bonds originally issued in 1891 to aid in construction of a bridge. They were refunded May 1st. The state will pay 4 per cent at thirty years.

"The Capital National Bank Savings Association" has got to change its name, on invitation of the attorney-general of the state. In an opinion to Vice-President W. B. Geery of the bank he says the word savings is forbidden by statute.

Milwaukee will vote in April on issuing $1,000,000 bonds for a terminal station.

Pittsburgh

Money is more plentiful in Pittsburgh at present than it has been for a long time. While the great body of loans outstanding is at 6 per cent, there is considerable call money offering around 5 per cent. The country banks are putting out money on call here through their city correspondents, and the local banks and trust companies are well supplied with loanable funds. Requirements of security brokers are very small, and this has tended to increase the supply of money, for in times gone by a great deal of money was needed to finance stock market business. Exchanges at the clearing house reflect a good volume of general business. For February they were $180,801,659, which compares with $184,631,310 in February of last year.

The twenty-eight Pittsburgh national banks show total deposits as of March 7th, of $211,936,408, compared with $198,479,735 on January 7th, and $194,425,382 on March 24, 1910.

Stockholders of the Union Switch and Signal Company, at the meeting Tuesday, adopted the profit sharing plan. The resolution adopted authorized directors to set aside, sell, or otherwise dispose of 2,000 shares or any less amount of the authorized and unissued common capital stock (being a portion of the increased capital stock authorized at the meeting of the stockholders December 14th) to or for the benefit of such employees whether stockholders or not (excluding directors and general officers) as the board shall deem proper, at such price, not less than par, and upon such terms and conditions and in such manner as the board shall from time to time deem proper. Directors of the Union Switch and Signal Company were elected as follows: John F. Miller, George Westinghouse, William McConway, George C. Smith, Thomas Rodd, H. G. Prout, and James P. Donnell. Officers were re-elected.

Stockholders of the Colonial Trust Company voted Thursday for the segregation of the Colonial group of financial institutions. The officials received sufficient proxies from stockholders to take favorable action on the proposition. The Colonial Trust Company owns the Columbia National and the Germania Savings Banks.

The Colonial is capitalized at $4,000,000. The capital will be reduced to $2,400,000, the reduction being accomplished by a pro rata distribution of Columbia National and Germania Savings shares. In the exchange of stocks the following values are placed on the shares: Colonial, $200; Columbia, $240, and Germania, $621.

The Colonial also controls the Freehold Bank, and since its incorporation in 1902 absorbed the following institutions: American Trust, Pennsylvania Trust, City Trust, Colonial National and Tradesmen's National. With the plan just approved in operation the Colonial Trust, Germania Savings and Columbia National will be conducted as separate institutions.

Something in the nature of a sensation was sprung Tuesday at the annual stockholders' meeting of the Pittsburgh Coal Company in Jersey City by Attorney J. W. Kinnear, of Pittsburgh, representing W. M. Parkin, also of Pittsburgh, a stockholder, when he charged in effect that the United States Steel Corporation is receiving coal from the company at a cost much less than the expense of mining the fuel. It was stated that Mr. Kinnear's charges and questions were satisfactorily answered by officers.

Johns McCleave, a well known attorney and a director of the Union National Bank of Pittsburgh, died on Tuesday at Atlantic City, whither he had gone in search of health.

The supreme court of Pennsylvania has rendered a decision on the petition for a change of venue on the part of F. N. Hoffstot. The decision is that he must stand trial in Allegheny county, on charges of bribery and conspiracy in connection with the passage by Pittsburgh councils of an ordinance for the selection of city depositories.

Third National of Pittsburgh has mailed the following announcements: "The board of directors of the Third National Bank, Pittsburgh, takes pleasure in announcing that Mr. William McK. Reed has been elected president of this bank. Mr. Reed resigned as assistant cashier of the First National Bank on January tenth to accept this position."

STEEL TRADE FAIRLY ACTIVE

The various steel companies continue to report a good run of new business. The United States Steel Corporation, it is estimated, is receiving new business at the rate of between 37,000 and 38,000 tons a day. Most of the business received is for light finished products. The demand for heavy steel, including rails, structural shapes, etc., continues light. For example, the Illinois Steel Co. is operating less than 50 per cent of its maximum capacity.

Should the railroads begin to place normal orders it would not be long before the heavy steel mills are operating full time.

The American Steel and Wire Co. is doing the largest business in its history.

Rail orders during the past week were small, but a large tonnage is under negotiation. The United States Steel Corporation disposed of a total of about 18,000 tons.

The Illinois Steel Co. booked orders for 13,000 tons. The Carnegie Steel Co. sold 3,000 tons to the Ocala Northern, and the Tennessee Coal and Iron Co. 1,600 tons, of which about 1,000 tons go to Vicksburg, Shreveport and Pacific.

A special meeting of the Textile National Bank stockholders has been called for April 19th to vote for or against an increase of $100,000 in the capital stock. The present capitalization is $200,000. The Textile National is six years old. An official of the institution explained that the only purpose of the proposed additional capital was to keep pace with the increasing business.

Joseph C. Mullen, formerly the paying teller of the Western National Bank, who pleaded guilty to stealing $7,000, was sentenced to serve five years in the Federal prison at Atlanta, Ga., by Judge McPherson, sitting in the United States District Court, on Thursday last. The company which went on Mullen's bond made restitution to the bank.

Savings banks in Pennsylvania will be permitted to establish life insurance departments and to grant annuities if Representative Reyburn's bill before the legislature is made a law. The limit of the amount of insurance to an individual is $500 and no annuity above $200 can be guaranteed to any one person.

Within two months the banks of Philadelphia increased their holdings of investment securities by $1,851,451, bringing the total close to record figures, the aggregate standing at $31,949,280.

Banks of Philadelphia earned nearly 20 per cent upon their capital during the period covered from March 29, 1910, to March 7th this year. The total earned was $4,522,272, which compared with $4,023,482 in the nearest correspondent period of April 28, 1909, to March 29, 1910. With two exceptions the net profits were the largest yet recorded. More than half the sum earned went to shareholders, $2,469,000 going out in dividends, the balance, $2,053,272, being credited to surplus and undivided profits, bringing the latter up to the unprecedented total of $41,997,666.

NATIONAL BANK EXPANSION

Washington, March 22.—Reports of conditions of national banks, made in response to the comptroller's last call on March 7th, continue to show a gradual expansion with a slight tendency to curtail national bank circulation. The New York banks appear to have a substantial reserve piled up over the requirements of law.

The contraction of national bank circulation is reflected in deposits of lawful money in the treasury to retire the bank currency. The banks are about $6,000,000 ahead of the treasury in the redemptions, and treasury officials believe that much of the national bank circulation now being retired will not be seen again until the crop moving season in the fall.

The large redemptions are held to indicate a general movement of money from the interior to the central reserve cities, particularly to New York.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, March 22.—Edwin T. Coman, head of the Old National Bank, who was elected president of the Spokane chamber of commerce on March 14th, to succeed Charles M. Fassett, resigned, to become commissioner of public utilities under the new form of municipal government, has accepted the chairmanship of the greater Spokane committee, which will soon launch the most comprehensive industrial movement yet undertaken for the upbuilding of Spokane and the Inland Empire. A fund of $60,000 will be raised at once for this work.

The features of the 1911 campaign are the establishment of an industrial department and convention bureau, furthering the freight rate case and maintaining a permanent exhibit of the resources of the Spokane country. Other bankers identified with the committee of 81 are: A. F. McClaine, president of the Traders National; Thomas H. Brewer, president of the Fidelity National; James C. Cunningham, secretary-treasurer of the Union Trust Company; Julius Galland, Northwest Loan and Trust; William Huntley, president of the Farmers and Mechanics; J. Grier Long, president of the Washington Trust Company; J. W. Hughes, cashier of the Farmers and Mechanics; F. M. March, president of the Bank of Commerce, and R. Lewis Rutter, secretary of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company. R. Insinger, manager of the Northwestern and Pacific Hypotheekbank, is vice-chairman. Ren H. Rice is secretary, with headquarters at 216 Hutton Building.

May Change Tax System

Bankers in Spokane are of the opinion that the decision of the supreme court of the United States, upholding the validity of the corporation tax, has opened the way for radical changes in the taxation system. W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National Bank said that one beneficial result of the corporation tax will be to hold corporations closer to a strict business basis. This checking up every year, he added, will give them an opportunity to know better their condition. The reports are strictly confidential, but it will have a good effect.

Idaho Resources

R. Cushing Moore, state mine inspector of Idaho, says in his annual report, just issued, that Shoshone county, in the Coeur d'Alene district, produced gold, silver, lead, copper and zinc of a value of $15,275,024 in 1910, as against $13,723,105 in 1909. Lead was the principal product, being estimated at 229,950,506 pounds, valued at $10,348,177.80. The state's output, including the foregoing, was $17,135,695.90 and $210,000,000 since the beginning of operations in 1885.

Miscellaneous News

George Palmer, president of the La Grande National Bank at La Grande, Ore., has resigned to devote his attention to the lumber business. He is succeeded by Fred Holmes, president and manager of the M. and M. Company. Will J. Church is vice-president.

Directors of the Weber Bank of Wardner, Idaho, have elected these officers: President, J. H. Weber; vice-president, P. P. Weber; cashier, T. R. Jones; assistant cashier, W. A. Barte. After paying a substantial dividend there was $3,000 surplus, which gives the bank a capitalization of $23,000.

Reports of the First National Bank and the Bank of Pasco, Wash., show total resources of $411,718.29, divided as follows: Loans and discounts, $222,887.17; bonds, warrants and other securities, $53,645.22; banking houses and fixtures, $24,755.46; cash on hand, $27,203.00; deposits, $193,052.90.

S. A. Anderson, cashier of the Scandinavian-American Bank of Spokane, has resigned, and is succeeded by Oscar Lawson, formerly cashier of the First National Bank of Troy, Idaho. Mr. Anderson made a strong race for a commissionship at the recent municipal election.

Conner Malott, manager of the mortgage department of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, says there is an unusual demand for large farm loans at rates ranging from 6½ to 8 per cent. The crop outlook is bright, due to climatic conditions, he adds, and bankers believe the Inland Empire will at least produce an average crop this season. Farmers say the grain, grass and fruit yield will reach the $100,000,000 mark.

W. S. Finney, formerly employed by the Old National Bank, who went to Sandpoint, Idaho, two and a half years ago, has resigned as cashier of the First National Bank there to open a bank in the Puget Sound Country.

Thomas H. Brewer, president of the Fidelity National Bank, was elected vice-president of the Spokane Y. M. C. A., on April 13th. James C. Cunningham, secretary-treasurer of the Union Trust Company, was chosen a member of the board of trustees. Robert B. Paterson, a millionaire dry goods merchant, is president.

BANQUET OF WESTERN MEN

North Central Washington bankers league closed its annual meeting at Wenatchee with a banquet the evening of March 12th. The speakers were P. C. Kauffman, president of the Fidelity Trust Company, Tacoma, and secretary of the Washington State Bankers Association; George P. Wiley, Waterville; J. L. Swatwell, cashier of the National Bank of Commerce, Seattle, and George R. Fisher of Wenatchee. These officers were elected: president, George P. Wiley, Waterville; vice-president Chelan county, E. F. Stowell, Cashmere; vice-president, Grant county, L. A. Tucker, Coulee City; vice-president Okanogan county, Harry J. Kerr, Okanogan; vice-president Douglas county, A. Kirkpatrick, Mansfield; secretary and treasurer, J. M. Gangler, Leavenworth. The state association was invited to hold its next convention at Wenatchee.

PROFITS IN POSTAL DEPOSITS

What profits can be derived from postal savings deposits? On this subject Folsom and Adams of New York have prepared very elaborate calculations in the preface to which they state:

"The installation of postal savings depositories under the act approved June 25, 1910, has brought forth numerous inquiries. Many requests have been received for information concerning the profit to be derived by banks designated as depositories for postal savings funds.

"We have, therefore, prepared a calculation which appears on the next page. The example is based on $100,000 Porto Rico 4s due January 1, 1925. The profit from a larger or smaller deposit would be proportionate. The increased income over that to be secured by loaning the net cost of the bonds at 5 per cent is $1,219 per annum. The Porto Rico 4s are generally serial. They mature from January 1, 1912, to January 1, 1933. We have selected for the tables those maturing in 1915, 1920, 1925 and 1930 as fairly representative of the profit to be derived, when used in this connection."

San Francisco

Prof. B. C. Jones of the University of California is delivering a series of four lectures on banking up before the local chapter of the American Institute of Banking on the evenings of March 23d, 30th and April 6th and 13th.

George L. Wells, Pacific Coast representative of the National Bank of the Republic, Chicago, has arrived in town from Honolulu on his return to Chicago.

The Associated Savings Banks of San Francisco, at the annual meeting received reports and elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, R. M. Tobin; vice-president, G. Tourney; secretary-treasurer, J. S. Drum; assistant secretary, F. H. Colburn. The following 11 banks, with an aggregate capital, surplus and deposits of over $165,000,000, are members of the organization: Bank of Italy, Columbus Savings and Loan Society, French-American Bank of Savings, German Savings and Loan Society, Hibernia Savings and Loan Society, Humboldt Savings Bank, Italian-American Bank, Mission Savings Bank, Mutual Savings Bank, Savings Union Bank of San Francisco and Security Savings Bank.

Irving H. Sanborn, until recently note teller in the American National Bank of San Francisco, has been elected assistant cashier of the First National Bank of Oakland. Mr. Sanborn has been prominently connected with the American Institute of Banking, at one time holding the office of treasurer of the national organization.

Some of the larger savings banks and trust companies in California have decided to discontinue the making of building loans, it is said, if the proposed mechanics' lien law now before the legislature becomes a law in fact. The contention of the banks is that all protection to the lender of money for building purposes is destroyed by a provision in the measure which makes claims for labor and material the first liens upon the building and property. Under the present law the mortgage building loan is the first lien upon the building.

Secret service agents have located in San Francisco a band of five counterfeiters whom they have been chasing from place to place over the continent for some months. The gang began their operations in the East, and a short time ago they appeared in Sacramento, where they were successful in disposing of a number of counterfeit bills. The spurious greenbacks are said to be cleverly executed and difficult to detect.

Seattle

J. C. Norman has been promoted by the directors of the Dexter Horton National Bank to be assistant cashier, succeeding Guy F. Clark, who this week entered upon his duties as cashier of the National Bank of Commerce.

Seattle voters last week declared in favor of the adoption of the system or plan of a city electric railway on Rainier Avenue and other streets and assented to the incurring of a general indebtedness therefor of $800,000 for the purpose. This was the declared estimate of the project's cost. The bonds are limited to 4½ per cent interest and are to run 20 years.

Some of the new laws of interest to bankers follow: Making Monday following a legal holiday also a holiday; new insurance code; permitting foreign trust companies to loan money; requiring that school warrants be presented to auditor for registration.

Los Angeles

Charles E. Greene, former cashier of the Merchants National Bank of this city, has been appointed examiner on the staff of State Superintendent Williams. Mr. Greene will have offices in this city. J. H. Ramboey succeeds Mr. Greene as cashier of the Merchants National. H. H. Martin and O. A. Cox have been chosen assistants.

J. O. Moore, formerly teller in the National Bank of California of this city, has accepted the position of assistant clearing house examiner for Los Angeles banks. G. C. Bradley has been chosen to take Mr. Moore's place as teller.

Ralph E. Dobbs, cashier of the Equitable Savings Bank of this city has been appointed State Bank Examiner by State Superintendent Williams. Mr. Dobbs will be stationed in San Francisco. No one has yet been chosen to fill Mr. Dobb's vacated position at the Equitable Savings.

G. S. Pickerell has been appointed assistant cashier of National Bank of California; and J. H. Booge has been appointed assistant cashier of First National of Pasadena.

A HARRIMAN NATIONAL FOR NEW YORK

A charter for The Harriman National Bank of New York, organized by the family of the late E. H. Harriman to perpetuate his memory, was issued at Washington on Monday. The Day and Night Bank of New York will be absorbed. Joseph W. Harriman, a nephew of the late Mr. Harriman, will be president of the new bank.

Des Moines, March 22.—Iowa bankers are aroused over a bill which has been introduced in the legislature by the ways and means committee of the senate and the house. The bill is intended to knock out the present tax on moneys and credits and provide a five mill flat rate instead. Bankers do not object to this but on the other hand it is what they have been seeking. However Section 2 of the bill provides as follows: "Section 1311 of the code is hereby amended by adding thereto the following words: Provided, however, that no deduction for debts shall be allowed from the shares of stock of any state, savings or national bank or loan and trust company, nor from moneyed capital used in competition with banks."

It is this clause that has stirred up the bankers and it resulted in a meeting of a number of leading men of the state in Des Moines last week. These bankers appointed a committee to send out circulars urging bankers to get busy and use their influence in putting the obnoxious section to sleep. The committee consisted of A. H. Gale and C. H. McNider of Mason City, John Blair of Des Moines and F. M. Hopkins of Guthrie Center. The bill was on the calendar for Friday but it provoked such a tempest that it was put over until Wednesday. Bankers show that the refusal to permit them to deduct indebtedness would add to the taxes of banks to an unreasonable degree.

Other Legislation

Considerable other legislation of interest to bankers is now pending. The bulk sales bill which forces retailers to give proper notice of an impending sale of stock to wholesalers was defeated in the house but later reconsidered and passed. The house of representatives passed the Moore bill providing that the treasurer of state may invest the state funds in banks outside of Des Moines providing they give proper securities. There are several rigid requirements exacted of the various banks before they can get the money. When the senate killed the bill to abolish the office of school treasurer, Senator Hammill put in one to require school treasurers to place the school funds at interest. This has not been acted upon as yet. The senate banking committee has recommended for passage the Smith bill making bills of lading negotiable. Under the measure, all bills of lading are made out to the order of the shipper and all shipments must be paid for before being received. Railway companies fought the bill two years ago but did not oppose it before the committee this year.

Representative E. R. Moore, a banker from Cedar Rapids, has introduced a bill providing for a reorganization of the state banking department. The state auditor is given power to appoint six or more state bank examiners. One is to be the chief bank examiner who is to have charge of the department at $2,400 per year. He shall direct the other examiners who will draw $2,000 per year. The bill provides that the following scale of fees shall be paid for examinations: $25,000 or under capital stock, $15; $25,000 to $50,000, $25; $50,000 to $100,000, $50; $100,000 to $150,000, $80; $150,000 to $300,000, $100; over $300,000, $150.

Strength of Banks

Secretary Hall of the Iowa Bankers Association has made some interesting compilations as to the investments of Iowa banks. Mr. Hall has found that the state and savings banks have in capital, surplus and profits $47,006,472. The national banks have $27,608,826. It is not possible to ascertain accurately what the private banks have but Mr. Hall has computed that the amount is $11,340,450 which is probably very nearly correct.

Sheldon is laying claim to the fact that it is the only town of 3,000 population in Northern Iowa that has a million dollar bank. The institution is the First National which reports an increase in deposits of $130,000 since January 1st and now with deposits of $810,000 it has total resources of $60,000 over the million dollar mark. The bank shows capital and surplus of $147,000. The bank makes a remarkable showing and there are few institutions in Iowa in a town of the same size that can make a better. F. E. Frisbee is president; J. H. Archer, vice-president; F. W. Bloxham, cashier; F. L. Barrager, assistant cashier.

Seeks Smooth Swindler

Secretary Hall of the Iowa Bankers Association is making desperate efforts to locate one Henry Russell alias W. C. Williams who is said to be about the smoothest forger who has worked in Iowa in many a day. Williams is an ex-newspaper man. He represents himself to be a piano salesman and produces check paid for a piano. "I am buying a piece of property in this city and I want to pay $100 down," he tells the banker. Then he flashes the check, secures the money and disappears. Russell works with larger checks and has secured $375 or $400 in each of the following Iowa cities. Sioux City, Ames, Albia, and Atlantic. Russell is said to have a wife in Des Moines who travels with him.

Currency Reform

Iowa bankers have been interested in a speech by former Congressman Dawson of the second Iowa district before the bankers of Baltimore and Washington in which he emphasized the need of currency reform. Inasmuch as Mr. Dawson is now settling down as the president of a bank at Davenport, he will have occasion to study these needs at closer range. In the course of his remarks at Baltimore, he said, "We tolerate a financial system which fails utterly when any unusual demand is made upon it," which is certainly evidence that Mr. Dawson believes there is room for improvement.

No Word of Penfield

Banker Penfield, the missing president of the Bank of Kelley, cannot be located. There has been no trace of him since he was seen in Chicago the night he fled despite a reward of $5,000 that has been hung temptingly before detectives. The American Bankers Association has taken up the case. An examination of the books of the bank shows that there is very little left with which to make an attempt at satisfying the claims of the depositors.

Iowa Miscellany

Frank Winters indicted for forgery some months ago was found guilty in the courts at Des Moines on a second trial. At the first hearing, Winters was found insane and sent to a hospital where he remained until cured.

The fact that Iowa has no law guaranteeing bank deposits almost lost the funds of the Iowa Mine Workers for the banks of this state. The miners, in convention at Des Moines took up the question of removing their money, $366,000, from Iowa banks to the institutions of Oklahoma so as to avail themselves of the famous statute there. The discussion was somewhat heated but the Iowa champions won out by a vote of 192 to 143.

The Des Moines school board will sell $210,000 in bonds in May. The bonds will consist of $35,000 in one issue and $175,000 in the other.

The Farmers State Savings at Mount Ayr has made application to be converted into the First National. The capital stock is $25,000.

The Cedar Rapids Clearing House Association entertained the Marion bankers at a dinner at the Hotel Montrose one night recently. George M. Reynolds of Chicago was the guest of honor. He spoke upon "Impending Financial Legislation and the Duty of Capital to the Public."

Application to organize the First National at Dexter has been made to the comptroller of the currency. The capital stock will be $25,000. A. T. Percy, B. F. Myers, M. F. Palmer, F. F. Winsell and B. C. Hemphill are the organizers.

Recent visitors in Des Moines included President A. M. Thatcher of the Luther Savings; President John McHugh of the First National, Sioux City; President E. T. Dufur, First National of Diagonal; President E. D. Baird, Bank of North English; Vice-President H. V. West, First National, Sumner; President J. A. Brown, State Bank of Chariton; President Parley Sheldon, Story County Bank of Ames; President W. V. Greeley, Union National, Ames.

CLOTHES HELP MAKE A MAN

From a Cedar Rapids paper comes a story that two local men (bankers), whose first names are John got into a peck of trouble at Vinton Sunday evening through being enthusiastic pedestrians.

Neither of these two men look the least bit suspicious. Instead they are dressy looking fellows who wear collars in a way that is the despair of the rest of the crowd. Both are in the same bank, one being cashier and the other assistant cashier.

Lately both have become enthusiastic pedestrians. On every possible occasion they walk. The subject is the one they talk about.

Saturday the two men made arrangements for a trip to Walker Sunday. They had agreed to walk the distance from Vinton. But writing checks and cashing them is not productive of much muscle so they finally backed down on walking the entire distance. One of the parties telephoned ahead to a livery man to meet them about half the distance from Walker to Vinton. The liveryman thought things looked fishy. He was on hand, however. They agreed with him that he was to drive them back the half way in the evening. That doubled the liveryman's suspicions so he made them put up the money for the distance they had been carried.

In the evening when he left them about half way between Walker and Vinton he telephoned the sheriff of Benton county and the town marshal. A good crowd was waiting for the two men when they arrived. So was the sheriff and the city marshal. The two men tried to explain. But they had not dressed up much in anticipation of the walk. Their appearance did not carry out the story that they were employed in banks at Cedar Rapids.

Then to cap the climax, they met a friend. He could not for the life of him remember what their last names were. But he knew the front name of each was John.

The sheriff telephoned to the police here. The police said there were two men by that name. But then came the rub. The police knew each man as most neatly and carefully dressed. As being so clean that a smudge of dirt on either one's face would create almost a panic. The description from Vinton did not fit the men.

Finally they do say that a cashier of a bank in Vinton was routed out. After John Burianek had carefully washed and combed his hair and John Ely had hidden the dirty collar the Vinton man recognized them. They caught the train to Cedar Rapids. Next time they start out it will be different.

DECISION ON BOND TAXATION

Millions of dollars worth of bonds issued by municipalities in territories of the United States, purchased by thrifty investors in the belief based upon eminent legal advice that they were on the basis of government bonds and untaxable by states, are now taxable, at least as to banks, trust companies and savings banks, according to a decision rendered by the supreme court of Minnesota.

The case was The State, respondent, vs. The Farmers and Mechanics Savings Bank of Minneapolis, appellant. The decision affirms that of Judge John Day Smith in the Hennepin district court when the state sued the bank to recover certain taxes which the bank refused to pay in 1908. It is estimated that $500,000 worth of the securities affected are held in Minneapolis.

In a syllabus the court holds that a tax upon the surplus on which savings banks are taxed is a tax upon the property and not upon the franchise to exist as a corporation, which is a contrary view to that taken by the state's lawyers in the case. It further rules that bonds issued by the municipalities of the territories of the United States are taxable and must be taken into account as part of the assets for the purpose of determining whether there is a surplus.

The second point in the test case in which the bank's counsel, Claud B. Leonard, contended that a tax on mortgages under the savings bank tax law of 1907 in addition to the registry mortgage tax was double taxation and also class legislation, in conflict with the federal constitution, in that private holders of mortgages were immune from the second tax on them, brought a decision in direct opposition to Mr. Leonard's opinion.

Following is the syllabus in the case:

"Section 839, R. L. 1905, provides for the taxation of savings banks by deducting the sum total of the deposits and accounts payable from the sum total of the assets including personal property appertaining to the business, and the surplus, if any, is listed and assessed as credits according to the provisions of section 835, R. L. 1905. Held, the tax upon the surplus is a property tax and not a tax upon the franchise to exist as a corporation.

"Municipal bonds issued by the municipalities of the territories of the United States are not exempt from taxation in the hands of savings banks, and all such bonds must be listed and taken into account as a part of the assets for the purpose of determining whether there is a surplus.

"Chapter 326, laws 1907, which requires savings banks to pay a registry mortgage tax upon mortgages owned by them, without exempting such mortgages from taxation otherwise, is not class legislation nor in conflict with section 1, article 14, of the federal constitution."

Third National of Bloomington is in voluntary liquidation.

Plea for Safety

Albany, N. Y., March 22.—Superintendent O. H. Cheney of the state banking department, in his annual report to the legislature on savings banks, trust companies, safe deposit companies and miscellaneous corporations, calls attention to the almost unbroken decrease annually during the last twenty years in the percentage of surplus on market value of investment to deposits in the savings banks of the state, such percentage to-day being less than one-half of what it was in 1890, and declares that the situation deserves careful consideration.

Superintendent Cheney quotes from his annual report of a year ago on the subject, when he said: "The safety of our savings banks is indeed undoubted, and there can be no successful challenge of the principle that every dollar of net earnings that can be so apportioned with prudence should be distributed to depositors, for whose sole benefit the savings banks have been established. But the qualifying words, 'with prudence,' deserve to be emphasized. Absolute safety of savings funds should always be the primal consideration. The surplus of a savings bank represents its margin of safety. Moreover, surplus adds to the earning power of the bank, and the statute itself guards that surplus with jealous care by permitting no part of it to be paid out in dividends until it reaches fifteen per cent of the amount due depositors. It cannot be overemphasized that the management of every savings bank whose deposits are increasing should carry proportionate sums to its surplus fund at every dividend period."

Continuing, the superintendent says: "The occurrences of the past year and existing conditions in the financial and economic world have not detracted from but have further emphasized the words of caution contained in that statement. While there may be no immediate danger, the situation is such that it deserves and is receiving the careful consideration of the most thoughtful and conservative men connected with the savings bank system of the state. Various remedies have been suggested. In fact it has been proposed to arbitrarily limit by statute the interest or dividend paid depositors with savings banks to fixed rates proportionate to surplus already accumulated. The purpose, of course, is to build up a sufficient surplus to protect depositors against loss, and this end might possibly be served by the enactment of a law requiring every savings bank of this state to set aside to surplus before the declaration of dividends to depositors a certain percentage of its net profits for the period until such time as its surplus based upon market values shall be equal to at least five per centum of its deposits, and a less percentage until its surplus based upon market values shall be equal to at least ten per centum of its deposits. The problem under existing conditions is so complicated by various considerations, and so many of the best minds of the state familiar with all its intricacies are engaged in its solution, that I shall refrain at the present time from making any express recommendation, but I do bespeak for this plan or some modification of it your very serious consideration."

Ex-Governor Charles N. Haskell, of Oklahoma, conducted his own case in the federal court at Vinita, last week in a suit brought by the Columbus Savings and Trust Company, of Columbus, O., to recover $14,000 on a note given in 1903 by Haskell and his wife. The trial was full of technicalities but was conducted very skillfully by the defendant who alleged fraud in the transaction. Haskell lost the suit.

During the last ten years, acreage of cultivated land increased 23 per cent; production increased 36 per cent; but consumption increased 60 per cent. In other words, population or consumption increased in ten years almost three times as fast as acreage and almost twice as fast as production.

We have been spoiled with an over rich soil, which at first, and for many years, gave us most profitable returns, even with careless, wasteful and unintelligent methods of cultivation, fertilization, seed selection, etc., until many of the New England sections will not repay the cost of seeding and harvest, and many of the western states and our own Illinois are on the wane.

Some one has said, "the best product of the prairies is not corn, but men, and the quarter-section that produces a thinking man, full fledged in all his powers, may well be held to have performed its mission."

But even these prairies have not produced a bumper crop of thinking men, else these men would have better treated and nurtured the soil from which they sprung or not given heed to the lure of the city.

Truly, the greatest thing we can produce is thinking men, with full fledged powers, and many of the greatest of these came and come from these quarter-sections, but these thinking men, you, we, must fertilize and farm the soil with our brains, or help in the great propaganda of saving the soil and its fertility, in spreading the gospel of, and enacting laws for, vocational education, in seeing that our country schools teach the children the beauties and necessities, the elements and science of agriculture, of seed selection and crop rotation and fertilization, to the end that as the yield of corn increases, so also will the yield of thinking men and women, full fledged in all their powers, for upon them depends, not alone our commercial and financial strength, as a nation, but, their preponderance in political power is the safeguard of the nation, as opposed to the sinister congestions in the centers of population.

Since 1873, Belgium has required every school in the kingdom, to maintain a field not less than thirty-nine and one-half square rods, for the purpose of instructing the pupils in this most important work, and here is where the work shall begin in all agricultural communities, with its culmination in the agricultural departments of the state university.

The states of Minnesota and Wisconsin are doing great work in this line of compulsory agricultural educational work, while with us, practically nothing is being accomplished in an educational way to interest children in the farm and farm life or any branch of agriculture.

Many of the rural school teachers come from the larger cities and are out of touch and sympathy with rural and agricultural conditions.

In the matter of better methods of agriculture our University of Illinois has made great advances but the rub comes in getting the farmers to put these methods into practice and to realize the vital necessity for so doing.

It is at this point that our several associations and organizations may be of great service in giving publicity to the necessities of the case, in urging the continuance of the great work and the necessary state appropriations therefor.

We must help our brothers on the farms, for their success is the beginning of ours.

The great railroads, the Northwestern, Pennsylvania, New York Central, spend from 25 to 150 millions each, in a single appropriation for a single terminal, or feature of their work.

These individual corporations are the outgrowth of our now halting agriculture, yet we, of this great state whose opportunities in agricultural and vocational education are even greater than our responsibilities, and both seem to be beyond our appreciation,—deal out with niggardly hand and slowly count the few thousands of dollars of taxes we appropriate to this great work, until such a policy has resulted in requirements for more money for our asylums and penitentiaries, than we use in education and the uplift.

Shows Need of Legislation

The Secretary of the Educational Commission, Robert E. Hieronymus of Springfield, presented the measures which that commission now has before the legislature. Instead of scattering committee, appointed by the educational commission to prepare courses of study in agriculture, manual training, and domestic science for the public schools, adopted as its fundamental recommendations the following:

I. That the high school completes the formal education of most of its students and that this fact rather than the preparation for college should dominate its policy.

II. That the high school curriculum should, therefore, distinctly recognize the vocational needs of the pupil, defining vocation broadly enough to cover all the useful activities, ranging from industry for the masses to literature, business, and art for the few.

III. That therefore the typical high school should introduce into its curriculum at the present time at least six vocational courses corresponding to the six broad avenues leading into the chief activities of civilized man, namely:

1. A course leading to the speaking and writing professions with language, literature and history as its main subjects.

2. A course leading to the scientific professions, especially medicine and surgery and devoting its chief attention to biology, physics, and chemistry, studies dealing with life and the conditions of life.

3. A course leading to the profession of farming with special reference to the domesticated animals and plants, and to the soil as the sustainer of life, supported by the physical sciences and by the principles of accounting.

4. A course preparing for useful and artistic construction in the building trades and in most lines of manufacture. Here, manual training, mathematics, physics and art should hold the leading place.

5. A course leading to the mercantile and banking business and the world of trade, with commercial geography, economics, industrial history, commercial arithmetic, commercial law, book-keeping, stenography and typewriting as its most prominent features.

6. A course dealing with the applications of science and of art to the affairs of the well-ordered home. Here, sewing, cooking, food values, marketing, serving, nursing, sanitation, textiles,

7. That one-fourth of the student's time in high school be devoted to this vocational work, their efforts the commission members are asking for three measures that are far reaching in their effects—a bill providing for a State Board of Education; a bill for a more comprehensive plan of certificating teachers; a bill asking for the restoration of the two mill tax for the state school fund.

The commission has also had prepared by a committee of specialists a course of study making provision for vocational subjects in the high and elementary schools. This special and three-fourths to non-vocational, upon the ground that the student, in order to make a useful member of society, should for a portion of his time each day after reaching the high school age, become possessed of a deep sense of vocational consciousness demanding special training looking to his own activities, but that at the same time in order to be most effective and rational, he should also devote the major portion of his time to what other men have thought and said and done, and to the facts of nature.

REVEALING BANKING METHODS IN OHIO

C. H. Gallup, president of the Ohio Savings, Loan and Investment Company, before it was merged with the Ohio Trust Company just before the latter company failed in 1907, was the principal witness of Elyria, Ohio, on Tuesday in the trial of ex-Congressman Jay F. Laning and James G. Gibbs of Norwalk, charged with misapplying funds of the Ohio Savings, Loan and Investment Company. Mr. Gallup testified Laning asked him to change the form of the Ohio Savings, Loan and Investment Company so that the officers could get the profits and pay the depositors interest instead of dividends. He said also that from his observation he thought the trust company was insolvent before the merger was effected.

NEW OKLAHOMA CITY TRUST CO.

E. B. Cockrell, president of the Continental Trust Company, now organizing at Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, spent several days in Chicago last week. Mr. Cockrell is a native of Kimmunity, Marion county, Illinois, where he was engaged in the mercantile business during his young manhood. Some fifteen years ago he went to Kansas and followed mercantile pursuits in that state, but the attractive opportunities offered in Oklahoma induced him to migrate there, and finding a good bank opening at Hennessey, in Kingfisher county, he engaged in the banking business some thirteen years ago, and still is president of the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Hennessey. Later, the opportunity to become cashier of the First National of El Reno was presented and he filled that position for six years. Last April Governor Haskell, finding that the banking department of Oklahoma needed the services of a strong, capable, experienced banker, induced Mr. Cockrell to take the position of bank examiner, and after straightening out the affairs of that important office he relinquished that position several months ago, becoming connected with the Central Reserve National of Oklahoma City, as vice-president. The business of this last named institution was recently sold to the Oklahoma City National. Mr. Cockrell has strong faith in the future commercial importance of Oklahoma City.

reputation for maintaining a very large cash reserve. At the time of the call it was more than 33 per cent. Seattle has twenty-seven banks, three of them each having a million capital or over.

SEATTLE is one of the wonder cities of the world. Ten years ago it had eighty thousand population. The census for 1910 gives it a population of nearly 200 per cent in 1910. The deposits of the Seattle banks in 1900 were just over twenty millions. They now reach seventy-five millions, showing a growth of nearly 270 per cent. The growth of the Seattle National alone shows a much more startling situation. In 1901 the Seattle National had one and a half millions in deposits and in 1911 it had nearly fifteen millions, showing a growth per cent of 842. Any other city or any other individual bank which can show similar or greater growth is invited to the use of these columns.

BANK OF SENECA, Seneca, Missouri, has deposits of $175,195.83. This is based on a capital and surplus of $100,000 and shows the Bank of Seneca to be in splendid condition.

FIRST NATIONAL OF PEORIA reports also for the Savings Bank of Peoria with combined deposits of just a little short of six millions. The First National has been in business forty-seven years and enjoys a splendid reputation. The officers are Charles R. Wheeler, president, William E. Stone, vice-president and cashier.

"THE SUGAR BEET AND SUGAR" is the title of a new booklet sent out by the American Sugar Industry and Beet Sugar Gazette. The Gazette is the recognized organ of the sugar trade in America and circulates also in foreign countries. Its editor and publisher is a recognized expert in the sugar industry.

W. A. OWEN, vice-president of the Farmers Union Bank of Covington, Tennessee, visited Chicago recently on legal matters pending in the probate court of Cook county. Mr. Owen is one of the leading lawyers of his city, and stated that banking conditions in his part of Tennessee are in satisfactory condition and that business prospects for the future are very promising.

STOCK YARDS NATIONAL, South Omaha, shows close to six and one half millions in deposits. H. C. Boswick is president and J. C. French, cashier.

HERE is another warm, little, semi-confidential paragraph from one of Col. Dinwiddie's communications to his Cedar Rapids clients. It reads A1, and has been very effective. The Colonel says:

IF there is anything about our business that we can tell the customer we want to tell it; we want him to know all about the bank, but we cannot tell him anything about any other customer's business with the bank; that is sacredly confidential. If we can help anyone by consultation or correspondence, in business transactions, investments, or otherwise, we will be only too glad to extend that help. If you can help us, in this or any other way may we call on you?

MELLON NATIONAL (PGH.), has bankers' balances to the amount of $19,955,011.74 as against $17,854,253.95 in individual deposits.

THIS also tells a tale. Citizens Bank, Grant City, Mo. has for its correspondents Flannover National, N. Y. Corn Exchange, Chicago, Merchants Bank, St. Joseph, and the Stock Yards Bank, South St. Joseph. From this list you might guess a little as to its location in a stock raising community.

FIRST NATIONAL, Grand Rapids, Wis., in 1905 had $358,000 in deposits. Now has $1,021,000 and growing pains, almost. "No account too small for careful attention."

HARRY YEAGER of Montana has another job. At least the dispatches have it that he now is a national bank examiner and probably will have to give up the secretaryship of the Montana Bankers Association and the place on the A. B. A. executive council. This may be a good thing for Mr. Yeager but both associations will lose by it.

HE was quite active in getting the new Montana banking bill (see editorial page) passed putting an end to open shop banking in his state. This will increase public confidence and all forms of banking will be under supervision and inspection. What's the matter with Illinois?

FIRST NATIONAL of Clarksville, Tenn., has purchased the fixtures and vault of the old Merchants National of Cincinnati, which recently was consolidated with the First National of that city. When the alterations and additions are completed, the Clarksville bank will have a splendid banking house where it can care for the needs of a growing business.

NO handsomer printing comes our way than that sent out by the Central National, Cleveland. Col. J. J. Sullivan is the president and L. J. Cameron, cashier.

NOW what do you think of the Continental National of Indianapolis? Had $400,000 in the fall of 1909 and on March 8th reports $2,317,000 in deposits. Perhaps something in the name?

UP in Milwaukee they have a Germania National. Who will dispute the right to the title when he reads the names on the official list? Brumder, Schultz, Engelke, Berger, Bunde, Mayer, Kieckhefer, Willmans, Fehr, and Reddeman. No use to put up a line "German also is spoken in the bank." Deposits are close to five millions.

"PERSONAL" — "not for publication," both lines underscored guards the secret of why an esteemed banking friend from up Wisconsin way was "put out" of the Palm Beach tournament. There are more ways than one, of course, of getting out—well out of a bunker.

G. F. O., over a Minneapolis date line sends us this tip: "If you desire any information as to what a 'Jamaica Swizzle' is, or if you are looking for anyone to tell the difference between an English penny and a half sovereign, I would suggest your writing to Joe Chapman. You know that Joe just got back from Kingston?"

YES, and the funny thing is that the Chicago Association of Commerce invited Mr. Chapman to talk on farming, last Wednesday. The tip came too late. Chapman has been for some time helping on the back-to-the-soil movement up in the Northwest. How to keep the boys on the farm and away from the overcrowded city shops is a live question in Minnesota and Harris, Edens and others have it up in the Illinois Bankers Association.

"THE defect in our currency system; the functions of a central bank; the methods of several foreign central banking institutions; the first and second bank of the United States and Jackson's hostility; the fourteen best known plans for a central bank in this country; the argument for and against such an institution; currency redemption; banking opinions on the question; and the press on a central bank are among the leading subjects discussed in this book."

THESE are the glittering chapter heads in a new book offered for sale by your old comrade, Anthony Stumpf of New York, but we do not see why a few chapters on the "Robin Affair" might not be added to give the thing an up-to-date effect? We should like to know why Robin (ovitch) bi-sected his name and a few other things? CASHIER.

COL. FARNSWORTH INTERVIEWED AT NEW ORLEANS

Col. Frederick E. Farnsworth has been on a visit to the cities which are inviting the American Bankers Association to meet with them this year. Hotel, headquarters and assembly room conditions come within the scope of his inquiry. Things at New Orleans, which has re-entered the field against San Antonio, seemed to please him. While there he gave out an interview on the currency situation in which he said that the Aldrich banking law would create the Reserve Association of America, to all practical purposes a central bank, Mr. Farnsworth said that he was in favor of the measure.

"Our present national banking law is almost fifty years old," he said, "and is not adequate for our present needs. It is one law that has not been revised to meet the changed conditions that have accompanied the country's development. The situation, as it now exists, is that of plenty of money when there is little need for it, and a lack of money when there is real need of it. The proposed legislation would provide an emergency currency that would meet conditions of financial stress."

"When the strain had passed, the emergency currency would be redeemed. By the issue of emergency currency the elasticity of the currency, necessary to avoid panics, would be obtained, and at the same time, through the redemption of the same emergency currency, after the occasion for its need had passed, would be a safeguard against depreciation in money through an over supply. The reserve association would be a bank of issue and discount only, its power to regulate discount applying only to dealings between the banks and the government and not to the general banking business of the individual bank."

There are 12,000 banks in the American Bankers Association, comparison assets of more than $14,000,000,000.

Mr. Farnsworth is a believer in the future development of New Orleans. He said that it was only reasonable to believe that the opening of the Panama Canal, together with the advantages from its location, would make the city one of the most important in the country but he was too diplomatic to intimate where he thought the next A. B. A. convention would be held.

GOOD SHOWING OF FRANKLIN PARK STATE

March 7th was the maiden effort in the way of a statement for the Franklin Park State Bank, which only opened for business January 9th of this year. Deposits are nearly forty thousand dollars, based on a capital of $25,000. Wm. H. Kirchoff is the cashier and active man. He is well known in state banking circles and is rated as very promising.

Banking Opinion

"My idea is that there will be an increase in industrial activity in the United States during this year," said President Charles G. Dawes, of Central Trust Company, to a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER Wednesday. Mr. Dawes has been in the East since the present trade depression began and while there took occasion to ascertain the views of several financial leaders. He said there was no alarm over business conditions and added:

"There are large accumulations of money ready to be loaned out to legitimate business, and, in my judgment, there has been no material lessening of confidence on the part of the people in the soundness of underlying conditions. Available capital and confidence are the chief ingredients always of business activity. I am speaking of course of the general business of the country, which is now somewhat slow."

The trouble with business men, as Mr. Dawes views the situation, is that they think it best to slacken up until they know definitely what the supreme court is going to decide in important trust cases and what congress is to do in regard to currency, reciprocity and the tariff generally. When these questions are disposed of or more light is thrown upon them, the trade of the country is likely to start up again.

Financial leaders say that the times cannot be very bad, although considerable labor is temporarily idle. It may be a dull summer but the consensus of opinion is that business matters will be readjusted by fall.

ANOTHER CHICAGO BANK MERGER

The merging of the Railway Exchange Bank with the Peoples Trust and Savings Bank, a financial move that has been expected ever since the organization of the last named institution, was announced by the officers of both banks after the close of business Tuesday.

The name of the Peoples Trust and Savings Bank will remain the same and the business will be continued in the Peoples Gas Light Building, Michigan Avenue and Adams Street. All checking and savings accounts of the Railway Exchange Bank were taken over by the Peoples Trust, and until books and check pads may be conveniently exchanged the depositors will continue to draw checks on the same printed blanks.

The Peoples Trust and Savings Bank was opened December 1st of last year with a capital of $500,000 and a surplus of $100,000. It was organized and backed by a group of capitalists commonly known as "the gas people." Its growth was rapid and its last showing of deposits, when examined by the state auditor, was $4,000,000.

Cashier A. M. Rode, R. B. Upham and H. T. Griswold, assistant cashiers of the Railway Exchange will transfer their services to the Peoples Trust. President George Merryweather of the Railway Exchange Bank retires.

The Railway Exchange Bank originally was organized as the Jackson Trust and Savings Bank. Its name was changed when it moved into the Railway Exchange Building, however, in order to conform with its location. Joy

Morton sought to secure the controlling interest by purchasing all of the outstanding stock, which he did. Shortly after the change of name it became necessary to reorganize the bank, a reorganization that put it on a firm financial basis.

The consolidation, according to the statements of the officers of the banks, has been worked out in a manner entirely satisfactory to all parties concerned in the merger. The Peoples Trust and Savings Bank now will have a deposit of more than $5,000,000.

J. ADAM BEDE IN TOWN

Former Congressman J. Adam Bede of Duluth visited Senator Lorimer at LaSalle Street National, Chicago, last week. Mr. Bede has grown to be one of the most popular platform entertainers in America and is offered more lecture engagements than he can fill. He is one of Senator Lorimer's staunchest friends.

Money Stagnant

Money has remained easy owing to trade depression, and rates are fractionally lower than a week ago. Counter loans are $4\frac{1}{2}$ to 5 per cent, and large borrowers can get funds at $3\frac{3}{4}$ to 4 per cent. There is a little doing in commercial paper. The rate is around 4 per cent.

The foreign exchange market has weakened considerably during the week as a result of a free supply of cheap capital. Quotations are: bankers demand sterling, 485.95; bankers 60 days sterling, 484 $\frac{1}{4}$; bankers demand francs, 520; bankers 60 days francs, 521 $\frac{7}{8}$; bankers demand marks, 95 1-6; bankers 60 days marks, 94 9-16.

Group Four

The present officers, former chairman and members of the executive committee, and chairmen of all standing committees of Group Four, Illinois Bankers Association, have been invited to attend an informal dinner at 5:30 o'clock Tuesday evening, April 4th, to be given at the New Hotel Sherman. As Tuesday is a legal holiday, it is expected that each individual officer and committeeman will be present. It is the purpose to decide on a time and place for the fifth annual meeting of Group Four, and also to arrange a program for the meeting.

Those expected to be present will include: Ex-chairman of Group Four, H. E. Otte, vice-president National City Bank, Chicago; George Woodruff, president First National Bank, Joliet; William H. Doe, cashier Home National Bank, Elgin; Chairman W. G. Edens, assistant secretary Central Trust Company of Illinois, Chicago; Secretary J. M. Hurst, assistant cashier State Bank of the Republic; Treasurer C. S. Backus, cashier State Bank of Hampshire.

Members executive committee: Kendall county, W. D. Stewart, president First State Bank, Plano; DuPage county, G. A. Dayton, cashier State Trust and Savings Bank, West Chicago; Lake county, D. H. Jackson president First National Bank, Lake Forest; Will county, Frank Leiss, cashier Mokena State Bank, Mokena; McHenry county, C. B. Whittemore, First National and Savings Bank, Marengo.

Chairman committee on arbitration, James B. Perry, president Bank McHenry, McHenry.

Chairman committee on reception and program, W. W. Gates, assistant cashier Central Trust Company of Illinois, Chicago.

Chairman committee on press and publication, E. F. Adams, assistant cashier Glen Ellyn State Bank, Glen Ellyn.

Chairman committee on uniform action, Chas. B. Wright, Citizens State Bank, Crystal Lake.

Chairman committee on protection against fraud, H. J. Cooper, cashier Old Second National Bank, Aurora.

R. L. Crampton, secretary of the Bankers Association of Illinois has also been invited to be present; also Chas. N. Stevens, cashier City National Bank of Evanston, who was formerly treasurer of Group Four, and F. J. Scheideheim, cashier State Bank of Evanston, have been invited to attend, with a view to developing if possible a suggestion made last summer after the fourth annual meeting at Brookline Farm, Aurora, that the next convention should be held on the north shore—that the Evanston bankers should ask the other north shore banks to join them as hosts. There is a possibility that the meeting will be held at Ravinia Park.

Secretary Hurst has arranged with the manager of the New Hotel Sherman to furnish this dinner party with election returns. After dinner the party will go in a body to the Olympic Theatre to witness the one hundred and fifty-ninth performance of Geo. M. Cohan's dramatization of Get-Rich-Quick-Wallington.

There are about three hundred members in Group Four, which includes the banks in the counties of Cook, Lake, McHenry, Kendall, Kane, Will and DuPage.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

THEY have a mortgage guaranty company in St. Louis and why not in Chicago? Of course the guess-again brokers will object but the purchaser will like it.

"HIM that has gets." Geo. M. Reynolds has been elected treasurer to the South Park board. He succeeds John J. Mitchell who will have to struggle along without it.

READ the news from Wichita, and when the chief of police of your town, or any other fence, offers you postage stamps at 50 cents on the dollar, call up the post office inspector or the U. S. marshal. They are cheap at par to a good banker.

A LOT of that postal deposit dope turns out to be true. The banks where foreigners are in the majority, lead both in the number of depositors and in the size of the average balances.

W. W. GATES, assistant cashier, Central Trust Company who looks after the preparation of advertising matter for this important, growing institution, is out with a statement for his bank in new colors in which the modish reds and browns predominate. It is an artistic production and will be of substantial assistance to the customer, or to one contemplating a banking connection. Every department in the bank is treated in a brief, comprehensive manner.

FRANK O. HICKS is the new vice-president of the Mechanics-American, St. Louis, taking the position vacated by L. A. Battaile. Look up his portrait in this issue and see if he doesn't look like the goods.

GEORGE L. RAMSEY of Helena, Mont., sends us the following: "Thinking that it might be of interest, we have obtained a certified copy of the law that passed the legislature providing for the public examination of private banks and the requirement that reports should be published, and enclose a copy herewith. We have a few extra ones on hand which we shall be glad to supply if you care for an additional number."

M. R. RAMSEY might delight a few of his chums in Illinois with a copy each, say to Durham, Hamilton, Phillips, Crabtree and also to Woodruff, Harris, Aisthorpe and any that are left to the committee on banking at Springfield. This state is in need of a spring tonic of this kind if ever a state was.

THERE is Milo F. Lewis for instance who operated as a private bank recently in Chicago. He called it the Cosmopolitan and issued certificates of deposit in his sleep. He ought to have a copy to prevent his coming to Montana with one of his phony banks. At present he is selling shares in the Sir Francis Drake estate to pay 2,000 to one. This is as good almost as his kind of a bank except that operating expenses are greater.

YES, and Butler ought to have a copy. His chain of private banks down about Peoria are down and out and he might be headed for Montana. Then there is Kalovitch and a lot of others. Illinois could use up a lot of those extra copies.

W. M. MALONE, editor of the Bank Deposit Guaranty Journal of Oklahoma tells us that, "The failure of the Columbia Bank & Trust Co., of Oklahoma City, and the mis-management of the Oklahoma Trust Co. of Muskogee seem to have been at the root of all the trouble of the bank deposit guaranty law of the state. No more Nortons and Joneses will be allowed to do a banking business in Oklahoma. A closer supervision of banks and a closer scrutiny of bankers will reduce to the minimum assessments against state banks."

HE says also that "state bankers don't enjoy paying the emergency assessment of one per cent but there is a silver lining to the cloud. This assessment will clean up all the claims against the guaranty fund and leave about a quarter of a million dollars in the fund, in addition to securities from defunct banks that will net the guaranty fund about $100,000. So the future conditions are not as bad as they seem on the face of the 'returns.'"

BANKERS of the country as a rule do not believe in bank guaranty but none of them wants to see any thing disastrous happen in Oklahoma. Perhaps it will drag along as such things do and die out as most innovations do.

J. D. LANGFORD is the new Oklahoma superintendent of banking. He is a Mississippian by birth and an experienced banker. He was president of a state bank at Atoka when appointed. He is said to be a staunch believer in guaranty and perhaps he may be its savior.

THE banking board under the old Oklahoma law was composed of state officials who acted ex officio. Now the governor appoints. Just as Taft took three cabinet ministers—MacVeagh, Dickinson and Fisher—all from one ward in Chicago, Governor Cruce took both his new banking board members from Oklahoma City.

THEY are J. C. McClelland and F. G. Dennis. Mr. McClelland for years was connected with the First National Bank of Pond Creek, Oklahoma. He organized the Oklahoma State Bank at Oklahoma City a few years ago and later with Mr. Wikoff organized the Tradesmen State Bank of Oklahoma City.

M. R. DENNIS has been clearing house examiner and before that was a banker. The bankers of the state seem to like the appointment.

DOUBTFUL practice. When a man gets appointed a bank examiner his son should not go out in the same district selling bank supplies. That's almost as thin as Booker T's explanation.

SHAVEN and Dunfer have opened a private down the state and it depends upon which firm member gets to the customer first as to what happens to him.

WE hear that a K. C. banker delivered the same address at all of the eight Oklahoma group meetings, but changed the subject each time to show versatility. It worked fine but was rather hard on the bank boys from the reserve centers who had to hear it. He also put the guaranty official organ up against a difficult question.

GROUP FOUR at Claremore, a celebrated Oklahoma resort gave each attendant a ticket for a bath. A speaker explained that when you lend a farmer $100 for sixty or ninety days you should not say anything about the rate. "Simply tell him that he will owe the bank $110 or $115 whichever it is and take the note for that amount." And that's only from 40 to 90 per cent.

AS an illustration of how it works, the speaker said: "About six years ago I went to a little town now called Gore. There were two or three little credit stores in the town of about 50 inhabitants. I built four brick buildings and put in a bank there and commenced loaning money to the farmers. They all grasped the opportunity of borrowing money instead of buying goods on a credit, and commenced to raise potatoes, and the cash enabled them to buy seed in order to plant potatoes, which they were not able to secure from the credit stores. Last year that little town shipped about 700 cars of potatoes. That alone shows what this little bank has done for the community and the country." (Hearty applause.)

G. M. REYNOLDS has sent out word to say that the Continental and Commercial Trust Company will be conducted upon the same careful and attentive lines which have distinguished the Continental and Commercial National. The Trust and Savings Bank has been removed to its new location in the Continental and Commercial building and is under the direct executive charge of John J. Abbott.

M. R. ABBOTT has been detained away from business for a few days owing to a brief attack of muscular rheumatism. He has the various departments of this allied institution so well organized that one might easily think it had been in business for years. The men in charge of the various departments are young but fully experienced. There will be a close co-operation between the national and the trust and savings banks in all future operation.

BANKING in Chicago is such an open book to the whole country and the local difficulties are so promptly adjusted that all bankers will be glad to know that the Booth Fisheries Company has been fully reorganized and the Chicago banks relieved of all burden in the matter. A voting trusteeship is a part of the arrangement and some of Chicago's best known financial operators will be represented in person. The new securities are being offered to the public by S. B. Chapin and Company at a quite attractive rate.

CHICAGO, APRIL 1, 1911

NUMBER 13

Savings Bank Conditions

Lucius Teter, president of the Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Company, in a lecture on Tuesday Evening before the New York Chapter of the A. I. B. treats of a vital and interesting subject

It is probable that no subject in connection with American banking affairs presents more interesting features to the student than the savings banks problem. The importance of this subject cannot be overestimated. As banking becomes more and more a profession and men give time to the scientific study of financial affairs, many questions rush forward demanding solution. However, of all these, and there are several of moment, very nearly the first place of importance is occupied by the consideration of those facilities which now and which shall in the future handle the reserve sums of money owned by the savings people of the United States.

This question not only involves how the money shall be received and cared for, but involves the equally important question of how it shall be distributed by the banks for use throughout the different sections of the country and vitalized into activity and productivity.

The reports of the national monetary commission furnish a splendid field for studying the present condition of the banks in the United States, and, while giving credit to these reports for most of my statistics, I wish to commend the publications of the monetary commission to those of you who care to make exhaustive studies concerning our various banking problems. Something of an idea of the size of this problem may be obtained by considering the increase in savings deposits during the last twenty years.

Take Chicago's experience—In 1892 Chicago had $19,515,370.00 of savings deposits and in 1911, $193,000,000.00, during which period the population increased about 100 per cent. May I add that at last reports both population and savings deposits were growing rapidly, but the deposits were growing faster.

In many parts of the country equally important showings are made. In many of the newest sections the percentage of savings increase would be greater, and in some of the older sections not quite so great.

Shall we then briefly consider the general problem of the American Savings Bank? At the outset I think it would be well for us to come to a common understanding of the term "savings bank." In what I shall say, we will take "savings bank" to mean any incorporated banking institution accepting savings deposits and turning these funds into community use. Savings banks in the United States at the present time may be divided into three general classes; first, mutual banks without capital; second, capitalized savings banks, state banks and trust companies, these two groups are conducted under more or less adequate state banking laws; and third, national banks, organized and operated under the federal statutes. The total number of such institutions in 1909 was 10,989. The diversity of legislation and systems, the difference in points of view, both of bankers and public, and comparatively recent development of handling savings deposits by national banks presents a somewhat complex situation, which we will analyze briefly.

I take it that these institutions all exist as savings institutions for one of two reasons; either they are pre-eminently the proper institutions for the handling of the business, or they are the only institutions available at specific points for the handling of savings deposits. In either case the analysis of the situation is attractive.

Mutual Savings Banks

Generally speaking, the oldest and certainly the most respected class of savings institutions in the United States are the mutual savings banks. These non-capitalized banks exist to the number of 627 and are distributed in seventeen states, as follows: Maine, 51; New Hampshire, 43; Vermont, 21; Massachusetts, 187; Rhode Island, 18; Connecticut, 85; New York, 137; New Jersey, 26; Pennsylvania, 11; Delaware, 2; Maryland, 23; West Virginia, 1; Ohio, 3; Indiana, 5; Wisconsin, 3; Minnesota, 10; California, 1, and total 627.

In April, 1909, the total deposits in these banks were $3,138,763,000, or about 55 per cent of the entire savings deposits of the country. It would be a waste of time to enter into lengthy discussion of this class of banks before this audience, as most of you have been surrounded by these institutions since your childhood. From many points of view the ideal character of these banks is admitted, but upon even a most casual analysis of our subject, we find that one serious indictment must lie at the door of the mutual system, and that is, it has not extended to meet the needs of the people. They were first started here in the East and grew in number, furnishing a splendid service in many communities. Regardless of the fact, however, that several middle western states, very early in their careers passed admirable mutual savings bank laws, this class of banks has not gained very much of a foothold outside of New England and New York. For illustration, Indiana has had a savings bank law, quite similar to the New York law, in force for a generation; however, there are but five mutual savings banks in that state. Other states furnish similar examples.

One would find much of interest in investigating the reasons why the mutual savings bank system should have gained so great a hold in the earlier days in the older parts of the country and so little in the newer. Do you think that by the time the territory west of the Alleghenies was settled men had begun to regard the capital invested as well as the character of the management an important element in determining the measure of security of a banking institution? Or was it that in these newer communities men who were strangers were brought together quickly and did not have that community spirit,—that New England "town meeting" attitude,—which would lead them to form and trust eleemosynary financial institutions. We would not for a moment concede that these men of the West were lacking, or are to-day lacking, in broad charity and philanthropic work. Indeed, I believe you will admit that the western cities are quite up to date in realizing responsibilities of this sort. Therefore, I rather hold to the former view, and am somewhat supported in this by the fact that here in the East, the home of the mutuals, these institutions are not now being organized in sufficient numbers to care for the savings needs of the people. The situation in New York state would seem to confirm this point of view, for, while this state has led in everything that has to do with prosperity, rapid increase in population, building up of great factory towns and cities, the increase in the number of the mutual savings banks has been very small in the last generation. For example, the bankers' directory shows only five mutual savings banks that have been started in New York City in the last twenty years, and I believe that one of these has retired at a comparatively recent date. Compare for a moment this situation with what you know of the development of New York City along almost every other line in the same twenty years. And do you know that in your state, with 137 mutual savings banks, there are at least 414 other banking institutions handling savings deposits?

So it would seem that the lack of mutual savings bank organizations is not an indictment that lies against the West alone, but rather one that lies against the period of time since 1870, and, as the western country has had most of its development since that date, the lack of mutual savings banks is greater in the West than in the East.

State banks, other than mutual savings banks and trust companies, to the number of

LUCIUS TETER
President Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Company

6,300 are handling savings deposits. The very large number of these institutions handling savings deposits indicate the great need for the service which they render. The lack of uniformity in the laws under which they are operated, and, what is perhaps more important, the varying degrees of regulation under which their management is conducted is undoubtedly the most satisfactory feature connected with their operation. Indeed, there still remain one or two states that provide no regulation of banking corporations other than provided by the general corporation acts. On the other hand, most states, at least thirty of them, have passed improved banking legislation in the last ten years—many of these laws are almost ideal in character. A large percentage of the class of banks under discussion handle other kinds of business as well as savings deposits. That this is a highly desirable thing in most communities cannot be doubted, because the greater economy of administering a single institution caring for all of the financial needs of a community makes it possible when that institution can include the handling of savings deposits, for the community to have the benefit of savings bank service years in advance of the possible arrival of an exclusive savings bank. That these institutions should be administered under adequate laws, including proper inspection and regulation of investments, cannot be questioned, and this we will refer to again. But let no man feel, because his ideal of an exclusive savings bank cannot be realized, that these thousands of small communities in the United States should be deprived of savings bank facilities.

National Banks

A national bank accepting savings deposits! I presume that is the greatest heresy of all! So far as the banking functions of the national bank are concerned, I think that no one realized for a great many years that they would ever be used as other than commercial banks. But here again our problem has met a law greater than any law on our statute books, and that is the law of supply and demand—the law of necessity.

On January 7, 1911, national banks in the United States to the number of 2,872 were conducting savings departments. Their total savings deposits were $589,183,982.65, and to give you something of an idea of how this part of our subject is developing, I would say that in the spring of 1909 there were 2,011 national banks conducting savings departments with a total of $331,562,680, an increase in the number of national banks accepting savings of 861 and an increase in savings deposits of over $258,000,000 in less than two years. And yet these institutions are operated under a statute that does not even mention savings deposits, and obviously there is no provision for the investment of these funds. However, we all have great confidence in the national bank act, and it is undoubtedly true that the regulations under which these institutions are conducted are far superior to those governing many of the state banks.

Now, I have given you a hurried review of the classes of the banks to the number of over ten thousand which are to-day handling the savings deposits of 15,000,000 depositors, whose deposits amount to over $5,600,000,000, and if I do not mistake the measure of the savings bankers' responsibility for the future, I believe that the savings deposits in the United States will increase in volume with greater rapidity in years to come than they have at any period in the past.

A large percentage of the people in the United States have lived in the last generation in new communities, where surplus earnings have been largely employed in paying for land, building houses and improvements, and even a most casual study of our condition today indicates that the surplus earnings available for deposit in bank and for making other forms of investments will be greater each year. If this be true, those of us who feel in some degree a duty to our profession must needs take a broad view of this subject with the thought in mind of co-operating in all of those things which will go toward making our savings institutions, of whatever form, safe, convenient and suitable for the needs of the people.

I take it that most of us are willing to admit that after all it does not make so much difference what form the organization takes if these points are attained, the proposition is not one of theory, but of practice; in which we are to take the conditions as we find them and help to make them better.

It has been suggested that I say something about methods for improving conditions. One of the most important influences for the improvement of banking conditions is the training of bank men. Not so very long ago bank employees and officers alike came from the ranks of other businesses; the emphasis is now on the trained man and the trained man is making himself felt not only in the institution where he is engaged, but in the whole banking field. With the trained man comes a broader view, a lessened tendency toward ugly competition; therefore, a spirit of co-operation among bankers is becoming more general each year.

So with this broader view and willingness to co-operate, the bankers are coming together in group and state organizations, there to work out many of their problems. They are finding that what is to the good of all is also good for the individual, and that the motto to keep before them always is "good banking." So these groups of men have suggested improvement in the banking laws of many states and in the federal statutes, with good results for the banks and public.

In California and Michigan a part of our problem has been solved by requiring savings deposits in savings banks to be segregated. In Massachusetts savings are segregated in trust companies. It seems that the legislators in Massachusetts have realized that the mutual banks were not growing rapidly enough in numbers and have specifically authorized the trust companies to take savings deposits, providing the funds are segregated and invested in those securities that are provided for in the mutual savings bank act as suitable for the investment of savings bank deposits.

I am inclined to think the question of the segregation of savings deposits in all banks and their investment separately is one which will be given much attention in the near future. The federal government must sooner or later take cognizance of the rapidly increasing volume of savings deposits in national banks and provide specifically for their safeguarding and separate investment.

As you know, national banks cannot now loan on real estate security. One suggestion is to specifically permit national banks to take savings deposits, segregate them and permit a given percentage to be invested in first mortgage securities.

These and many other matters will come to your attention as time goes on; the point for you and me to keep in mind is to be prepared to help solve the questions as they come along.

Having given you a rough outline of the savings bank conditions in the United States to-day and suggested some measure of our responsibility for the future, I commend you to a careful study of our country, its people and conditions. These banking problems are not to be worked out according to any one local standard. For instance, in fixing collaterals for savings loans, we may have to admit that railway bonds are best for New York; cotton for Arkansas; cattle for Texas; wheat for Illinois; but we do want to know what is best and see to it that the people have what is best for them.

I congratulate you of the institute in the opportunity afforded you for technical training and at the same time broadening your practical experience. Study not only your institute work, but follow the work of the American Bankers Association, and as nearly as practical the work of the state associations. Then later on when you take your place as you should in the activities of association work your equipment will be of value and a satisfaction to you and to your fellow bankers.

BACK TAXES ON STOCKS

Acting on the recent ruling of the state supreme court that Illinois corporations and owners of stock in corporations of other states were liable for all taxes on stock values not paid during the past ten years, the attorney for Cook county has instructed the board of assessors and review to comply rigidly with the ruling and proceed to collect approximately $200,000,000 back taxes now due.

The fact, however, that such a tax would amount in some cases to confiscation is expected to result in a compromise on a basis of 10 per cent as in the case of the International Harvester Company recently settled. This means that within the next two years $20,000,000 in back taxes will be collected.

Aside from the liability of Illinois corporations for back taxes on their capital stock, every resident of Illinois is held liable for ten years of taxes on every share of stock held in any concern incorporated in another state. In both cases the annual tax rate is approximately 42 mills on one-third of the actual market value of the stock.

By C. C. Burford

Illinois is chagrined to have had a day-light bank hold-up in good old Wild West style committed within her borders. No more revolting crime against the banking business can be imagined than to have two or three fully armed men enter a country bank and terrify the officers with a rude command of "hands up."

The village of Blue Mound, on the main line of the Wabash, in Macon county, a few miles southwest of Decatur, is a peaceful and prosperous community. Friday noon, March 24th, two men entered the First National of Blue Mound, and forced the cashier's son to deliver over the cash and then locked him in the vault. The sum of $2,000 was lost by the bank and the hold-up men escaped in an automobile.

The Illinois Bankers Association has offered a reward of $2,000 for the arrest of the Swan Creek bank burglars who broke jail at Monmouth, March 20th. Part of this sum is offered by the association directly, while the state of Illinois, the banks of Monmouth on behalf of Warren county, and the Swan Creek Bank, are partial donators to this fund. A reward of $1,200 is offered for the arrest of the four men who escaped from the sheriff's posse after attacking the Citizens Bank of Walnut in Bureau county. Secretary Crampton is working hard on these various cases. Mr. Crampton calls attention to a bold forger, Robert E. Ward by name, and also to a confidence man named W. H. Sage, alias W. H. Howe. Both are active in Illinois.

Will of Banker is Filed

The will of the late Dwight L. Parker, who was the president of the First National of Gilman, has been filed for probate at Watseka. He owned 600 acres of good farming land besides other real estate, twenty shares of stock in the First National of Gilman, and twenty-nine shares of Illinois Central stock.

The campaign which is in progress in Quincy for the raising of $100,000 for the erection of a new Y. M. C. A. building has been indorsed by a number of bank officers. Up to date more than $25,000 has been subscribed.

Yeggmen Overlook Big Swag

The robbers who paid a visit to the Citizens Bank of Walnut, Bureau county, overlooked an ordinary tin box in the vault which contained $5,500 in currency. The box had been left in the bank vault by Mrs. Henry Chapman who had explained to the officers of the Citizens Bank that only papers were contained therein. After the robbery the owner took the box over to the other bank, the Walnut Bank, but Cashier Ross demanded to know the real value of the contents. Mrs. Chapman at length explained what the box really contained. Viewed from the standpoint of the yeggmen the overlook was a serious one but a most fortunate one for the woman depositor.

Illinois Notes

E. W. Butler, the "boy banker" and the youthful speculator of Ellisville, and his cashier, C. S. Marvin, have received their second indictment from the grand jury of Peoria county charging them with embezzlement. The grand jury of Fulton county has also returned bills against the pair as one of their chains of banks was in that county.

The First National of Kankakee is one of the good advertising banks of Illinois. Many banks do not care for large display advertising in the papers of their home town but the First National of Kankakee not only takes a generous amount of space in the dailies but they write what an ad. man would call a "nifty" advertisement. Frequent changes are made in the ad. rather than continuing a conservative standing ad. such as many banks use and present-day happenings are seized upon as good material for suggestive ideas.

WESTERN ELECTRIC'S PROFITS

Net earnings of the Western Electric company for thirteen months ended December 31, 1910, set a new high record of $5,419,169, comparing with $2,404,010 for twelve months ended November 30, 1909, and, after deducting fixed charges, the balance for dividends was $4,534,276, or 30.23 per cent in $15,000,000 capital stock outstanding, comparing with $2,090,264, or 13.93 per cent.

While this net exhibit is by far the best one ever reported by the company, it is amplified by the fact that while sales of $68,375,150 in the thirteen months' period were more than one-third larger than those reported in the preceding twelve months, they were considerably less than in the twelve months ended November 30, 1906, when gross income reached $69,245,331.

The immense growth of profits on comparatively smaller sales indicates that many advantages have been derived under the more complete control of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, which own four-fifths of the capital stock of the huge manufacturing concern.

FORBES VISITS OLD FRIENDS

President R. T. Forbes of First National, St. Joseph, Mo., was visiting old friends here the fore part of the week.

NO PARDON FOR WALSH

According to information obtained from a White House caller, who discussed the applications of John R. Walsh and Charles W. Morse for pardons, the president will deny both.

The papers in the two cases, making a pile more than a foot in height, have been in the hands of the president since shortly before he started for Atlanta. It is stated that the recommendations made by the attorney-general in both cases are adverse. The president is giving close attention to every paper in the two cases, not being content to consider alone the conclusions the attorney-general reached after examining them.

In the Walsh case most careful attention was given by the department of justice to the claim that imprisonment is undermining the health of Walsh and that he cannot much longer stand confinement.

Not only did the prison physicians make an exhaustive report on this phase of the question, but experts, physicians of wide reputation, were sent to the Leavenworth penitentiary to examine Walsh's physical condition. It is said that the reports of the physicians agree that Walsh is not in such condition that his life depends upon his liberation at this time, and that the medical men are not apprehensive of serious results following his further retention.

In the Morse case the petitions from friends and sympathizers urging a pardon are almost as numerous as in the Walsh case. Mrs. Morse made a careful canvass for signatures and has devoted virtually all her time since her husband's imprisonment to efforts to obtain his release.

WOULD CHECK DECEPTION

The Ohio banking public, and especially the foreign element, which has been victimized to so large an extent in the past by individuals who set themselves up as "banks," will be protected in the future by the terms of the Lowry bill, which prohibits the use of the word "state" in the name of unincorporated banks.

Money, Banking and Finance from Chicago Viewpoint

Five per cent money for real estate development has been a common thing in Chicago this spring. The financial market has been dull for a matter of ten days and bankers are glad to get return of 5 per cent. Several of the larger state banks as well as national banks with trust company affiliations have been meeting the demands of the real estate market at the figure named.

General business has not come up to expectations so far this season and as a result money has been cheaper to real estate people than ever before. Ordinarily borrowers on real estate pay 6 to 7 per cent. Last fall this rate was easily maintained and a number of excellent bond propositions were brought out on the 6 per cent basis. As the winter advanced money became more plentiful and 5 per cent loans on building projects got to be a frequent occurrence. This is the situation today and the quotation of 5 to 5½ per cent will stand until the expected trade revival sets in.

The opening of spring has brought the busiest season to Chicago real estate brokers that has been experienced in years. Veterans in the business say that never before has there been such a demand for homes in the outlying districts, and the indications are that the next two months will be the most prosperous in years.

The past week saw a large increase in business over that of the week before and surpassed that of the corresponding week of a year ago by a large amount. There was little done in central business property during the week, but there were several large transfers in apartments.

One of the largest deals was that by which William S. Pace of Cuyahoga county, Ohio, gave a trust deed to Augustus S. Peabody as trustee, securing a bond issue loan of $140,000 for five years at 5½ per cent. Mr. Pace plans the erection of a twenty-one-apartment building at the southwest corner of Sheridan Road and Foster Avenue; and another at the southeast corner of the two streets. There will also be constructed in addition a six-flat building. All of the buildings are three story and basement and of high class, the rents running from $60 to $100 a month.

Extension at Reduced Rate

An extension of a loan of $550,000 on the Manhattan Building, on Dearborn Street 200 feet south of Van Buren Street, by the New York Life Insurance Company to George K. Holt from January 7, 1910, to January 1, 1921, at 4½ per cent, was the principal feature of the realty market Monday. The building is one of the best in the downtown district and occupies 149 by 67 feet of ground. The original loan was for $700,000 and made by Charles C. Heisen, at 5 per cent, 1895.

The Midlothian Country Club is planning extensive improvements by which it will acquire the largest grounds of all clubs in Cook county, as well as one of the finest club buildings. The organization, by J. O. Hinkley, president, has made a bond issue loan of $120,000, for twenty years at 5 per cent, to the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank, secured by trust deed on all its grounds and buildings.

The E. J. Lehman estate has had plans prepared for a twelve-story building to occupy the block bounded by Sheridan Road, Commonwealth Avenue, Diversey Boulevard and Surf Street, to cost, it is estimated, $2,000,000. The building will contain from 1,200 to 1,400 rooms.

Easy Money in the Interior

It is a sign of easy money when interior bankers come to Chicago seeking investments. This spring a great deal of idle capital belonging to outside banks has been used here in the purchase of commercial paper and real estate bonds. This money is employed at 4 to 5 per cent and several corn-belt states seem to have unlimited quantities of it. In the spring wheat region the situation is somewhat different. A great deal of capital is needed to assist farmers who were hurt by last season's drouth and bankers report an active business.

Farm loans are on a 5½ per cent basis, with a moderate business going on. Naturally the large insurance companies have considerable capital in the market for this line of business, but they are not disposed to make loans at less than 5½. Local institutions quote the farm loan market 5½ to 6 per cent. There is no such activity in this department as in city real estate.

Dragging Tendency of Trade

Mercantile and manufacturing business has a dragging tendency, although there are no discouraging elements in the general situation. Fundamentally the country is sound, but there seems to be a spirit of caution abroad in the land which holds trade back. As an illustration, bank clearings in Chicago last week were $257,194,629, a decrease of $16,158,695, or 5.9 per cent, as compared with clearings in the corresponding week last year.

The opinion prevails everywhere that this business depression will last until the supreme court renders its decisions on the trust cases, which will be regarded as a final interpretation of the Sherman act. It is believed that the uncertainty as to these decisions is more serious than that surrounding the work of congress on reciprocity, tariff and currency.

New York clearing house banks increased their deposits $7,330,000 during the last week, and expanded their loans $6,242,000. The total cash reserve was enlarged by $1,509,600, but the surplus reserve was decreased $330,000, due to the increased reserve requirement.

The reserve surplus now shown by the New York banks in the average figures is $31,458,600, as compared with $14,637,950 a year ago and $17,406,625 two years ago.

Banking Unity

Influential New York bankers have instituted a movement which may lead to greater uniformity of action in certain important directions, just as the French bankers and, to a certain degree the German bankers, act in harmony in matters of moment. The bitter rivalries that formerly existed among international bankers in this country, and which occasionally led to most unfortunate occurrences, have been so far modified that co-operation is now practised on all important occasions, such as the handling of large loans for foreign countries. This spirit of friendliness is spreading to other divisions of the financial community. Important developments are looked for in the not distant future affecting, primarily, foreign exchange operations though the outcome may have very far-reaching consequences.

In this particular branch of the banking business the Journal of Commerce says, conditions have for several years become more and more demoralized, until to-day they are well-nigh intolerable. Not only have the profits been cut to unreasonable limits, but there has sprung up a species of speculation most distasteful to the better class of banking houses. A body has been formed fully representative of the better element, and it is now engaged in an earnest effort to bring about a healthier state of affairs. The movement has not yet reached a stage permitting of a definite announcement, but it is understood that substantial progress has been made and that there is every prospect that the outcome will be salutary.

It is only within recent months that the existence of an agreement among French bankers regarding discounts has been realized by New York. The fact has been repeatedly noted that when one Paris bank changed its discount rate the same action was taken by all others at the same time. In other words, the private discount rate in Paris is not a hapazard matter, but has come to be almost as well defined as the official rate. In Berlin there has been a tendency in the same direction. In London the field is so much larger and so diversified that unity of action has not been attained, yet there also the conditions, according to our bankers, are better than here.

What might be termed the co-operative movement has manifested itself in various ways among our financial community. The joint action on the Chinese loan will occur to the mind. The course followed by national banks concerning the banking operations of the express companies and the elaborate plan evolved for issuing letters of credit and handling the foreign exchange business incidental thereto may be fittingly cited. The agitation for keeping an account of the output of commercial paper, though it has not yet accomplished the desired end, is significant of the tendency to act cohesively. Only a few weeks ago it was stated by certain mercantile interests that there seemed to be an understanding among the principal buyers of commercial paper not to accept anything under a specified rate. And has it not been frequently declared that the most powerful financial institutions have consistently refused to "break the rates" for call loans by forcing their abnormal surpluses on the market regardless of the return obtained?

Banking syndicates were never so common nor so comprehensive as they are to-day. One prominent bank has figured in syndicates headed first by J. P. Morgan and Company, then by Kuhn, Loeb and Company and later by Speyer and Company, while it is not uncommon for these leading firms to appear in the same transaction. The holding of banking conventions is stimulating co-operation and helping to improve what might be termed the ethics of the profession.

Pullman company says lowering price of upper berths has not helped demand.

Scrutiny of Banks

Bankers have learned that the New York clearing house has under consideration the appointment of clearing house examiners to conduct bank examinations and to put in operation a system of regulation similar to that in vogue in Chicago and St. Louis. Western bankers have been giving New York bank executives information on how the system works here and what it has accomplished. When Frank A. Vanderlip, president of the National City Bank, visited the West recently, he inquired into the examination and seemed favorably impressed with its possibilities in New York.

For several years New York banks have fought shy of the plan, which originated in Chicago, on the ground that conditions in the metropolis were different from those in other reserve centers and that it was not suited to Wall Street banking methods. Two or three bank failures, since the 1907 panic, however, have worked a change in sentiment.

Chicago adopted the examination system as a result of the failure of John R. Walsh's bank. In St. Louis the near failure of a trust company in 1907 brought it about. In these cities the system has worked smoothly. In only one case has the committee on management in St. Louis had to use stern measures to get a bank to change its practices and charge off paper which the committee held not good. The comptroller of the currency and the state bank commissioner have co-operated with the clearing house examiner. The examiner has three assistants and examinations are constantly going on.

He makes reports and suggestions to the committee on management, and such reports are furnished to the president of the bank, while each director is given notice that a report has been made. The information set out in these reports does not get beyond the committee.

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER By Mortimer I. Stevens

WISCONSIN

Despite the fact that Milwaukee newspapers, owing to their continued fight against the socialistic rule, continue to spread broadcast reports of the vast army of the unemployed supposed to be in Milwaukee at the present time, business generally shows well as compared with the same period a year ago, and conservative bankers and business men place the number of idle men at about 10,000, with the majority of these belonging to the unskilled labor element.

Factories as a rule are working full time and full handed with plenty of orders on hand to insure this condition until time for the fall orders to come in. Demand for loans at the banks is only about normal with deposits showing healthy balances. Daily clearings are generally ahead of the same time one year ago.

Bond houses report good sales, chiefly in the higher grade securities and indications are that the trade in securities for the summer months will exceed the sales made last year.

Wisconsin's View of Guaranty Law

One of Milwaukee's leading daily papers in a scathing editorial of the proposed guaranty law in this state has the following to say: "Very rarely in the history of the country has there been witnessed such a pell mell rush of state bankers to reorganize their institutions under the national banking law as is now in progress in Oklahoma. The phenomenon is newly developed, and by those who have studied the subject is easily understood. It is born of a desire on the part of prudent men in the banking business to emancipate themselves from the operation of the stupid Oklahoma bank guaranty law. The law went into effect on October 1, 1908. In the year 1908, only one state bank was converted to the national system. In 1909 there were three. In 1910 there were seven. Thus far in 1911 there have been eighteen conversions, and during the last three months applications for conversion have numbered between seventy and one hundred, about sixty-five of them having been filed within the last thirty days and still awaiting action. . . . It would seem that some belief in some impending crash inspired the urgency of the applications and explained their unusual number at the present time. Surely after this Oklahoma stampede, coming at the close of three years' experience of the guaranty law, the shallowness of that measure and the charlatanism of the men who forced it upon Oklahoma as a remedy for the ill effects of bad banking must be apparent."

Graettinger in Bond Business

Martin A. Graettinger, formerly cashier of the Merchants and Manufacturers Bank of Milwaukee, and who resigned that position on account of failing health, has embarked in the bond and brokerage business with offices at 1401 Majestic building. Mr. Graettinger will handle only the better grade of bond issues and high grade commercial paper making a specialty of supplying the demands of country bankers among whom he has a wide and extensive personal acquaintance.

Robbers Attempt to Blow Safe

An unsuccessful attempt was made early in the morning of March 22d to blow the safe of the Bank of Shiocton, Wis., by three men who, after they had fired three shots in an effort to break through the heavy doors of the vault, made their escape on a hand-car. An investigation of the result of the three explosions revealed the fact that nitro-glycerine had been used but a bungling job, evidently the work of amateurs, had been done. Aside from the damage to the vault door no other loss was sustained by the bank.

New Bank for Appleton

A state bank for the west end of Appleton is again being agitated. A well known Appleton citizen is reported to be taking an active part in the enterprise and is said to have already enlisted a number of stockholders. This bank has been rumored for some time in the past but has always failed to materialize heretofore yet there is a feeling expressed among business men of Appleton that this time the new institution will be launched and that there is a field for a state bank there.

Looking Forward to Convention

Wisconsin bankers are now looking forward to the seventeenth annual convention of the state association to be held in Milwaukee, July 12th-13th. At that time the committee promises a program will be presented which has never been equaled before while the entertainment side will not be overlooked. The attendance promises to be large owing to the transportation facilities and the fact that many bankers out-in-state will combine business with pleasure. Another feature which will come more as an aftermath of the convention will be the proposed trip of a number of the bankers and their families by special train to Yellowstone Park. This feature is being arranged by the Wisconsin Banker as the result of many requests preferred by those who last year enjoyed the journey to Los Angeles at the time of the national convention.

Trust Company Gets Quarters

Arrangements are understood to have been closed for the leasing of the north half of the first floor of the Watkins block, Superior, Wis., to the new trust company which is headed by H. S. Swanberg of Minneapolis. It is the intention to start in fitting up the quarters for the new firm within a short time. The trust company will have a capital of $50,000 and if the outlook is satisfactory to the promoters that amount may be increased. The concern will make a specialty of financing realty deals, which the banking laws prevent regular banking institutions from handling to any great extent. Mr. Swanberg and the men who are connected with the new trust company are also interested in a tract of 23,000 acres of land in Bayfield county which it is the intention to colonize during the coming summer.

New Bank Plans Ready

When Geo. N. Fratt, cashier of the First National Bank of Racine, was in Milwaukee a few days ago and questioned concerning the proposed new bank building for his institution he refused to definitely commit himself. However, plans for a building have been made and it is reported that if same is erected it will be almost a duplicate of the bank at Sheboygan except that it will be considerably larger.

Bank Opens for Business

The Farmers and Merchants State Bank of Kewanee has opened for business in temporary quarters. The work of installing the vaults and remodelling the building is being pushed as rapidly as possible and the new bank will move into its permanent quarters as soon as the work is completed.

Adopt New Statement Forms

At least two Milwaukee banks, the Marshall and Ilsley Bank and the Merchants and Manufacturers Bank, adopted unusually neat forms typographically of the statements issued in response to the call of March 7th. In the case of the former bank a neat India tint board is used, which, folded once, just fits the ordinary envelope for mailing purposes and prominently displayed on what might be termed the first page, is the well known "trade-mark" of this institution. The Merchants and Manufacturers Bank has departed from their usual form of statement printed in colors and adopting some design emblematic of the manufacturing interests of Milwaukee, and now issues its statement upon an expensive paper and with no attempt at artistic work other than unusually neat display of plain type. One of the features of this statement is found in the sub-totals under resources and liabilities which shows at a glance in one instance, the actual cash reserve and in the other instance, the demand liabilities.

Association Shows Good Gain

Association Treasurer A. H. Grout, of Wausau, reports the collection of membership fees for 1911 for the Wisconsin Bankers Association as showing a good gain in membership over 1910. In January, Secretary Bartlett made draft on every bank and trust company in the state, thus giving non-member banks an opportunity to become members without formal application. Of the 684 drafts but fifty-five were returned unpaid. These latter will hear from their group secretaries and may be induced to become members of one of the most active bankers' associations in the United States.

Mutual Insurance for Banks

Wisconsin State Insurance Commissioner Ekern will recommend that the present law regarding organization of insurance companies be amended so as to permit the bankers of this state to organize a mutual insurance company for their own protection, thus permitting them to insure against fire and burglary, also to cover various kinds of bonds and insurance of deposits. Insurance companies have taken good profit from Wisconsin banks and it is thought that a mutual insurance of deposits under association supervision would be preferable to guaranty of deposits without any right of examination.

Watermarked Safety Paper

The manufacturers of the new safety paper which has been adopted by the Wisconsin Bankers Association for the protection of members, have announced that this paper will be on the market during the first part of April. As this paper is for the special protection of members of the association the sale of it will be limited to such printers and lithographers as will agree to limit its use to bank checks, bank drafts and certificates of deposit manufactured for banks which are members of the state association.

Banking Notes of Interest

F. P. Ainsworth, receiver of the Bank of Clear Lake, has purchased the Old National Bank building and fixtures in Ladysmith and expects to organize a state bank in that city in the near future. The consolidation of the Ladysmith National Bank and the State Bank of Ladysmith was effected last October and since then there have been many rumors of a new bank for that town.

The Commercial Bank of Chilton has been organized with a capital of $25,000. The incorporators are F. J. Egan, Herman Paulson, Theo. Schultz and others. The State Bank of Patch Grove has also applied for a charter with capital stock of $10,000. The incorporators are Frank Kalb, E. C. Adams, E. L. Case and others.

L. A. Anderson of Gardner, N. Dak., will become cashier of the First National Bank of Edgerton about May 1st. Mr. Anderson has had many years' experience in the banking business and is at present connected with the bank at Gardner.

St. Louis

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, Mo., March 29.—Money with all the larger banks in St. Louis continues plentiful to a degree, and quietness featured the demand for credits throughout the week. While some institutions are well loaned up, others have not been pressing things to dispose of their funds, believing the present rates too unattractive, and hoping for betterment in rates, due to the demand from the South and Southwest which is expected to develop within the next forty to sixty days. The long period of easy money is beginning to wear on the nerves of certain bankers, and disposes them to the belief that the entire year will be one of low rates.

It is admitted that the first three months are always the easiest from a monetary standpoint, but the first quarter of this year has been unusually so, and this is taken as an indication that the coming nine months will be correspondingly soft in the money market. Others, however, say the less hopeful brethren take their frame of mind from the tone of the market, and that things will pike up in due course of time, especially as fundamental conditions are extremely healthy. A feature has been the slowness in the demand for call loans, and few bankers want to place money for long terms at the inducements now offered by borrowers. Deposits are decreasing slowly, much more so than is usually the case at this season. Thus far the demand from the South has been moderately active only, but institutions with largest Southern connections have been best off in the present slow stage of the market. Requirements locally are easily taken care of, and rates remain unchanged in the range between $4\frac{1}{2}$ and $5\frac{1}{4}$ per cent in the extremes.

Galbreath has Returned

George W. Galbreath, cashier of the Third National, has returned from California after a vacation of several weeks. Mr. Galbreath appears in excellent health and says he is ready for another year's work.

Huttig Entertains Bankers

Charles H. Huttig, president of the Third National, entertained F. O. Watts, president and William Livingston, vice-president, of the American Bankers Association last Saturday. The purpose of their visit to St. Louis was a meeting of the administrative committee of the association. Mr. Huttig said the meeting was adjourned to Washington, D. C., this week.

Missouri Bank Deposits

According to the latest statement of Comptroller of the Currency Murray the national banks in Missouri, exclusive of St. Louis, and Kansas City, have an aggregate of $28,788,934 in individual deposits. Two months ago these same banks contained a total of $28,288,808 of individual deposits. The total liabilities and resources of the banks is placed at $47,584,101, as compared with $46,779,900 on the earlier date. Loans and discounts amounted to $26,484,197 against $26,242,533 in January. Outside of St. Louis and Kansas City there are 107 national banks in Missouri.

St. Louis Stock Exchange

The nominating committee of the St. Louis stock exchange has just completed its slate, which will be voted on April 1st. William M. Louderman heads the ticket, to succeed Louis Barklage, who served as president last year. Mr. Louderman is now vice-president, and it is the time honored custom of the exchange to have the vice-president succeed to the presidency. Charles McLure Clark is named for vice-president; B. C. Jenkins for treasurer and A. B. Grant for secretary. The following are named for directors to serve until 1913: Louis Barklage, J. D. P. Francis, A. H. Brown, J. W. Donaldson and F. H. Semple. No contest will take place, as the slate formulated by the committee is the result of a thorough canvass of all members, and in former years it has been elected practically unanimously.

United Railways Financing

Failure of the compromise between the City and the United Railways on the mill tax proposition and other points, to pass has proved a great disappointment to local bankers and financiers generally. This measure would have facilitated the financing of underlying obligations, which are falling due. The underlying obligations aggregate $18,711,000, and more than half mature from year to year between 1911 and 1918, and the rest between 1920 and 1923.

New Banking Legislation

John E. Swanger, state bank commissioner for Missouri, has given out the following statement concerning recent legislation affecting banks and trust companies: "Although there were no sweeping changes in the banking laws with reference to banks and trust companies, there were five bills passed by the general assembly affecting them. The most important of these changes is found in senate bill No. 102, which is a bill increasing the examination fees to be charged the banks and trust companies in order that the revenue from this source might be sufficient to defray the expenses of the banking department. It will be remembered that during the last biennial period it was found that the fees charged fell short of the amount necessary to run the department by about $21,000. The increase of the fees makes up this shortage. House bill No. 141 is designated to give relief to private banks with a capital of less than $100,000 and which were established before the law was enacted requiring a capital of $100,000 in a city of 150,000 or more inhabitants; and provides that if such banks are located in cities of 150,000 or less than 500,000 and not closer than three miles to the main post office building, they may incorporate with their present capital, if they now have an unimpaired capital of not less than $10,000.

Against Untrue Statements

"Another measure, which has been signed by Governor Hadley, makes it a misdemeanor to make, utter, circulate or transmit statements untrue, in fact derogatory to any bank, trust company, insurance company, guaranty or fidelity company or other financial institution. The penalty is a fine or imprisonment or both. House bill No. 695 affects all corporations, hence would affect banking companies as well. The bill provides that officers and directors of a corporation who purchase property for a corporation above the actual value of said property, shall be liable to the excess price paid therefor. Senate bill No. 309 provides for the incorporation of a mortgage loan company, with power to loan money on real estate in Missouri only and to issue debentures thereon equal to 90 per cent of the first mortgage loan, with restrictions and limitations and providing also that these companies shall be subject to ex-

NATIONAL BANK REPORTS GOOD

Washington, March 28.—National banks of the country are shown to be in a condition which treasury officials consider favorable, under their reports covering the close of business on March 7th. The figures were completed to-day.

The 7,216 banks are holding $94,604,495 more than the law requires in their reserves and show gains of $155,000,000 in loans and discounts, $71,000,000 in cash and $191,000,000 in deposits, over the report of January 7th. The Pacific and western states are the only ones to show losses. The western states contracted loans and discounts aggregating $843,000 and lost $200,000 in cash. The Pacific states reduced loans $7,000,000 and lost $800,000 in cash.

The total gain of $191,000,000 in individual deposits is more or less artificial, as the preceding call made on January 7th was on Saturday, a half banking day, and the loss shown was occasioned by that fact.

Since the last call the banks have decreased their circulation $3,400,000, though that item stands $11,000,000 ahead of March, 1910. General increases are shown in all items, as compared with March, 1910. Loans and discounts jumped $125,000,000.

OKLAHOMA MEETING IN MAY

Oklahoma City, March 30.—The annual convention of the Oklahoma Bankers Association will be held this year in Oklahoma City, Monday and Tuesday, May 22d and 23d. The place and time were fixed at a meeting of the executive committee of the association here March 25th. One reason for choosing the date named is that it comes between the Texas and Kansas-Missouri conventions, the former being on May 16th-17th-18th and the latter on May 24th-25th. Visiting bankers can go from Dallas to Oklahoma City and thence to Kansas City without losing much time.

It is expected that the feature of the first day of the convention will be an address by Hon. Edward B. Vreeland on the "Reserve Association of America" plan. The program committee announces that all subjects discussed will be handed by practical bankers in order to get as much good from the convention as possible.

A committee of Oklahoma City bankers will have charge of the entertainment and social features. A grand ball will be given the evening of the first day. Several hundred rooms have been secured by the association and those desiring to make reservations can do so either through the secretary, W. B. Harrison, Enid, Okla., or by writing direct to the hotels. The Lee-Huckins will be headquarters.

Oklahoma bankers anticipate a large convention.

NOTICE OF BOND SALE

The Hood River Irrigation District, Hood River, Oregon, will sell $70,000.00 completion bonds at the office of its secretary on April 17th at 2 p. m. The irrigation district is not a Carey Act project but is organized and operates under state law practically the same as a school district. These bonds bear 6% interest, semi-annual, are retired in 20 years, and are a first mortgage on the lands of the district, and a prior lien against the lands to everything else. The District has been operating 5 years and must now complete its system. The lands within the District are mostly bearing orchards and strawberry fields, and were last year assessed for state and county taxes at $820,701.00. Further information will be furnished by

R. W. KELLY, Secretary.

Kansas City

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

Kansas City bankers generally feel entirely satisfied with the financial situation in the Central West although the volume of business has not improved greatly since the first of the year. The rate on cattle and other commercial paper continues low as the demand has not yet set in for the feeding season. Cold rains have held back the cattle buying market which is expected to start with a rush about the middle of April.

"There is not much to say concerning the situation here," said J. R. Dominick, president of the Traders' National Bank of Kansas City to the representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER. "As a matter of fact we are simply waiting developments which are bound to come within a week or so. Kansas City is an important factor in handling cattle and farm products and as the agricultural situation is satisfactory in every way I see no reason why our business should not be normal for the spring and summer."

Failure of Guaranty Law

Doubt no longer exists that the Oklahoma bank deposit guaranty law is a failure from the bankers' standpoint. Even some of those state bankers who were most enthusiastic supporters of the measure are now seeking to evade it by becoming nationalized and the rush among Oklahoma state banks to secure exemption from this regulation by federal incorporation has become almost a rout. When Governor Cruce was inaugurated about the first of the present year there were whispered protests against the law and demands that the condition of the state guaranty fund be examined. A committee was named and the examination was made but the findings have not been made public.

The calls upon the state bankers to help out the fund have been so numerous and so burdensome that since January 1st this year about 100 state banks have become nationalized and reports from Washington say that more than eighty similar applications from Oklahoma state banks are waiting action. The Oklahoma bank deposit guaranty law went into effect October 10, 1908. The records of the office of the comptroller show that in 1908 only one Oklahoma state bank became nationalized. In 1909 there were three and in 1910 seven. It is the belief of many bankers that the decision of the United States supreme court upholding the guaranty law was a surprise to most Oklahoma financiers and that this accounts for the rush for nationalization. The national bank examiners in Oklahoma have asked for assistance owing to the fact that all their time at present is taken up in passing upon state banks that have applied for national charters. An interesting indication of the banking situation in Oklahoma is found in this statement quoted from Frank Ketch of the Lawton State Bank:

"Yes, the name of the bank from this morning will be the Lawton National Bank. The bank guaranty law is a failure. We could not stand the heavy assessments and so have determined to convert our institution into a national bank."

Up to the first of the present year there were approximately 700 state banks in Oklahoma.

Lower Bank Taxation

The campaign waged by the legislative committee of the Missouri Bankers Association to secure a reduction in the tax assessment on bank stock has been successful. The state board of equalization has adopted the suggestion offered by the bankers' committee and hereafter the rate will be 50 cents on the dollar instead of 55 cents, which rate has prevailed for many years. The reduction will cause no material loss of revenue to the state but will be a blessing to thousands of owners of bank stock in the state, a large percentage of whom are farmers.

Occupies New Building

The removal of the Missouri Savings Bank of Kansas City to its new building, 920 Walnut Street on Monday, March 27th, was a gala event in Kansas City business and financial circles. The beautiful banking rooms of the new building which is finished in marble and bronze, were gay with flowers most of which were tributes from other local banks. During the day hundreds of bankers and business friends of the officers of the Missouri Savings Bank called to offer their congratulations. Watt Webb, who organized the bank in 1886 and still remains its president, was present to receive the guests, and others who formed the reception committee were W. S. Webb, cashier, C. A. Middaugh, assistant cashier and Watt Webb, Jr., assistant cashier.

The general business situation in this territory, however, is slow even for this season of the year. Various periods of unsettled weather with cold have kept back business in spring merchandising. St. Joseph, Mo., which has had a splendid record for bank clearings since the first of the year, indicates substantial strength. Omaha has fallen back 13.8 per cent.

Editorial Comment

A STATE OF CURIOUS INCONSISTENCY

A few years ago when one of the present mayoral candidates was retiring from office two of Chicago's leading papers praised him highly. They now are opposing his re-election and candidate Harrison is running their own former editorials as paid matter in their own advertising pages. At the same time he is suing one of the two for libel for reprinting former editorials taken from the columns of a paper which now is supporting him. What a farce! Mr. Harrison now is no better nor any worse than he was eight years ago yet the papers—reform papers at that—have so far changed sides that each now is using the former editorials of the other as damaging campaign material. What then was abusive and probably libelous now is being reprinted in full by the opposition. What then was commendatory is being run as paid advertisement. If the voters pay any attention whatever to the matter of newspaper advice as to which are the worthy candidates they must be fat witted indeed.

If Harrison was a wise and able ruler at the end of four terms as mayor of Chicago, and the papers being free from the party lash and in a truth telling mood said so, they should be supporting him to-day, or, at least not lying about him and forswearing the record. Politics is nasty business at best, but in the editorial columns of the city papers one expects truth and consistency. The voters will do well to weigh the matter carefully and vote for the best man regardless of such queer editorial advice.

CUPIDITY THE CAUSE

The cause of nearly every downfall of note in the banking business can be explained by the one word—"cupidity." The millionaire Wichita banker fell because he could not refuse a chance to "make" less than three hundred dollars by buying from an equally diseased morality—the chief of police—stolen postage stamps. Risky? It was desperate. Yet it was the same incentive which has operated in nearly every case. Cassie Chadwick had the wisdom to discover this weakness in men and the cunningness to play the game to the finish. Ninety per cent of the look-out notices from the secretaries never would be sent if the banker when asked to "discount" a worthless check could resist the longing for a little more than the regular rate. One huge "fall" began when a banker of many vast enterprises kept raising his terms with the underwriters of his securities until they "quit" and he had to attempt to carry his loans in his own bank on dummy notes. Had he been willing to continue putting them out at 96 or even at 98 he would have remained a power instead of a "wrecker." He was unwilling to see them make even their narrow margin of profit. NASHVILLE MEETING GROWING IN IMPORTANCE

Word comes from Washington that Senator Aldrich is expected to attend the Nashville meeting of the A. B. A. executive council. This situation has grown out of the meeting in Washington between the national monetary commission and the currency commission of the American Bankers Association. The principal difficulty reported thus far is the problem of what would become of the state banks if the Aldrich plan should become a law. The nearest they got to a solution was the suggestion that state banks should be brought under federal charters. This only could be done by enlarging the privileges of the national banks in the matter of loaning upon real estate and otherwise by giving them the same broad field enjoyed by the state institutions.

The meetings in Washington are not open to the public and it is not likely that any agreement between the two currency commissions will be reached. If Senator Aldrich should come to the Nashville meeting, it would be in the guise of a speaker at the council banquet. This would add greatly to the importance of the Nashville conference between the members of the council and members of the association committees. Mr. Forgan gave it out at Washington as his opinion that the conference had indicated its general approval of the Aldrich plan, but that a great many details would necessarily come up for consideration.

Among those who attended the conference as representative of Western banking interests are J. B. Forgan and Geo. M. Reynolds of Chicago, Festus J. Wade of St. Louis, John Perrin of Indianapolis, Luther Drake of Omaha, John L. Hamilton of Illinois, and Arthur Reynolds of Iowa. Robert Wardrop was there from Pittsburgh and M. T. Herrick from Cleveland. The public will be very much interested in any decision which this important body of men may reach as to what changes must be made in our financial system. The meeting at Nashville probably will be more important both to bankers and to the public than any other council meeting in the history of the American Bankers Association.

SAVINGS BANK CONDITIONS

The address delivered on Tuesday night before the New York chapter of the American Institute of Banking by Lucius Teter on American savings bank conditions furnishes one of the most interesting banking documents of recent times. Mr. Teter is classed among the younger bankers of the country, yet it may be said to his credit that besides other valuable experiences he has founded and brought to a high state of perfection a modern savings institution in a more than ordinarily difficult field. Chicago had been well served by old established banks and the nationals were constantly entering the field with savings departments or with allied trust companies under state charters. A part of the fine showing made by the city of Chicago in its growth of savings deposits is attributable to Mr. Teter and his modern savings institution.

In his New York address he treated the savings bank problem as one of the most interesting features of American finance. He advised all students connected with the New York chapter and elsewhere to give it their careful and earnest attention. He believes that the handling of the reserve sums of money owned by the saving people of the United States takes first rank among the accomplishments of American bankers. High compliment was paid to the National Monetary Commission for furnishing its long list of splendid reports accompanied by exhaustive statistics. To illustrate the growth of the savings business of the country Mr. Teter called his hearers' attention to the fact that in Chicago as late as 1892, savings deposits barely reached nineteen millions of dollars. In 1911 they were far over one hundred and ninety millions. He pointed out that while Chicago has had and is having rapid growth in population, the thrifty habits of the people are increasing still more rapidly. A survey of the general situation indicated that in the newer settlements the ratio of increase has been greater than in Chicago and that in the older sections the growth had been not so great. Probably Chicago shows a fair average of the savings gains for the entire country.

In all of his talk Mr. Teter wished it to be understood that his use of the term "savings bank" should be understood to mean incorporated banking institutions accepting savings deposits and turning these funds into community use. He divided them into three classes, putting mutual banks without capital into one class; capitalized banks, state banks, and trust companies under state banking laws into the second class. In the third class he mentioned national banks organized and operated under federal law. He gave the total number of all such institutions in the United States for 1909 as 10,989. Of this number 627 are mutuals, half of the total number being in Massachusetts and New York. Illinois is not named in this list. The mutual banks handle about 55 per cent of the entire deposits of the country. In enumerating the state savings institutions which number over six thousand, the speaker called attention to the fact that within ten years thirty states have passed improved banking legislation. The speaker classed exclusive savings banks as ideal, but called attention to a very large field which could not be served by them where the more useful institution is the one doing a general banking business as well as a savings business. Nearly three thousand national banks are conducting savings departments. He recognized that they have met a situation not contemplated or provided for in the original law and that they are filling the greater law of supply and demand most admirably. America has more than fifteen million depositors with sums to their credit of more than five and one half billions. It was predicted that savings deposits will increase with much greater rapidity in the future than they ever have in the past.

Toward the close of his address Mr. Teter spoke directly to the chapter men upon the great demand for trained men in the banking field. He always has been a strong advocate of chapter educational methods and believes that they are doing a wonderful work. He urged the young men to not only study banking and corporation law but to carefully study our whole country, its people, and public conditions. He told them that banking problems are not to be solved according to local standards. As an instance he pointed out that railway bonds probably are the best securities for savings loans in New York state, but that in Arkansas cotton would take first rank; that the Texas savings money was loaned securely upon cattle and that in Illinois it is safely loaned on corn and wheat. Students of the institute were advised to take a broad view and to get the best technical training possible. He indicated the great work being done by the American Bankers Association, by the various state associations, and by the group organizations. He advised all of his hearers to become as active as possible in association work to their own benefit and to the general welfare of all bankers.

PROBLEMS OF RURAL LIFE

Joseph Chapman, Jr., the Minneapolis banker, in his Chicago speech last week, discussed the problem of rural schools as they affect farm life. Mr. Chapman believes that the decline of population in many farming communities and the prevailing discontent among young men and women are due in a great measure to defects in school training. It will be found that farmers, business people and educators agree with his conclusions.

The district school has not risen to its opportunities. It has not kept pace with an advancing civilization. For this the farmers themselves are to blame. They have not spent money enough on their schools. Cheap teachers and unsuitable buildings have hampered the cause of education in farming districts. Boys and girls of rural America have grown up without pride in their surroundings or an intelligent interest in agriculture. Their schools have failed to supply the right kind of education. The old-fashioned farmer has made life unattractive and hard for his children. Through narrowness and parsimony he has kept the country school on a low plane. The whole nation suffers as a consequence and public sentiment is being aroused to the need of a radical change in the conditions surrounding rural life.

From one end of the country to the other a demand has gone forth for immediate and positive reforms. Leading educators, farmers' institutes, commercial associations and all students of sociological affairs are united in seeking means for improving the educational facilities in country districts. It is the contention that more money must be spent on rural schools. It is thought that by more generally adopting the plans of consolidating these district schools, better buildings and more competent teachers can be secured without making taxation excessive. Education suitable to the needs of country boys and girls will naturally follow.

Rural schools ought to afford some practical knowledge of modern agriculture. They ought to stimulate a love for farm life and show the folly and danger of forsaking the farm for a career in town. A patriotic public spirit along this line might be aroused by a suitable educational system in the country.

The Farmers State has been organized at Danzig, N. D., to open July 1st. Incorporators are George Gackle, Peter Belligmeier, Christ Hieb, Michael Hieb.

BANK CLERKS ON STRIKE

On the east side of New York City the Jewish bank clerks have organized and affiliated themselves with the United Hebrew trades, a central body comprising 125 unions.

The bank clerks demand more wages and shorter hours of labor. All but two of the banks combined against them and refused the clerks' demands. So several hundred clerks and bookkeepers walked out. The bankers are coming to time, however, and this is how the strikers worked it.

The men and women walk about the district withdrawing their savings from a "bad" bank and deposits them in a "fair" bank. Then they reverse the process. One depositor will take his little savings out of a bad bank, and put them into another bad bank, just to make the strikebreakers work—and the clerks are overworked, counting money, opening new accounts and closing accounts.

The bankers, it is claimed, are on the verge of granting the demands of the striking clerks and bookkeepers.

INCOME TAX IN DOUBT

New York, March 30.—Nine more states must ratify the proposed federal income tax amendment before it can become a part of the constitution. Reports received here from the capitals of the forty-six states show that the amendment has received favorable action in the joint legislatures of twenty-six.

Three states, Vermont, Rhode Island, and Utah, have refused to ratify the amendment at this year's legislative sessions. Among the sixteen which have not acted this year the question is now pending in the legislatures of Louisiana, New York, Massachusetts, Maine, Connecticut, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

The matter is scheduled to come before the legislature of Florida next month. West Virginia has postponed action and the states of Arkansas, Tennessee, Wyoming, Minnesota and Delaware have not considered the matter.

The amendment passed congress in the form of a resolution on July 5, 1909. It seeks to add to the constitution a new article, No. XVI, reading as follows:

"The congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever sources derived, without apportionment among the several states without regard to any census enumeration."

The constitution provides that proposed amendments to become valid must be ratified by three-fourths of the states. This necessitates favorable action by thirty-five of the forty-six states before the government can proceed with this method of increasing its revenues. There is no limit to the time of such ratification and negative action by a legislature is not conclusive, a state having the right to reverse its judgment.

At the close of 1910 the amendment had been ratified by only Alabama, Georgia, Illinois, Maryland, Mississippi, Oklahoma and South Carolina, while last year the legislatures of Louisiana, Massachusetts, New York and Rhode Island refused to adopt it, and the other states took no action.

Since January 1, 1911, the following nineteen additional states voted favorably: California, Nevada, Montana, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Texas, North Carolina, Kentucky, North Dakota, Ohio, Iowa, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Indiana, Missouri, Wisconsin and Michigan.

CHAPTER RECORD

(Department of Chicago Banker)

An Open Forum Dedicated to the American Institute of Banking in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Systematic Education and Universal Membership

SAVANNAH CHAPTER

The March meeting of the Savannah Chapter was held on the 9th inst., in the rooms of the chapter at which time the officers to serve the chapter for the ensuing year were chosen and a committee was appointed to arrange for the annual banquet of the chapter, which it was agreed would be at the Casino on April 21st.

After the regular business had been disposed of, President Taylor turned the chair over to the chairman of the nominating committee who presided during the election. For president, the nominating committee presented the name of R. J. Taylor of the Citizens and Southern Bank for re-election and the chairman called for a vote. Mr. Taylor was unanimously and enthusiastically elected for his third term despite his protestation that he should be allowed to retire after having served the chapter as president since its organization two years ago.

Chas. E. Stanton, Jr., of the National Bank of Savannah was nominated and elected vice-president for his third term as the chapter feels safe in entrusting to competent and faithful officers, the guidance of its affairs for another term.

The office of the secretary and of the treasury were, on motion, combined and the office of assistant secretary created. Louis Rubanovitch of the Savannah Trust Company was elected secretary and treasurer to succeed Valmore W. Lebey who had served the chapter as secretary faithfully and willingly since its organization. H. W. Johansen of the Commercial Bank was elected assistant secretary.

A board of governors was then chosen composed of the following gentlemen:

S. W. Lewis National Bank of Savannah, chairman; Joe J. Gleason, Citizens and Southern Bank; R. L. Willy, Exchange Bank; W. F. Lynes, Real Estate Bank; A. I. Williams, Merchants Bank; H. W. Johansen, Commercial Bank.

After the election several members of the chapter took occasion to compliment the chapter on having secured as officers for another year, men of such ability and experience as Mr. Taylor and Mr. Stanton had proven themselves to be.

Mr. Taylor has always taken the deepest interest in the chapter and it was through his efforts practically unassisted that the Savannah Chapter was organized. Mr. Taylor is also treasurer of the American Institute of Banking. Mr. Stanton has always ably seconded the efforts of Mr. Taylor and has presided with credit during the absence of the president.

Mr. Taylor was then called on and after expressing his appreciation of the compliment of his re-election, urged upon the members the necessity of taking a deep and lively interest in all of the affairs of the chapter as if the officers knew that they had the support of the whole chapter much work could be undertaken and the brightest success of the chapter assured. Mr. Taylor announced that he had taken up with the Savannah Clearing Association the matter of a donation towards the expenses of the chapter and they had responded most generously with a check for $150.00 for which he had already sent a letter of sincere thanks to the association on behalf of the chapter.

Mr. Taylor's remarks were applauded, especially his reference to the donation and upon invitation of the president, the meeting being adjourned, the members assembled in the refreshment room of the chapter where a tempting and palatable lunch had been prepared.

GEORGE H. DIETER.

CHICAGO CHAPTER

Craig B. Hazelwood, assistant secretary of the Union Trust Company, gave a talk on "Preparation for Debate," before the Debating Club of the Chicago Chapter, Tuesday, March 21st. Mr. Hazelwood, who, by the way, is the father of the club, knows a good deal about effective debating and what he said was to the point and of value to all who aspire to succeed in this line. He told:

How and where to gather the necessary information.

The importance of knowing exactly what the question at issue is.

The necessity for a good outline.

The value of being able to clearly and forcibly state the nub of an argument.

The value of boiled-down statistics.

The dangers of quoting others.

The importance of a good rebuttal and the need for forecasting the arguments of the opposing side.

At the conclusion of Mr. Hazelwood's talk, the members participated in a round-table debate, various topics of general interest being discussed, notably the Mexican Revolution, the present political situation and socialism. The latter subject was drawn by Mr. Burbank, secretary of the club, who clearly demonstrated that he has some rather decided opinions on the question, all negative. His views were not concurred in by the majority of the members and immediately one of the most heated debates was in progress, Messrs. Drummond, Schroeder, Rich, Peterson and Burbank all having a great deal to say on the subject. The inclination was to give due credit to the sincerity of the party and the truth of its doctrines, and the feasibility of their purposes. Mr. Schroeder, however, was rather pessimistic and expressed the fear that sooner or later we would have to face the demands (just or otherwise) of the "illiterate mob"; that it was the duty of the "educated" to begin a system of education which will demonstrate the futility and impracticability of their ideas, rather than to allow them to learn by actual experience and perhaps the loss of blood. Mr. Rich held a more optimistic view, feeling that the intelligence of the masses would never permit them to carry out any radical ideas, which would prove a detriment to the welfare of the nation.

The question of challenging the St. Paul Chapter to a debate was brought up by Mr. Drummond, but the matter was laid over until some future time. It was thought best to allow this matter to rest until after the debate with the Milwaukee Chapter, which is destined to take place in the near future.

EAST ST. LOUIS BANKER HERE

James E. Combes, an East St. Louis banker, was a visitor in Chicago the fore part of the week.

RICHMOND CHAPTER

Should you drop in at our Chapter rooms on any Wednesday night, you would find that Richmond Chapter has not forgotten the primary object of the institute, for there you would find a bunch of fellows engaged in the study of banking and finance. Those of us who have the interest of the chapter at heart agree with Max Adamsky's fable of the Three Sisters—education, politics, and sociability; that is, that education is the only one of the three sisters that is really it.

We are using the institute course of lectures on banking and finance and one of our number who has been previously appointed so that he may become perfectly familiar with it, and that he may supplement the printed lecture with other information he may have gotten, reads the lecture, and we all join in the discussion. And what a discussion we have at times! If you stood off at a distance where you could not hear what was really being said you might easily imagine, from the earnestness and animation of the participants, that some big legal battle was on.

Our rule is to make a different man read the lecture each time, because the man who conducts the class is the man who gets the most out of it. Everybody is talking banquet now, for be it known we are going to have something big ere the April number of the Journal is out.

Our February meeting which we failed to report in last month's Journal was chock full of good things. The men from the National Bank of Virginia had charge of the program, which reflected great credit upon them. Allen Crutchfield spoke on the "Savings Department," E. A. Leake on "Progressive Richmond," and James E. Tyler on "Success." After this intellectual feast we pitched into the refreshments which the committee had provided.

The March meeting was another banner one. O. J. Sands spoke on "Banking Problems," and H. W. Jackson on "Trust Companies." There was a good crowd on hand, the speakers were good, and not the least enjoyable feature of the evening was the fellowship after the meeting adjourned. If some of the bank officers who never attend our meetings would drop in occasionally, they would be surprised at the deep interest taken in banking by the employees. The men hang around the chapter rooms an hour after the meeting has adjourned, divided up into little groups, discussing different phases of banking, exchanging ideas as to the best way to run some particular desk, or perhaps finding out the law relating to some particular transaction about which there has been doubt.

The institute men certainly have the laugh on those who do not attend the meetings, for when it comes to getting there, the institute man is generally the fellow; the reason is easy, for he has prepared himself, and when the opportunity comes for promotion, it's a cinch that he is the man to go up, because he is the best qualified man.

NEW STATE BANK AT MORGAN PARK

A permit for the organization of the Morgan Park State Bank was issued this week at Springfield by State Auditor McCullough. The applicants were Jesse R. Long, William H. May, and John R. Miller.

Similar permits have been obtained in previous years in advance of a referendum on annexation to Chicago, such as is pending in the suburb now. These have lapsed following unfavorable action on the proposition.

They were believed to have been speculative schemes. The organization could be completed in Morgan Park with a capital of only $25,000, as it is a village of less than 5,000 population, while in Chicago a state bank is required to have $200,000 capital.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

With the eclat that attaches to city bankers Theodore Wold, president of the Scandinavian American National Bank, and J. S. Pomeroy, cashier of the Security National, went down to Winona the other night and sat in at a dinner to former Congressman James A. Tawney. Mr. Pomeroy reached Minneapolis from Winona by way of a strenuous course in banking experience in Chicago. Mr. Wold jumped direct into the maelstrom of Twin City finance and both felt they had acquired sufficient aplomb to return to their former homes.

Having come from a city which was rent with the jealousy of rivalry with La Crosse, a city represented in bank circles by Vice-President E. M. Wing of the Batavian National, to one in which similar rents were observable from competition with St. Paul, Mr. Pomeroy talked with the reporters. He said to them of the Winona-La Crosse feud: "The rivalry has died down now." Mr. Wold generously conceded a point. On the inside it is known that he is a great friend of Mr. Wing. He said: "The La Crosse men are good fellows, and when we former Winonians meet on common ground in Minneapolis we are all good Minneapolitans together. But there have been quite as many foolish things in the rivalry between La Crosse and Winona as there were in the Minneapolis-St. Paul rivalry of years ago. As for La Crosse, I remember a ball game that was played there on a recent Memorial day between Winona and La Crosse, when the lemonade and peanut venders would not sell their wares to the Winona men, and when the rivalry gets so strong that one town refuses to take another town's money, it is pretty strong. But the hundreds of Winona and La Crosse people mix amicably in Minneapolis."

Plans for New Bank

Plans for a new bank in Minneapolis are being made by A. E. Harper, president of the Minneapolis State Bank, and E. P. Allen, president of the Mercantile Adjustment Company. The work thus far has been to find if capital is available. "We have found there is capital available for a bank centrally located and well officered," Mr. Harper said.

Western Progress

Returned from the vicinity of his apple orchard F. E. Holton, cashier of the Northwestern National, says that Portland, Ore., is one of the liveliest cities possible, building is on the increase and bank clearings show decided gains each week. He continues: "It is surprising the way the country has been settled up along the Northern Pacific in three years. I found business in Seattle rather quiet."

Address by Parker

Harry W. Parker, cashier of the Merchants National, addressed the Seventh District Group convention of the Minnesota State Bankers Association at Benson Wednesday on "Bank Credits and Proposed Legislation Providing for the Registration of Commercial Paper." As president of the St. Paul Association of Credit Men, Mr. Parker is familiar with the activities of the national association. He is also authority on bank credits.

Northwestern Miscellany

The Security Bank of Plentywood, Mont., will incorporate as a state bank with $20,000 capital. Officers are to be: President D. N. Tallman; vice-president, Andrew Fadness; cashier, N. L. Nelson.

Matthew S. Nolan of Lamont, Iowa, has been elected cashier of the Peoples State of Mason City, Iowa. L. Oliver Stone, five years cashier of the Iowa State at Mason City, will open a bank at Bacon, Mont.

"John Jones" arrested for speeding his automobile thirty-three miles an hour in Minneapolis and fined $35 in the municipal court, is said to have been Kelsey Chase, state superintendent of banks. Mr. Chase recently applied for more assistance in his bank investigations and it is presumed that he was catching up with his work when he was taken in by a policeman who has had no fiscal experience and did not understand.

Denying that the commission form of government for cities should be adopted in the United States, the St. Paul bank clerks were recently upheld by the judges and the Minneapolis affirmative was not recognized as entitled to consideration. The debaters for St. Paul were Rodney Sturle, Capital National Bank; Lawrence Drew, American National Bank, and O. J. Shumacher, Stock-yards National Bank. The Minneapolis men were A. C. Thompson and J. E. McGuigan, Northwestern National Bank, and F. Mulchay, Minnesota Loan and Trust Company.

Nine banks in Rice county, Minn., show total loans and discounts of $3,000,000 and deposits of more than $3,500,000. Resources are $4,327,929. Faribault is the county seat.

G. H. Prince, vice-president of the Merchants National, sailed March 21st for home from Yokahama. With his wife and daughter he has been touring the Pacific islands and in the Orient since the holidays. The Korea, aboard which are the Princes, docks April 16th at San Francisco, if the time card is observed.

Incorporators of the First State of Barnesville, Minn., which is to be open May 1st, are President J. S. Ulland and Cashier F. J. Evans of the First National of Fergus Falls; President G. R. Wedgewood and Vice-President C. E. White of the Citizens State of Monticello, Minn., and Cashier W. S. Lee of the Merchants State of Elizabeth, Minn. Mr. Lee is to be cashier.

The First National and the Rock Lake Farmers banks of Rock Lake, N. D. have become the First National. Officers of the latter remain as the bank is purchaser of the stock in the combined institution.

Pittsburgh

In a lecture before Pittsburgh chapter American Institute of Banking on "Savings Banks and Trust Companies" Dr. W. H. Temple said that "in the last twenty years the old style savings banks have gradually been superseded by the trust company, which having originally been intended as custodian of trust funds has extended its functions to all branches of the banking field. Under the present Pennsylvania laws the outlook of the true savings bank is not very bright."

Ever since William E. Corey quit the presidency of the United States Steel Corporation rumors have circulated in inner circles of his design to undertake the aggregation of certain plants and interests capable of entering far into the domain of the billion-dollar company. His long experience in the steel business and his loyal friendships among notable colleagues in that pursuit argue his prompt re-entrance and, speculation apart, it can be definitely stated that the opposition is upon the verge of consummating its scheme.

There are 160 chartered institutions conducting a regular banking business in Allegheny county, a decrease of 3 as compared with one year ago. These institutions have a combined capital of $62,122,650, a decrease of 3.03 per cent. Their surplus amounts to $91,846,908, an increase of 2.42 per cent, and their undivided profits amount to $15,839,347, a decrease of 4.50 per cent as compared with a year ago. Dividends paid for the year amounted to $6,599,895, a decrease of 4.25 per cent. The total resources of the 160 institutions doing business foot up $605,756,165, an increase of 1.62 per cent, and the largest total ever reported.

The banks and trust companies located outside of Pittsburgh and Allegheny City seem to have had a more prosperous year than the city institutions. The number of these "country" institutions is 75, being an increase of one over the previous year, and they paid $549,512 in dividends upon $6,712,000 capital stock, being an increase of 3.09 per cent over the previous year. Their resources foot up $52,565,630, being an increase of 6.67 per cent.

As the outcome of a 63-year lease on the old Second Presbyterian Church lot at Penn avenue and Seventh streets, negotiated through the Real Estate Trust Company, represented by S. E. Kingsley, Pittsburgh is soon to have one of the finest and most up-to-date hotels in the country. It will be owned and operated by the Pennsylvania Hotel Company, composed of wealthy New York hotel men, and will represent an investment of approximately $2,500,000, which includes ground rent, equipment, etc.

During 1910 Pennsylvania produced 148,696,776 tons of bituminous coal, the second largest production of any year in the history of the Keystone state industry and in the same period the production of anthracite was 83,269,294 tons, a gain of 3,000,000 tons over 1909, but a loss of 2,787,000 tons, as compared with the high year of 1907.

The Real Estate Trust Company of Pittsburgh has declared the usual quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent, payable April 1st to stock of record March 31st. The dividend amounts to $50,000, and makes a total of $1,790,000 distributed to stockholders since organization.

Completed negotiations have resulted in the amalgamation of the Monongahela Insurance Company of Pittsburgh, with the American Union Fire Insurance Company of Philadelphia.

The Workingman's Savings Bank and Trust Company has declared a quarterly dividend of 4 per cent, payable on and after March 31st.

SUES BANKERS FOR $250,000

Greenfield, Mass., March 30.—Claiming that the respondents, all of whom were members of the finance committee of the Greenfield Savings Bank at the time of its suspension in February, 1900, were guilty of neglect to perform their duties properly, Arthur B. Chapin, savings bank commissioner of Massachusetts, filed a bill of complaint in the supreme court to-day and caused an attachment to be made of $350,000 against Robert Abercrombie, Levi J. Gunn, Charles R. Lowell, William A. Forbes and S. B. Slate.

When the bank was enjoined from doing business it had property values at about $4,000,000. Since that time $288,000 has been charged off as losses on poor loans. It is alleged that these losses will total $500,000. The bill of complaint declares that Messrs. Abercrombie and Gunn received from George N. Rich of North Adams inducements and gifts for an improper loan.

BROWN DENIES RESIGNATION

President Brown has repudiated the Chicago resignation interview. He says: "Some day perhaps I will resign, but that day is not in sight. Continued reports of my forthcoming resignation are very embarrassing to me. Please say once and for all I have no intention of resigning the presidency of the New York Central."

A special meeting of the stockholders of the Independence Trust Company has been called for May 22d for the purpose of submitting to the stockholders the question of the reduction of the capital stock of the company from $2,000,000 to $1,000,000.

The project to establish a national bank at 52d and Market streets has been abandoned for want of local support.

The Girard Trust Company closes a period of seventy-five years of corporate existence. The company has never failed to make and declare a dividend in each year of the seventy-five, and a total sum of over nine millions of dollars has been distributed to its shareholders.

A peculiar condition exists in the money market in Philadelphia in that some banks are loaned up, others report abnormally high reserves, while all admit the increasing slackness in general trade. That the financial district should hear talk of a reduction of money rates under such mixed conditions is only logical.

Pennsylvania Bankers Association will hold its annual meeting in Philadelphia June 13th and 14th. D. S. Kloss, the secretary, lives at Tyrone.

George Burnham, Jr., George B. Harris, Walter F. Ballinger and Albert E. Turner have returned from a trip to Panama and the West Indies.

Graham and Company, Philadelphia bankers, who were awarded $110,000 Lebanon, Pa., bonds on March 6th, have refused to accept them, owing to technical irregularities in the issuing of the securities.

RAIDED BY POSTAL OFFICIALS

New York, March 30.—In a raid on the stock brokerage offices in Fifth Avenue occupied by Wisner and Co., and the Standard Securities Company, post-office inspectors charged that irregularities amounting to more than $2,000,000 had been brought to light. Transactions in excess of $10,000,000 throughout the country, are credited to the two concerns in the last few years.

Archie and Emmett S. Wisner, constituting the ownership of both concerns, and Grover S. Trumbull, chief clerk, were arrested. A United States commissioner held Archie Wisner in $7,000 bail for the federal grand jury, Emmett S. Wisner in $5,000 and Trumbull in $1,500. They were committed to the Tombs. The charge is using the mails to defraud by selling worthless stocks.

The specific charge is that the Wisners, through mail correspondence, represented to stock purchasers that the California Diamond Oil Company was actively at work when, as a matter of fact, according to the charge, the company was dormant and had lost title in 1900 to the property it was claimed to be operating.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, March 29.—Generously optimistic over the business outlook in the East, as well as throughout the Northwest and other parts of the country is George K. March, banker and investor, formerly of Pierre, S. D., who will make his home on Moran Prairie, where he plans to establish a suburban home as soon as he closes his affairs in Canada.

Mr. March, who is one of the four brothers that founded the National Bank of Commerce here, said in an interview there is every indication the country will go ahead now that the uncertainty has been removed by the ruling of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The big corporations also are adjusting themselves to conditions.

"When other great questions, that have caused more or less uncertainty in the past as to the outcome, are settled," he continued, "the country will at once get upon a solid business foundation. The crop outlook is good this year, and on the whole there is no cause for complaint, notwithstanding the strange kind of pessimism that has prevailed in the Atlantic coast states. It was all a big bluff, and is not going to work any more."

Bankers' League

W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National Bank; Thomas H. Brewer, president of the Fidelity National Bank, and B. L. Jenkins, auditor of the Union Securities Company of Spokane, are working out a plan for the organization of a bankers' league in eastern Washington. This would take in more than 100 banks in Spokane, Adams, Whitman, Ferry, Stevens, Pend Oreille and Asotin counties. The sectional associations are needed to get the best results from the state and national associations, Mr. Brewer said adding: "It is difficult for any one section to secure proper representation at a national or state bankers meeting where the sections are not organized and do not work harmoniously."

Cost of Legislation

Bills passed by the legislature of Washington at its session just closed carry appropriations amounting to $9,277,792.39, with the school fund of $2,200,000 and the military fund of $175,000, the running expenses of the state the next two years will be nearly $12,000,000. The chief items are: General budget, $6,598,017; miscellaneous budget, $346,643; improvement of highways, $1,230,000; Lake Washington canal, $186,320; employers' liability act, $150,000; public utilities commission, $118,000; grain inspection commission, $108,000; quarry rotary fund, $100,000; state roads, $94,929.

Distribution of Deposits

Robert Fairley, commissioner of finance, and representatives of the banks of Spokane will meet in April to devise a plan for distributing city moneys for deposit in the various institutions. Edwin T. Coman, president of the Old National Bank, favors a plan whereby each bank should be given a minimum deposit of $10,000, the rest be graded according to the capital and surplus and deposits. This plan takes into account the amount of taxes paid by each bank.

Banks Show Increase

Five banks at Walla Walla, Wash., showed an increase in deposits at the last call of the comptroller of currency, the figures on March 7th being $3,568,753.27 as against $3,564,755.39 on January 7th, a gain of $3,997.88. Cash on hand amounted to $1,491,429.11, a gain of $138,548.37, and loans and discounts were $3,333,581.97, a decrease of $233,344.18. The banks are: Baker-Boyer, Third National, Farmers Savings and First National. The first and last named report more than $2,370,000 in deposits.

Miscellaneous News

Banks in Lincoln county, Wash., report total deposits of $2,350,340, an increase of $23,478 over a year ago, as follows: Davenport, $746,756; Wilbur, $446,802; Sprague, $275,081; Reardan, $232,669; Odessa, estimated, $190,327; Harrington, $174,472; Almira, $137,830; Creston, $66,401; Edwall, $57,499; Govan, estimated, $12,192; Downs, estimated, $10,037.

Mrs. Herman Rogall has instituted an action in the district court of Shoshone county, Idaho, against the Wallace National Bank to recover diamonds valued at $1,100, which her husband gave as part security on a note and failed to redeem the paper. She declares the jewels are her property. In addition to the diamonds of the woman asks for $500 court costs.

Miss Mabel Kinnear, a native daughter of the Northwest, and Roscoe C. Williams, receiving teller of the Exchange National Bank of Spokane, were married at Holy Trinity church on March 17th. Rev. Father O. A. Worthing performed the ceremony. Mr. Williams came to Spokane from New York four years ago.

First National Bank of Conconully, Wash., of which L. L. Work is president, has received $50,000 to be paid to the Colville Indians for the sale of the lands on the north half of the reservation. The First National Bank of Brewster, Wash., also received $25,000 of $1,000,000, which has been deposited in Inland Empire banks.

Captain Percival Smith of Wenatchee, Wash., announced on returning from France and England a few days ago, that he has interested European capital to the extent of $1,000,000 for the investment in the Columbia river valley, adding that the investors will come to eastern Washington this spring to look over the country.

J. A. Harsh of Deary, Idaho, where he is connected with the Latah State Bank, also the First State Bank at Boveille, while in Spokane reported there is much activity in the Potlatch district.

Frank E. Vanderlip, president of the National City Bank of New York and a member of the executive committee of the Union Pacific railroad, is expected in Spokane early in April.

Miss Edith Sorsenson, formerly assistant cashier of the Linwell State Bank at Ray, N. D., has accepted a similar position in the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Malden, Wash.

SUSPENSION OF BANKS

Oneonta, N. Y., March 30.—The First National Bank of this city suspended business today.

The bank has about $800,000 resources and the deposits are about $500,000, with an equal amount of loans and discounts.

Unless there should be a marked shrinkage in the loans and discounts collectable, it is expected the bank will pay depositors in full.

Mobile, Ala., March 30.—Inability to rely on rediscounts was given as the cause for suspension to-day of the Leinkauf Banking Company, one of the oldest banking institutions of Mobile. Harvey Pake was named as assignee.

President W. H. Leinkauf, of the bank, said that stagnation in the lumber and timber trade, which heretofore had been a large part of their business, made it impossible to realize on some of their bills.

Los Angeles

Nearly 160 banks in Los Angeles City and county have an account with the county by reason of the fact that the county has funds to the amount of $3,013,870 on deposit, drawing interest. To secure the county in these deposits the banks must place with the county treasurer approved securities valued at 10 per cent in excess of the money borrowed.

Most of the securities are in the form of municipal or school bonds. The money is drawing 2 per cent interest, a yearly income for the county of over $60,000. The heaviest deposits are made by the county with the Los Angeles city banks.

Los Angeles national bank deposits continue to increase, a gain of $5,189,371 being shown from the comptroller's call on January 7, 1911, to the second call of the year on March 7, 1911. The total deposits are shown in the statement to be $54,709,063. Loans and discounts are $36,053,817, a decrease of $707,655, compared with the amount shown in the last previous statement. Available cash gained $5,554,057, the total on March 7th being $24,435,684.

The Pacific States Finance and Holding Company has just been chartered for the purpose of locating in Los Angeles an insurance company to do a general fidelity, surety and bank deposit insurance business. The officers and directors are well known business men of the Pacific coast. N. Blackstock, president, was formerly railroad commissioner, and for many years on the bank commission of California, is a prominent banker and eminent lawyer. Niles Pease, vice-president and treasurer, is a capitalist of Los Angeles; H. Perk, secretary, formerly of St. Louis. The directors are Carl F. Schader, of Santa Monica; A. Levy, of Oxnard; Frank X. Pfaffinger, Los Angeles; Baird Pallette, St. Louis; F. S. Taggart, St. Louis; F. M. Bruster, Los Angeles; Charles F. Blackstock, Oxnard. The organization is not yet complete.

The Crown City National Bank and the Pasadena National Bank are to consolidate in the near future. No reason for the consolidation has as yet been made known, and both institutions are in a healthy condition. If the proposition goes through the consolidated institution will be a strong one.

Much local comment has been caused by a current report that Wilson B. Evans, the absconding teller of the Farmers and Merchants National of Los Angeles, would not be prosecuted, and that instead of languishing in a miserable jail at Acapulco, where he was captured in so spectacular a manner, with about half of the stolen $20,000 on his person, he is walking the streets of the Mexican seaport town, practically a free man. Officers of the bank deny that there has been a settlement and the federal authorities explain that the long delay in bringing back the fugitive is caused solely by Mexican red tape.

Wallace Wright, a retired banker of Cleveland, Ohio, but still interested in a number of financial institutions there, died here March 19th.

The comptroller of the currency has approved the application for permission to convert the Bank of San Dimas into the First National Bank of San Dimas, capital $25,000. He has also approved the application to organize the First National Bank of Orland, capital $50,000.

San Francisco

The California legislature adjourned after enacting into laws practically all the reforms on which Governor Johnson made his campaign as a "progressive." Among the more important laws placed on the statute books were the following:

Enlarging the powers of the railroad commission; authorizing the physical valuation of railroads; prohibiting the employment of women for more than eight hours a day; the Oregon primary law; the Australian ballot abolishing party emblems; an anti-betting law.

The following constitutional amendments will be submitted at a special election in October: For the initiative and referendum; for the recall of elective officers, including the judiciary; for woman's suffrage; eliminating technical errors as a ground for reversal in criminal cases.

A net shrinkage of five and a half millions in deposits is shown by the ten national banks of San Francisco in their reports to the comptroller, in response to the call of March 7th. The total deposits of the ten banks are $128,254,567, as compared with $133,654,942 on January 7th, the day of the last previous call. Only one bank, the First National, shows a gain.

The decrease is mainly in the item of individual deposits, and is accounted for, in part at least, by heavy withdrawals just before the first Monday in March, for conversion into bonds and other forms of non-taxable wealth. This is a common practice about the time assessment day approaches.

Brainard and Schmick, Ohio bankers, have been released from prison.

ROCK ISLAND'S NEW LINE

Construction of the 68 miles of track from Allerton to Carlisle, Iowa, necessary to complete Rock Island's short line from St. Paul to Kansas City, will be started as soon as the weather will permit, and it is hoped to have the road ready for operation by the spring or summer of 1912.

A new bank has been organized at Hammond, with a capital stock of $100,000. The organizers are J. C. Lavene, W. F. Bridge, J. E. Brennan, W. J. McAlear and E. Minas. The bank will be known as the American National Bank.

Des Moines, March 30.—After a debate that consumed two days and proved one of the most intense of the present session of the Iowa legislature, the senate passed the bill submitted by the ways and means committee of the body relative to the taxation of banks. The bill provides that there shall be a five mill flat tax on moneys and credits. It also provides that bank stock shall be assessed upon 20 per cent of the valuation at the regular rate in the county in which the bank is located. It does not permit the offsetting by deducting indebtedness. The vote on the bill when it was finally up for passage was 40 to 5. Senator Cowles of Burlington sought to amend the bill by providing that bank stock be taxed a flat rate of 12½ mills instead of upon the 20 per cent basis at the regular rate. It was this amendment which stirred up much of the oratory.

Senator Webber of Wapello county backed up the amendment while Senators Adams of Fayette and Hammill of Britt opposed it. They declared that bankers have no more right to expect a special method of taxation than does the farmer or any other business men. Incidentally they declared that bank stock is good paying investment. They declared that the proposed amendment would do away with the local end of a bank assessment entirely. The amendment was finally defeated 16 to 29. The original question was then put up and another debate of a couple of hours resulted. Bankers declared that the proposition to force banks to pay upon 20 per cent valuation without being permitted to deduct their debts is unreasonable. However their influence counted for little when the show-down came. There were several bankers in the senate chamber when the vote was taken. The bill was scheduled to come up in the house this week bankers are well pleased with the five mill rate on moneys and credits and regret that the other provisions were tacked onto what was originally intended to be a meritorious measure.

May be Unconstitutional

There is some doubt as to whether the bill in constitutional. It is probable, if it becomes a law, that a court decision will be demanded. Senator Webber in voting against the measure declared that the bill could not hold water because it provides for taxing bank stock at 80 cents on the dollar whereas other personal property is taxed at the rate of 100 cents on the dollar and that the constitution would not permit the taxing of bank stock on a different basis from other property. Those who voted no on the bill were Senators Dunnegan, Garrett, Malmberg, Taylor and Webber. Those absent were Cowles and Savage. All of the remainder of the senate voted for the bill.

Trust Company Legislation

It is expected that much good will result from the meeting of the trust company officials of Iowa who met in Des Moines last week and decided to organize a state association apart from the Iowa Bankers Association. It is expected that the meeting will stir up the legislators to take some sort of action defining the powers and duties of a trust company. Although the Iowa legislature is almost ready to adjourn, the trust company men believe they have set in motion something that will bring results next session if the legislature should adjourn without taking action this time. Among other things, the financiers want laws which will make it impossible for financial pirates to operate under the name of "trust companies." At the banquet which was held at the Savery Hotel during the session, these interesting toasts were given; "Trust Companies," by William T. Abbott, vice-president of the Central Trust of Chicago; "Importance and Value of Trust Companies in Iowa," by President E. E. Hart, First National of Council Bluffs; "The Trust Company's Business as It Is Now and as It Should Be," by Roger Leavitt, vice-president of the Cedar Falls Trust Company. Short talks were made by Attorney D. J. Lenehan of Dubuque, B. J. Howrey of Waterloo, James H. Whitney of Atlantic. State Auditor Bleakly who was a guest of honor declared himself as enthusiastically in favor of the legislation sought by the trust company representatives.

Postal Savings Light

The postal savings bank at Decorah has proved anything but a success according to the report of Postmaster-General Hitchcock, made public at Washington last week. The report shows that the institution at Decorah is in 40th place in deposits out of the 48 established. The total deposits were but $454 and the average balance per depositor was $28.33. This certainly is not calculated to lead Uncle Sam into the belief that the people of Iowa are very keen for a change in their methods of depositing their earnings.

Bank Loses Suit

The Central State of Des Moines lost out in its suit with B. H. Gavitt, relative to a certificate of deposit held by Gavitt as security on a note given by E. J. Penfield, the missing president of the Bank of Kelley. The court held that Gavitt was an innocent purchaser and that the bank issued the certificate in good faith. Therefore, the institution must make good, says the court. The bank showed that it supposed that a draft on New York, deposited with it for $1,000 by Penfield was perfectly good. Later it developed that it was worth nothing but in the meantime Gavitt had received the certificate of deposit.

Like Iowa Investments

Charles H. Martin of the People's Savings who has returned from the East declares that Eastern financiers are now contemplating Iowa as a rich field for investment. He states that New York banks are accumulating immense reserves and believes that the Middle West is going to reap the benefit when some of the money is invested. So far as general conditions go, Mr. Martin declares that there is a revival of business ahead which augurs constantly increasing prosperity for the American people.

Reynolds Goes East

Arthur Reynolds, president of the Des Moines National has gone to Washington to attend a meeting of the currency commission and incidentally the monetary commission of congress. Mr. Reynolds will probably remain in the East for several days and will stop in Chicago for a visit with relatives en route to his home.

Promptness in Reports

The committee on banks in the senate has drawn up a bill providing the financial institutions who do not get their reports to the auditor of state on the day set will be fined $10

FACTION SENATORS GET TOGETHER

Washington, March 30.—The regular and insurgent republican senators will act together and organize the new senate, with Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire as chairman of the caucus, succeeding former Senator Hale. This has been agreed upon.

The insurgent senators will be taken into the fold and receive recognition on all senate committees. With assurance of liberal recognition, the insurgents are disposed to go into the caucus and abide by the will of the majority, which is made up largely of regulars.

THEY LIKE STATE FUNDS

Some comment has been made recently on the fact that Cincinnati banks, in some instances, offered a higher rate of interest at the recent bidding for state funds to be carried as deposits than they did for city funds. The explanation is a very simple one: State funds, even where offered only as "active deposits," are likely not to be disturbed for a long time, while city deposits are nothing but "checking" accounts, that are not much better than call loans.

Private Bank Supervision

new bill up for passage in the Pennsylvania Legislature at Harrisburg. Text of the new Montana law and summary of the Protection for depositors.

Harrisburg, Pa., March 28.—Pennsylvania has suffered greatly from the incompetency and dishonesty of private bankers and has taken her cue from new Alabama and Montana banking laws putting private banks under state control. In order that private bankers and unincorporated banking companies may be given proper supervision, the purpose being to safeguard the interests of depositors, particularly those of foreign birth who place their funds in private institutions, Representative George E. Alter today introduced a bill providing that such banks shall take out a license and conduct their business under the jurisdiction of the state banking department.

Mr. Alter had the bill drawn chiefly at the request of Baron Forster, Austro-Hungarian Consul of Pittsburgh, who came here for this purpose some time ago. The Baron drew attention to the fact that within the past few years certain private bankers in Pittsburgh, as well as in other parts of the state, who make a business of accepting deposits from foreigners and who conduct a general banking business, have either gone into bankruptcy or absconded with funds entrusted to their keeping. As the question of their financial integrity is entirely a question of their personal honesty, they not being under the jurisdiction of the state or federal banking laws, it is regarded as necessary that they be so placed in order that their depositors be given adequate protection.

Mr. Alter today pointed out that many private banks, especially those of a domestic character, are so conducted that additional safeguards are unnecessary. However, in order to reach that class which has offended against the law it is necessary to include within the provisions of the bill all institutions of this character.

Affects All Banks

The constitution will not permit a law which will apply exclusively to private bankers of foreign birth, or others whose business is confined to citizens of such nationality, therefore his bill is general in its character, and, if passed, will make it necessary for all private banking institutions to secure a license from the state commissioner of banking and be subject to such supervision as is set forth in the measure introduced to-day.

Mr. Alter's bill provides that before receiving a license the applicant shall file with the commissioner of banking a statement given under oath showing the amount of assets and liabilities, "designating the place where the applicant proposes to engage in business, the names and addresses of all partners or members of the unincorporated association; that the applicant is a citizen, or, if the applicant shall constitute a partnership or unincorporated association, that a majority of the members thereof having a controlling interest in the business are citizens of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania. Such applicants shall at the same time deposit with the commissioner of banking $10,000 in money or securities, which shall consist of bonds of the United States, of this state or any municipality thereof, approved by the commissioner of banking, and if a deposit of security shall be so made in lieu of $10,000 in money, the commissioner of banking shall thereafter require the applicant to maintain such deposit at all times at a value which shall equal the sum of $10,000.

Must Give Surety Bond

In addition thereto there shall be presented to the commissioner of banking a bond to the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, executed by the applicant and by a surety company approved by the commissioner of banking, conditioned upon the faithful holding of all moneys that may be deposited with the applicant, in accordance with the terms of the deposit and the repayment of such moneys so deposited and upon the faithful transmission of any money which shall be delivered to such applicant for transmission to another, and in the event of the insolvency or bankruptcy of the applicant, upon the payment of the full amount recoverable under the conditions of such bonds of the assignee, receiver, or trustee of the applicant, as the case may require, for the benefit of the persons making such deposit and of such persons as shall deliver money to the applicant for transmission to another.

It is provided that the penalty of the bond shall be fixed by the commissioner of banking and to be not less than $10,000 nor more than $50,000. Provision is made for the advertisement of the application and the commissioner is given discretion to approve or disapprove the application. Licensees shall keep books of account, showing complete records of business transactions, statements of assets and liabilities, which shall be reported twice a year to the commissioner. Licenses may be revoked within 24 hours after notice in writing to the holder.

Those not Affected

Moneys received for transmission to a foreign country by any licensee must be transmitted within five days from the receipt thereof. Such requirement shall extend and be applicable separately to each and every private bank conducted by any person, co-partnership or association, and no asset or assets shall appear on the books of more than one bank.

Private Banks to be Examined

When any such petition is filed as herein provided no suggestion shall be contained therein as to the person to be appointed by said court to act in such capacity. Receivers of all such insolvent banks appointed under the provisions of this act shall conduct said bank so taken charge of under the supervision of the state examiner and the state examiner shall take such steps with reference to said bank as he shall think advisable, either to close up the affairs of said bank in accordance with law, or to place said bank in a solvent condition. The receiver herein provided for is subject to the same restrictions and liable to removal for a dereliction of duty whenever the court may deem it advisable so to do.

Receivers may be Appointed

Section 10. The receiver provided for in this act shall receive such reasonable compensation as shall be ordered by the court and in no event shall such compensation exceed the fees allowed executors and administrators in the administration of estates of deceased persons under the laws of this state.

Section 11. The actual and necessary expenses, and the sum of ten ($10.00) dollars per day shall be allowed the state examiner for the performance of the duties imposed by this act, which shall be paid in full by such bank under investigation for the time actually spent in making such investigation and in going to and returning therefrom.

Section 12. If the state examiner, or his deputy, shall fail to perform any duty imposed upon him under the provisions of this act, or if any person or the members of any co-partnership or association, shall violate any of the provisions of this act, they shall be guilty of a felony and shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for a term of not more than five years.

Section 13. Any person, or the members of any co-partnership or banking association, wilfully or knowingly receiving deposits, money, or commercial papers, circulating as money, when such person or co-partnership or banking association is insolvent, or who subscribes or makes any false statement, or entries in the books of any such bank or who knowingly subscribes or exhibits any false papers with the intention of deceiving any person authorized to examine the condition of any bank provided for in this act, or who wilfully subscribes or makes false reports to the state examiner, shall be guilty of a felony and shall be punishable by imprisonment in the state prison for a term not exceeding five years.

Section 14. All acts and part of acts in conflict herewith are hereby repealed.

Section 15. This act shall be in full force and effect from and after July 1, 1911.

Credit. By J. LAWRENCE LAUGHLIN, of the Department of Political Economy, University of Chicago. Postpaid, 53c.

The nature of credit and its effect on prices have long been a subject of disagreement among economists. Its basis is commonly assumed to be money or bank reserves.

Essentials of Business Law. By FRANCIS M. BURDICK, LL. D., Professor of Law in Columbia University. 12mo. Postpaid, $1.50.

This book shows how the rules of law governing the commonest business transactions have been developed, and it tells what they are to-day. Technical law terms have been discarded as far as possible, and when they are used they are so explained and illustrated as to be easily understood. The principles of law are simplified and expressed in clear, lucid everyday speech.

THE CHICAGO BANKER,
407 Monadnock Block, Chicago.

SEEKS A CHICAGO HEIRESS

G. A. Herolz, a banker and real estate dealer of Linton, N. D., expects to find a woman in Chicago who is heiress to an estate valued at between $35,000 and $40,000. The woman is an aunt or a sister of Patrick Gahan, 65 years old, who died intestate in San Diego, Cal., on December 15, 1910, and, among other property, left $6,000 in cash in Herolz's bank in Linton. Herolz knows very little about the man who banked with him. Twenty-five years ago Patrick Gahan arrived in Linton practically penniless and took up a claim, he said. He prospered steadily and lived quietly. The only personal matter he would talk of was his experience as a soldier in the Civil War. Once, however, he mentioned to Herolz that he had a sister or an aunt in Chicago, but her name was not learned.

Association headquarters in the Rookery Building. Many of the portraits included in this list are known by numbers, by aliases, and also by names, the latter being very often fictitious. Rewards are offered aggregating several thousand dollars for the burglars who broke jail at Monmouth after having been captured for the Swan Creek bank robbery; also for burglars who escaped from the sheriff's posse captured after making an attack upon a bank at Walnut, Ill., and for a forger who is working a little game on members of the association within the state.

PICTURES and full details may be had at association headquarters and the rewards offered total $3,300 which ought to be attractive to professional thief catchers.

IN addition to all the above, the state association is offering a reward of $2,000 for the capture of the robbers who held up the First National of Blue Mound in Macon county. These circulars besides aiding in capturing these criminals ought to prove an incentive to isolated country banks toward taking out additional burglary insurance. Many of the banks which have been robbed recently are located in flimsy buildings which are used for other purposes as well as banking and neither the building nor the safes in use afford much protection against daring, skilful operators. Burglary insurance is the answer to the whole question so far as the bank is concerned.

BLOOMINGTON has had a successful bank consolidation merging the Third with the First National with intention of using the latter title in the future. D. M. Funk is the president of the consolidated institutions, Geo. L. Parker is the vice-president, and C. W. Robinson, vice-president and cashier. This makes the First National the largest institution in the city.

THE enlarged bank will have a capital and surplus of more than $650,000. It is among the oldest of Bloomington's well-known banks, has always been prosperous, and the Third National which it absorbed has had a successful career.

"BACK to the soil" has received quite an impulse in McLean county by a recent transaction in acres. C. K. Ream of Chicago has just purchased 960 acres, all in Gridley township, for $220,800. This gives Mr. Ream ownership of 2,300 acres, all located in two townships of that county. The property is valued at more than one half million dollars.

NOTHING is stated in the news of this transaction as to what Mr. Ream's intentions are but the belief down around Bloomington is that the entire property will be used for farm purposes under the most skilful director who can be found in the country. The soil conservation committee of the Illinois Bankers Association probably would do right well to add Mr. Ream to their long list of big farm owners in this state. Much good might come of it.

FROM a down-state farmer we get rather a pessimistical inquiry as to just how far the patent fertilizer companies are responsible for the present conservation movement in the Illinois Bankers Association. It is pretty certain that up to the present time they have had nothing to do with it. That they are quite anxious to be included is very evident. Those who have the welfare of the movement most at heart are fully aware that if private interests are too much injected in this thing, it will prove to be a failure and fall of its own weight.

R. W. WIGLE who for ten years has been an assistant cashier in the First National at Boyne City, Michigan, has left that position to accept the cashiership of the Big Rapids Savings Bank. This notice has been sent out officially by S. C. Smith, cashier of the First National at Boyne City.

GEORGE L. RAMSEY has resigned as president of the Union Bank and Trust Co., Helena, and has been elected chairman of the board. The directors passed handsome resolutions with "best wishes for Mr. Ramsey's future success in whatever enterprise he may decide to direct his activities," just as if the board chairmanship was only "a bouquet?"

NEW officers were elected as follows: S. McKennan, president; A. P. Curtin, vice-president; Frank Bogart, vice-president; R. O. Kaufman, cashier and secretary, and C. B. Pfeiffer, assistant cashier. The directors of the bank will be: B. F. White, president First National of Dillon; R. S. Ford, president of Great Falls National; A. P. Curtin, of Helena, merchant; R. C. Wallace, of Helena, president of the R. C. Wallace Company; Hon. Joseph K. Toole, former governor of Montana; Horace Elling, of Virginia City, manager estate of Henry Elling; S. McKennan, president; Frank Bogart, vice-president, and George L. Ramsey, chairman of the board of directors.

FIFTH-THIRD NATIONAL, Cincinnati, shows resources in excess of $25,000,000. Since the date of the merger the Fifth-Third has justified all promises by making a fifty per cent increase in deposits. June 1, 1908, they were twelve millions and now they are nearly nineteen millions. Edward A. Seiter is a vice-president, having advanced from the cashiership on merit. Charles A. Hinsch, the president is one of Ohio's best known bankers. Monte J. Goble is cashier.

J. F. DAVIS, western manager of the Winton Motor Car Co., has sent out notice from his Chicago office that hereafter Winton experts will call on Winton owners once each month to look over and adjust his car free of charge. New parts when required will be furnished at cost. Even if you bought your car from a neighbor this offer goes. So if you have a Winton get on the list at once and enjoy life.

WASHBURN (ILL.) BANK (Chas. H. Ireland and Co.) opened in their new banking room, March 25th. Open house was kept from 8 A. M. to 10 P. M. and a crowd was present most of the time. There were an orchestra and a refreshment booth in continuous performance.

THE slight decrease in San Francisco bank deposits as compared with a year ago, is accounted for by the fact that the latest call came just at tax-assessment time, when deposits had been temporarily withdrawn for the purpose of conversion into non-taxable forms of wealth. Significant features are the large proportion of cash means to deposits, indicating an ability to expand credits materially should the need arise.

WILL LIVINGTON COMFORT has the long story in April Lippincott's. "The Rising Road" is title of this full sized, finished novel. Can you beat it for 25 cents?

P. V. GOSHEFF, aged 38, private banker, saloonkeeper and realty dealer of Granite City, was instantly killed last week as he was entering his saloon at Olive and Pacific streets in that city. He was shot three times by Karl A. Mitsareff, his "partner" in the bank and in the saloon.

THE murderer is a known fugitive from justice in his own country and he and his victim were the representatives for the Macedonian Banking Association of New York, which, it is said, failed for nearly $1,000,000. Members of the Macedonian colony had on deposit about $75,000 with the branch in Granite City, and there was bitter feeling at the time. The two men received many threatening letters, which were turned over to the police. Mitsareff declared he had lost $30,000 in the venture and accused Goshoff of embezzlement. Goshoff was arrested and jailed at Edwardsville. Goshoff's wife, after he had been in prison awhile, arranged $1,000 bond for her husband. The case is still pending.

UNDER a modern banking law such as recently was adopted in Alabama, now up for passage in two other states, these thugs could not have opened a "bank" and duped depositors out of $75,000 to quarrel about. More's the pity!

FIRST STATE BANK, Elkhart, Ind., is in its new bank building and enjoys it hugely. The public thronged the place opening day and indicated its approval.

CASHIER.

TAKES POSITION IN HAYTI

E. A. Weber, cashier and office manager for Peabody, Houghteling and Company during the past two years, has accepted the position of treasurer and auditor of the National Railroad of Hayti, and left this week with his family for Port Au Prince, which is the capital of the Haytian republic.

Mr. Weber is a native of Indiana, formerly residing at Columbia City where he had one year's experience in the First National bank of that city. Afterwards he studied law in the office of Governor Thomas R. Marshall, and was admitted to the bar. Coming to Chicago, he entered the trust department of Central Trust Company of Illinois, remaining two years, and leaving Central Trust to go with the Chicago office of Hornblower and Weeks in their bond department.

The National Railroad of Hayti at the present time operates about 30 miles of standard gauge steam railroad. This system when completed contemplates a mileage of 350 miles or more to connect all the principal seaports with the capital and the interior of the island. The important products of the island are coffee, sugar-cane, sea-island cotton, bananas, and dye-wood. At present the trade is largely with Nova Scotia and France. The island, which is the second largest of the West Indies group is just off the east coast of Cuba. The National Railroad is being constructed by a New York financial syndicate, of which W. R. Grace and Company, are the managers. Mr. Weber is a son-in-law of L. D. Skinner, assistant cashier of Central Trust Company of Illinois.

CORN PRODUCTS DEAL

The Corn Products Refining Company, the so-called $80,000,000 glucose combine, has begun the manufacture of candy as a side line. It has obtained control of the Novelty Candy Company, whose output is to be greatly increased. To this end the Novelty Company's plants in Jersey City, Pittsburgh, Memphis and Chicago are being enlarged. However, the statement is made that the Corn Products Refining Company will confine its operations to the cheaper grades generally known as glucose candies.

L. T. SOUTHER A VISITOR

Latham T. Souther, cashier of Sangamon Loan and Trust Company, Springfield, was among recent callers at Western Trust and Savings Bank. Retail business and collections are good in the Springfield region. Money is easy and financial people are in a comfortable frame of mind.

Over 70,000,000 acres of coal land in the West is still owned by Uncle Sam.

Executive Council

The administrative committee of the American Bankers Association, consisting of President Watts, Vice-President Livingstone and Chairman Huttig, held meetings in Washington March 27th and 28th, being in attendance at the sessions of the currency commission of the association.

To the administrative committee was referred the matter of arranging the details for the council meeting, and Nashville and the fine new Hotel Hermitage were visited recently by General Secretary Farnsworth with a view of arranging for the various meetings. In addition to the regular sessions of the council, there will be sessions of the various committees of the association and the sections, on Monday, May 1st. The council meeting being held in the home city of President Watts, it is the determination of the bankers and the board of trade of that city to entertain those present, such entertainment to be arranged so as not to interfere with the business sessions which will be important and in keeping with the necessities of the occasion.

Many of those who will attend these meetings will arrive on Sunday, April 30th, there being a special train de luxe over the New York Central from New York City which will provide for the bankers from New York and vicinity as well as from New England. The Pennsylvania Railroad System also has placed at the disposal of the bankers, who wish to go from the east and south, its best train service, and the accommodations for which this road is noted, both in its equipment and in its schedule. From Chicago there will be a train de luxe over the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railway, leaving Chicago at 6:20 p. m., Saturday, April 29th. This train will care for the bankers from that vicinity and the Northwest and is due in Nashville at about 8 a. m. on Sunday.

Following is the program as outlined:

Sunday, April 30th—Automobiles for sight-seeing through the beautiful country surrounding Nashville, over its magnificent turnpikes.

Monday, May 1st—Committee meetings.

Monday evening, 7:30 o'clock—Banquet at Hotel Hermitage with the compliments of the hotel. Address by James B. Forgan of Chicago on Banking and Currency Legislation and the Aldrich Plan. (Informal.) Talks by others to be called upon.

Tuesday, May 2d—Sessions of the executive council at Hotel Hermitage.

Tuesday evening—Reception and dance at the residence of President F. O. Watts.

Wednesday, May 3d—Sessions of the executive council at Hotel Hermitage.

The Nashville Clearing House Association will have automobiles at the Hotel Hermitage at all times for sightseeing, and especially during the days of the council meetings, to provide for the ladies; making trips to the Golf Club, and the famous Hermitage, the home of Andrew Jackson.

SWIFT ATTACHE DIES

Secretary Hartwell, of Swift and Company, died Saturday last.

Northwestern Elevated's March daily average was 124,741 passengers or .43% increase.

Fort Dearborn National in Own Building

Above is the executive department showing officers' desks and part of main banking room.

To the right is shown the directors' room, said by many to be the finest in the city.

VISITING bankers frequently pronounce the new Fort Dearborn National's new home to be a model bank building. Its counting room excites the warmest praise and for security, comfort and convenience many doubt if it ever has been surpassed. Built for the American Trust, it for a short time held both it and the Continental National. After the Continental-Commercial alliance the fine building was purchased by Fort Dearborn interests. The Fort Dearborn Trust Co. will occupy the first floor and the Fort Dearborn National the next three floors. The bank has had a rapid growth under its present officials who are: Wm. A. Tilden, President, Nelson N. Lampert, Vice-President, J. Fletcher Farrell, Vice-President, Henry R. Kent, Cashier, George H. Wilson, Assistant Cashier, Charles Fernald, Assistant Cashier, Thos. E. Newcomer, Assistant Cashier.

Money Inactive

Money stagnation is reported at nearly all Chicago banks. Rates have remained easy at 4 to 5 per cent for commercial loans and about 5 for real estate loans. Some call loans on listed securities are reported at 4 per cent. Bonds are fairly active and steady. Bankers say that more activity is expected as the new crops approach maturity. Mercantile trade is abnormally dull and improvement comes slowly.

Forgan to Speak

While in Washington, President James B. Forgan gave his promise to deliver the "orator of the evening" address at the council banquet at Nashville. He will go down with the Chicago Special, over the C. & E. I. and like most of those going will take his wife. The train is purely de luxe and the guests will be returned in the same equipment. The Nashville program is printed in this issue.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

FRANK D. BRUNDAGE, handshaker for the K. N. & K. Company, New York, was in Chicago this week on his way to the Arkansas convention. His busy season is on now—from now until the last one in the fall.

CITIZENS SAVINGS & TRUST COMPANY of Cleveland, has issued a new edition of "Growth," the handsomest booklet on hardy shrub gardening ever seen. It shows how to get "growth" and almost perpetual bloom in the garden. It tells all about the care of hardy flowers and how to make your color combinations. Write for a copy.

SECRETARY FROST of Minnesota keeps his members posted on the legislative situation with a well arranged file of bills in which bankers are interested. All hear, also, that he is very clever in his direct work with the legislators. Judgement and discretion count for much in such matters.

MR. FROST has given much time to urging the passage of the regular uniform bills prepared by Attorney Paton of the A. B. A. Besides the bills named, the superintendent of banks has introduced in the senate, S. F. No. 678, a bill which provides for increasing the number of bank examiners, and for other additions and improvements in the banking department. Since the new bank department bill was passed there have been organized 97 new state banks, which involves considerably more work for the department.

ON the Back to the Soil movement Mr. Frost writes his membership that: "You undoubtedly are aware that the Minnesota Bankers Association through its officers and executive council, has been making a strong effort to improve conditions in our rural schools, especially with reference to increasing the facilities for teaching scientific agriculture and other industrial subjects. Your committee offered quite valuable assistance in procuring the passage by the house of the Holmberg bill, House File No. 210, and also in getting the senate committee on education and finance to recommend the same for passage by the senate. This bill provides for the formation of consolidated schools and provides substantial state aid for all classes of such schools. We have also done considerable work in connection with the Putnam agricultural high school bill, which is an amendment of the same bill introduced at the last session, increasing the number of such high schools and broadening the scope of their work."

AUSTIN (TEX.) NATIONAL is sending out nice, shiny postals showing its new bronze and marble banking room. It is strictly high grade and up to date.

WE are having trouble with our Mexican war correspondent, Señor Woodruff di Joliet, U. S. A. He now is at Tijuana and instead of insurrectos he writes of senoritas and illustrates his letters, not with battle scenes but with pictures showing a gaudy red and yellow matador teasing an emaciated maverick. The whole thing will have to be "revised and rejuvenated."

DAILY newspaper headlines are telling us "New York stocks have another dull day." Authorities say, however, that conditions are favorable for an advance later on, whenever the uncertainties are out of the way and confidence in the ability of business to proceed legally, is restored. Large sums for investment are waiting for this same clearing-up. With stocks in strong hands, money easy, and credit conserved by reason of long continued liquidation of enterprise, temporary disturbances should be met without much disturbance.

ED. T. KEARNEY, over at Jackson, Nebraska, calls his institution "The Bank that Treats You Right," and offers a standing reward for any who can show that the bank ever treated him wrongly. That's pretty good stuff and he means it.

IN a letter, celebrating his bank's 25th anniversary, Mr. Kearney says: "On April 14, 1886, the writer opened, in a modest way, the doors of 'The bank that always treats you right,' has been with it ever since, and this month—is our quarter centennial. Its doors have been open each business day, every dollar due has been paid on demand and no legitimate loan been refused. There have been no land foreclosures, but one chattel mortgage closed and one or two petty justice suits, yet less than fifty dollars have been lost in all that time through bad notes."

"TWENTY-FIVE happy, prosperous years have passed. The bank has made some money for its owners, but more for its customers. It has paid out nearly one hundred thousand dollars to its depositors, in interest, has helped to place and keep many on their feet and destroyed or hindered none."

MR. KEARNEY promises to continue, with sleeves rolled up, to help all who want help and to keep up his high moral and business standard.

OUTING MAGAZINE, until May 1st, will give two subscriptions for the price of one. Get a copy and send one to a friend. It will make two happy, hearty out-door men out of both of you. You can't beat it.

PUBLISHERS frequently speculate as to the actual importance of book reviews to the public, the author and themselves. To judge this question under the most complete conditions by securing to one of their new publications criticisms unquestionably candid and adequate. The Bobbs-Merrill Company have devised a prize review contest. The Prodigal Judge, by Vaughan Kester, published March 11, 1911, is the book chosen for the purpose, because it possesses unusual interest and offers special opportunity for the exercise of critical judgment.

CASH prizes of $500 will be given for the best review and, between friends, J. A. S.

Pollard can "cop the coin" if he wants to do it.

APRIL letter from Northwestern National, Minneapolis, calls attention to the fact that "North Dakota has strengthened its banking law by making further provision for more complete examination and supervision. It is evident that the people in the Northwest are awake to the proper safeguarding of their banks, with which, in their business relations, they come more closely in touch than with any other interest."

SAME authority also says that, "The enterprise and determination resulting in better laws as to bank supervision, which is continually being evidenced in the Northwest, might well be used as an example in states which were well developed in other ways when the business of the Northwest was in its primitive stages. Montana has just placed herself on record as a state which is developing along modern lines, by passing recently a law requiring specific amounts of capital for private banks, with the assets representing such capital definitely apportioned to each particular institution and such requirements as to examination and reports to the state examiner as practically place the banks on the same basis as regular incorporated institutions. Minnesota, North Dakota, and South Dakota have no private banks, and each meeting of the legislature witnesses continued efforts to correct any existing undesirable features. New laws are introduced from time to time to further strengthen the banking situation."

HERE is notice to Joseph Chapman, Jr., to Mabel S. Doud, to Fred A. Crandall, et al., that in sending in printed-on-both-sides copy to publishers, to send always two copies. Waukesha papers please copy with notice to Andrew J. Frame.

THAT was a fine two-acre table the Western Trust sent out showing "who's here" in the banking line and how they arrived. One of the dailies said "Joseph E. Otis prepared the tables" but we shall have to see the original films. Ah there! Corneau?

ON March 31st, Frank P. Judson retired (officially) from the firm of W. T. Rickards & Company, but we fail to see the justification for that company sending out notice (part in caps) that "you are hereby notified not to honor his signature on any documents pertaining to the business of this company."

IF this is an attempt to be merely formal, all right, but if it is a slap at Judson we can name without the book an army of good bankers who will resent it seriously. If there be one among you little likely to transgress in such like matters his name is Frank P. Judson.

WC. POWELL has resigned the presidency of the Fourth National, Jacksonville, Fla. John E. Harris was elected to the position. Oscar E. Dooley, so long with the American National, at Macon, Ga., becomes a vice-president.

Advocates New Banking Law

Bankers Association in a strong plea for a better banking law at Little Rock convention

President George R. Wood of the Arkansas

This is the twenty-first annual meeting of the Arkansas Bankers Association and I congratulate you that you now are of lawful age, and I hope, sound in mind and body. I am pleased with the large attendance and the zeal and enthusiasm of the members and believe much profit and pleasure will be had from the meeting.

The cordial, hearty and generous welcome which has been extended to you by the bankers and good people of our capital city should make you feel at perfect ease and allow you to get down to the work to be done at this meeting. It is customary for your president to deal in facts and figures upon the state's resources, its possibilities, the enormous aggregate value of its products, the vastness and extent of its undeveloped resources, the demand for, and safe employment of large sums of outside capital, the need of greater and better railroad facilities, the erection of manufacturing plants of all kinds, our almost inexhaustible timber resources, the value, extent and profitableness of our rice fields, the money we get from agricultural and horticultural products, the fabulous wealth in our mountains of zinc and other minerals, but I will refrain from entering this domain, for I believe it is known to nearly all civilized, English speaking people that Arkansas is one of the greatest, (if not the greatest) states in the Union. It has more to offer in the way of varied resources, navigable rivers, good water, unexcelled climate, good schools, good citizenship, good government, law-abiding and God-fearing people, sociable and warm-hearted friends than any other state. "Arkansas on Wheels" has done and will continue to do a great work for our state.

The railroads in the state are doing effective work in the way of advertising and exhibiting our great resources. Outside capital is pouring into the state, going into lands, manufacturing plants, new and better houses. Capital is no longer afraid to enter our borders. Our school, drainage, levee, water and other public utility bonds are eagerly sought after. Within five miles of my home town, which includes the great city of Fort Smith, within the ninety days just past, nearly one and one-half million dollars have been invested in water, bridge and levee bonds. If we had more of these and similar securities to offer the financial world much good could be done with the money thus derived.

I believe the state, counties, cities and municipalities should be given greater latitude and broader powers in the way of creating bonded indebtedness for legitimate and needful improvements.

If the beautiful state capital building which adorns one of the hills of our capital city, could have been built by a two and one-half or three million dollar bond issue the burden would be borne by present and future generations. It is all right to do a spot cash business, but I doubt the wisdom of pauperizing the present in favor of future generations.

The banks of the state never were in a more prosperous condition. They are loaded with money, deposits are large, the people are happy and prosperous. Peace reigns supreme not only in the state, but throughout the nation. The mobilization of government troops on the Mexican border may mean a great deal, possibly the annexation of Mexico. I do not know what it means, but it certainly looks like business.

At the meeting of the state association held in Ft. Smith last April, it was decided, by a narrow margin, to hold this year's meeting at Eureka Springs. At a meeting of the executive council held in the city of Little Rock on February 20th at which every member of the council was present, after a thorough and full discussion of the reasons offered, the council decided to change the place of meeting from Eureka Springs to Little Rock, and I hope the action of the council will meet with your approval. The principal reason for making the change was the hope that the bankers throughout the state would take advantage of the occasion and visit Little Rock while the legislature was in session and meet the senators and representatives from their respective counties and discuss with them the wisdom or lack of wisdom of putting into effect as enacted laws many of the bills now pending before the legislature. It occurs to me that it is possible, and the time is opportune, for this legislature to make itself one of the most memorable and praiseworthy ever assembled in the state. There is much that should be done and much that should be left undone. The enactment of laws liberal and friendly to capital would do much to upbuild and develop the state. By this I do not mean that railroads, the targets of law makers and law enforcers, should not be compelled to inaugurate and maintain a live and let live policy nor that they should be taxed to death or legislated out of existence. I am not here to plead the cause of the railroads, but I sometimes think they get the short end of it. It is right and proper to prevent and regulate exorbitant charges in passenger or freight rates, but there may be a limit beyond which even the railroads cannot go. The tendency is to look with disfavor upon corporations of all kinds. This may not be always for the best, for it is in the aggregation and concentration of capital that many of the great and good things of the day are made possible. Without the aggregation of capital there would not be a regularly organized national or state bank in Arkansas today. Regulate and keep within proper limits all corporations, but do not, by legislation, stifle, cripple, suppress or exterminate those which are useful and needful to the development and upbuilding of our state.

If we accomplish the ends hoped for by changing the place of meeting to Little Rock it will be necessary for every member of the association to make it his special duty to see their members and urge them to give us a good banking law. The whole tendency of modern business thought is towards publicity of the affairs of corporations and others who are debtors of the public. Without exposing in any way the relations of an institution with its own patrons, or giving publicity to private affairs, the interested public is entitled to know the quality and amount of assets and the nature and extent of the liabilities of any concern inviting and enjoying public confidence, hence the imperative necessity for the enactment of a good, sound banking law. At this time there are two bills pending in the Arkansas legislature, the Deaton-Turner bill in the senate and the Warnock bill in the house. The senate bill is practically the bill prepared by the banking laws committee of the Arkansas Bankers Association, and the Warnock bill, up to Section 62, is nearly an exact copy of the senate bill. The senate bill has never reached a vote, hence we do not know what will be its fate at the hands of that body, but the fact that it has not reached a vote does not inspire us with confidence. The Warnock bill has passed the house and is now up to the senate where it may sleep the "sleep that knows no waking." For the bankers of the state to favor the Warnock bill would be to favor the depositors' voluntary guaranty law. Personally I am not in favor of a guaranty law, but rather than fail in securing some kind of a new banking law, I believe I would accept it. As I understand the Warnock bill, I think it is optional with the banks as to whether they will avail themselves of the guaranty feature. A failure to do so, however, would inpose upon the stockholders a three time liability clause, which, at first blush may seem a little severe, but if the stockholders have a bank whose transactions they are not willing to guarantee, they had better get out of the business. The bank with which I am connected is a state bank, and it is a good one, so good in fact, that I believe the stockholders would willingly say to the public, yes, we are willing to be held personally responsible to the extent of three times our holdings, for the transactions of the bank. If you have a good bank, and are running it upon safe lines what do you care in how much you are bound? If a man comes into your bank to borrow money and is not willing to go his own security, by pledging his property, you had better let him alone, and you should be willing to guarantee your work. Do not understand me as being in any wise favorable to any kind of a depositors' guaranty law, for I believe it is wrong in principle and unjust in its workings, but I do want some kind of a banking law. Our neighboring state, Oklahoma, is going through the crucial test on the depositors' guaranty law, and to an outsider the experience does not seem to be favorable to it. On March the 3d the state banking board levied an emergency assessment of one per cent on the average individual deposits of all the state banks, for the purpose of creating a special fund to be placed to the credit of the guaranty fund of the state. The assessment is effective at once and will yield approximately $500,000.00. It is believed that many of the banks will refuse to meet the levy, and it is declared that in anticipation of this levy a number of the state banks, during the past two or three months have become nationalized and a number of others have their arrangements made for following the same course. Information which comes to the federal authorities is to the effect that banking conditions in Oklahoma under the state system are decidedly unsatisfactory.

GEORGE R. WOOD

Van Buren, Ark.

President of Arkansas Bankers Association

For several years our state association has said it favored the enactment of a good banking law and has whereased and resolved upon the question, but when the next legislature convened and the time came to do something, the bankers themselves defeated the passage of any kind of a banking law. There is no sound argument against the enactment of a good banking law. Every man, woman and child in Arkansas (except some who are engaged in banking) are in favor of it. All legislation along monetary lines by the national congress is favorable to the national banks and if the state bankers do not encourage and procure the passage of a good banking law, they will lose out, finally. Their depositors and public sentiment will discriminate against them to such an extent that they will have to nationalize or go out of business.

The postal savings bank is no longer a theory; it is now a condition and has come to stay. The first two months' experience of the forty-eight banks recently established in this country was very satisfactory to the postal department. The deposits in these banks in the two months amounted to $133,869.00. At this ratio the deposits at the forty-eight offices after one year's operation will exceed $800,000.00. In view of the successful operation of the system during the first month, Postmaster-General Hitchcock recommended to congress the appropriation of a million dollars to be immediately available for extension of the system. The act of congress provides that the funds received at the postal savings depository offices in each city, town, village or other locality shall be deposited in banks located therein (substantially in proportion to the capital and surplus of each bank) willing to receive such deposits, and that any bank, whether organized under national or state laws, subject to national or state supervision and examination, may be legally qualified as a depositor for the postal savings fund. There is no doubt in my mind but that the number of postal savings banks will be largely increased, and I fear the bankers will be surprised when they discover how much of their deposits they have absorbed. If thirty or forty thousand of these banks should be established just think what an enormous aggregate their total deposits will make. As the system grows and is extended I believe the five hundred dollar limit will be expanded or entirely removed.

The conditions which confront us in the way of monetary legislation by the national congress, such as the extension of the postal savings system, the adoption of the Aldrich bank plan, or some similar plan, are such to make it imperative on the state banker, at least, to throw around himself and his business all the safeguards a good banking law would give.

The panic of 1907 put all the ablest financiers of the country to thinking and trying to devise a plan or system which will prevent the recurrence of another such calamity. Several plans have been suggested and from all of them it is hoped some good plan will result. Without a state bank law and supervision and inspection it will be impossible for a state bank to become a depository for the postal savings funds. With a state bank law the state banks will be on an equal footing with the national banks.

There are many other laws that should be passed for the benefit of the people and the good of the banks. Among them I will mention:

A uniform negotiable instrument law; a law making it lawful for a notary public, who is a stockholder, to take acknowledgments, etc., under certain conditions; a law relative to the payment of deposits made in trust; a law making it a felony to make a false statement in order to obtain credit; a law to punish persons making or circulating derogatory statements affecting banks; a law to punish the giving of checks or drafts on banks when the person so giving shall not have sufficient funds; a law relative to the payment of deposits made in two names, the acquittance of either to be good; a law fixing the liability of a bank to its depositors for payment of forged or raised checks, fixing a limit, and a law defining the crime of burglary with explosives and providing the punishment therefor.

The belief that the enactment by the present session of the legislature of a good banking law, is the paramount question before this meeting, must be my apology for devoting the principal part of this address to that subject.

I will not attempt to give you an account of my stewardship. The report of our most worthy and capable secretary will give you information upon the growth and condition of the association. I thank you for the assistance rendered to and the uniform courtesy shown me.

GROUP FOUR'S ANNUAL

It was found to be impossible Tuesday night to determine the time and place of Group Four's annual meeting.

It was decided that Messrs. Stevens, Scheidhelm and Jackson should see the other North Shore bankers and determine whether the meeting should be held at Ravinia Park or at Evanston, on a date that would conflict as little as possible with other meetings.

A party of twenty enjoyed the banquet at the Sherman and the theatrical performance later in the evening. Frank D. Brundage, assistant manager of Knauth, Nachod and Kuhne, New York City, was a guest of Group Four.

DETROIT BANKERS HERE

H. C. Wiedeman, president, and S. F. Walsh, one of the directors of the new Metropolitan State Bank of Detroit were callers at LaSalle Street National the fore part of the week. Much interest surrounds Detroit's new banking enterprise, which starts with a capital of $250,000 and surplus of $125,000. It has excellent prospects.

VISITOR FROM SIOUX CITY

W. L. Montgomery, vice-president of First National of Sioux City, was a visitor at National City Bank, Chicago, the fore part of the week. He reported good crop prospects and a fair general business, with a downward tendency in the price of agricultural products.

Five men broke in the State Bank at Hudson, Kan., and carried off $4,600.

By C. C. Burford

The season of the year when the farmer is active is at hand. Oats sowing is about completed and farmers are soon to begin work on the preparation of the soil for corn, that great staple crop of Illinois. More wheat will be raised in some localities than heretofore. So far it is thought that the fruit crop is safe. The recent season of wintry weather will do much toward delaying the progress of the buds and just this sort of weather has been needed. Several fruit growers in the neighborhood of Springfield have expressed the belief that the fruit buds are safe so far.

Good judges of farming conditions deplore the fact that farmers insist on burning corn stalks and other substances which plowed under would make excellent food for the coming crop. The work of the Illinois Bankers Association on soil conservation is sorely needed and bankers throughout the state can do much to aid this movement. On the front elevation of the agricultural building at the University of Illinois are these words, "The wealth of Illinois is in her soil and her strength lies in its intelligent development," and "Industrial education prepares the way for a millenium of labor." Farmers and bankers have a great work before them.

Attempt to Rob Waggoner Bank

Yeggmen added another chapter to the criminal story of Illinois when they attempted to gain access to the interior of the vault of the bank at Waggoner, a village a few miles north of Litchfield. Two charges of nitroglycerine were applied to the vault but the yeggmen lost their courage before gaining access to the interior of the vault and escaped. Citizens arrived and a posse of farmers and townspeople was quickly formed to pursue the bandits. The bank will lose nothing but the damage to their vault door.

Moline Has Gigantic Corporation

The city of Moline is known as far as agricultural implements are used. The new steel plow manufacturing corporation, which will be the immediate future expansion of Deere and Company, involves a merger of twenty-two concerns and branch houses with a capital of $50,000,000. The charter for the new corporation extends over ninety-nine years.

New Bank at Albany

State Auditor McCullough has issued a permit to S. B. Dinond and others to organize the First Trust and Savings Bank of Albany at Albany, Whiteside county, with a capital stock of $25,000.

Chatsworth Bank in New Home

The new home of the Commercial National bank, of Chatsworth, was thrown open to the public April 1st and it was thronged with patrons and friends who extended their best wishes to the directors and officers. They in return showed their appreciation by giving souvenirs and cigars to the men, flowers and souvenirs to the ladies, and candy to the children.

The new building has a substantial front of buff Bedford cut stone. The interior is fitted with circassian walnut, Royal red marble and U. S. standard solid bronze grilles and guard rails, all of high ceiling, heavy ornamental plaster special patterns and designs. With its beams, artistic decorations and neatly arranged fixtures and furnishings, the arrangement of the offices all makes the interior very attractive.

The new vault is one of the latest improved type of re-enforced steel and concrete, lined on the inside with heavy steel plates and combines all the features of safety and convenience that modern ingenuity can suggest.

Took Land for Grocery Bills

While most grocers in Illinois would be very glad to accept rich corn belt land in payment of amounts of money due them, it is not the rule for any of them to be so favored. However, William Redhed, a wealthy land owner and bank director of Tolono, acquired considerable of his landed interests in payment of grocery bills due him as a pioneer merchant. During his early life in Tolono, where he has lived for over fifty years, Mr. Redhed was forced to accept swampy land in southern Champaign county which at that time he was often loath to take. Those were the days when "everything drowned out" and land was worth but little. Times are different now and Mr. Redhed's land is an almost priceless heritage to his children. He is the heaviest stockholder in the Citizens National of Decatur and a director in the First National of Urbana.

The Illinois Traction System has let contracts for the construction of its line from Morris to Joliet and efforts will be made to have the line in operation by next October.—The surveyors for the St. Louis, Peoria & Northwestern railway company have been in Pekin for the past several days, being engaged in surveying the route for the proposed line between Peoria and Girard. The line will cross the La Marsh drainage district and the whole length over this district will be a grade about twenty feet high. A steel bridge will be built over the Illinois river. It is said that the company proposes to establish transfer yards southwest of Pekin about two miles. The line is being built principally for heavy freight traffic, altho a passenger service will also be given.

A KANSAS CITY OPTIMIST

President E. F. Swinney of First National of Kansas City was a caller at Continental-Commercial National Monday, Kansas City is experiencing the common trade depression, which keeps money stagnant, but President Swinney is optimistic as to the later months of the year and for the future generally.

Banking Opinion

"This trade depression may come to an end in a few weeks now," said Vice-President Ralph Van Vechten of Continental-Commercial National to a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER Thursday.

"There is every indication of big crops and the country is bound to prosper when the farmers are getting big returns. The nation is on a sound basis and dull times are not likely to last beyond midsummer, if they do that long.

"There is no reason for losing confidence. The causes of the depression are temporary conditions. I predict the usual activity for the fall months."

Wet Weather is Encouraging

Wet weather, which has been splendid for farmers, has prevailed over the Central West for more than a week and in that time it is believed that practically every square mile of this district has received a soaking of rain or snow. The business situation has been featureless but there has been a steady undercurrent of strength.

"Normal business is reported from the country," said J. R. Dominick, president of the Traders National Bank of Kansas City, "and I would say that conditions generally are satisfactory. It is too early yet for much activity among cattle feeders, but after April 10th, I look for a strong demand for money. There has been very little variation in either loans or deposits in Kansas City or Omaha during the past ten days. All our bankers appear to be in good spirits and the widespread rainstorms have been fine for the farmers."

Predicts Trade Revival

President James F. Sullivan, of the Market Street National Bank, Philadelphia, who recently returned from a trip abroad, had this to say of the business outlook in Europe: "I found business better in England and on the Continent than in the United States. A representative of a large steel manufacturing company of this country, who was traveling on business in Europe, told me that he found the same condition of affairs that I noted. I was surprised to see that extensive building operations are going on in Madrid. I believe this country, in view of the abundance of money and the low rate of interest, will shortly witness a revival in all kinds of business enterprises."

The interior of the Farmers and Merchants Bank at Gibson City is being renovated and remodeled.

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER By Mortimer I. Stevens

WISCONSIN

Business conditions in Milwaukee are reported generally good and this is further evidenced by the daily bank clearings which are running a trifle ahead of the clearings for the same period a year ago. Collections at the various banks are reported as satisfactory. The demand for loans is about normal for this time of the year. Considerable activity has been noted of late among the leading manufacturers, notably in the iron and steel trades, and in one instance a large machinery manufacturer, employing several hundred hands, reports that they are already running behind in filling orders.

Country banks are reported to be in excellent condition and are carrying unusually large balances with their city correspondents.

Although early to predict the crop returns for 1911 weather conditions have been such as to justify the presumption that they will be fully as good if not better than for 1910.

Bond salesmen who are returning from points out in the state report a good demand for the better grade of securities and are very optimistic concerning the summer and the fall trade.

Shows Large Increase

According to a report issued by State Bank Commissioner A. E. Kuolt, the state banks and trust companies of Wisconsin showed great prosperity at the close of business March 7th.

There were on that date 425 state and savings banks, an increase of seven to the number of January 7th, the date of the last report.

Their total resources and liabilities March 7th, were $16,743,506.72, an increase of $4,444,906.11 over the amount given January 7th.

The total deposits on January 7th were $14,071,500.51, an increase over the deposit on January 7th of $3,365,430.38. This is considered to be the real proof of the banks' prosperity.

Eleven trust companies in Wisconsin on March 7th listed their resources and liabilities at $11,186,744.68.

Bank Changes Announced

Changes in Wisconsin banks were recently announced in the treasury department at Washington as follows:

American National Bank, Marshfield, P. M. Christianson, vice-president; vice E. E. Winsh.

Marine National Bank, Milwaukee, A. H. Lindsay, E. H. Williams, cashier, vice A. H. Lindsay; G. W. Moore, assistant cashier, vice E. H. Williams; C. D. Prentiss, assistant cashier.

Assist Agricultural Department

According to Secretary George D. Bartlett of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, arrangements have been made to co-operate with farmers throughout the state in improving the quality of crops. The association has already secured the promise of a quantity of pure seed from the Wisconsin Agricultural College, and it is expected that the first contest will be held during the coming summer.

Secretary Bartlett will endeavor to start at least one contest in each of the seven banking groups of the state outside of Milwaukee. It is the intention of the association to furnish the seed to some enterprising bank in each one of the groups. These banks must agree to secure at least one hundred contestants among the farmers in their respective sections. In the fall awards will be made. The agricultural college has promised to send professors to act as judges in these contests and these men will also award the prizes and deliver a lecture on the best method of increasing crop yields.

Yeggmen Sentenced at Hudson

The secretary of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, George D. Bartlett, received word on Tuesday of this week that the six yeggmen who have been on trial at Hudson recently have been found guilty, their argument for a new trial being denied. Five of the six have been sentenced to Waupun Penitentiary for ten years each. Frank Smith was the sixth man but has not as yet received sentence, the judge wishing to investigate his character before pronouncing same. These six men were arrested in Hudson two months ago and a quantity of nitro glycerine and complete burglars' outfit was found in their possession. They came into Wisconsin from Minnesota and it is claimed that they intended to burglarize a bank a short distance east of Hudson.

An attorney was provided by the Wisconsin Bankers Association to assist in the prosecution, and through the association the previous records of these men were established justifying ing the court in giving them the full penalty under the law.

The six men convicted gave the following names: Frank Daniels, alias "Francisco Danny"; George Williams; John Howe; Frank Mulvaney; John Webb and Frank Smith.

Considerable credit is given to the police authorities of Hudson for their prompt arrest of these men.

To Increase Penalty

The Wisconsin Bankers Association is fathering a bill to lengthen the sentence for bank burglary in this state. Under the present law twenty years is the limit for this crime and the association wishes to have the term increased from 25 to 40 years. A week ago officers of the association went to Madison for the purpose of conferring with the legislature in regard to the introduction of such a measure and it was learned that a bill had already been passed cutting down the burglary sentence from a maximum of 20 years to a maximum of eight years. This shortening of the sentence it is claimed, is the result of the parole law which makes it impossible to parole prisoners who are sent up for more than ten years. Bankers however, are anxious to have the burglary sentence lengthened believing that a long time sentence will do more toward preventing crime of this character in this state than any other possible method.

North Dakota it is said, was overrun with yeggmen two years ago, eleven banks having been broken into within a few weeks. The legislature of that state made the penalty for this crime more severe and since the new law went into effect there has not been a bank burglary reported in that state.

Park Trip Excites Interest

Judging from the number of inquiries, concerning a proposed trip by special train to Yellowstone Park of Wisconsin bankers immediately following the state convention in July, which are being received daily at headquarters, it now looks as though this trip may assume more definite proportions than merely on paper. Already a number of bankers have asked for further particulars and have signified their intention of taking this trip if they can possibly arrange matters at home so as to spare the time. With still a little over three months to lapse it is now thought that instead of one car, two and possibly three may be necessary to convey the Wisconsin party.

The Wisconsin Banker and Secretary Bartlett of the Wisconsin Bankers Association are taking care of the minor details connected with this trip and judging from the good time enjoyed by those who occupied a special train en route to Los Angeles last fall it will prove to be one of those trips never-to-be-forgotten.

Wisconsin Banker for Half a Century

Herman Erb, president of the First National Bank of Appleton, recently celebrated his 50th anniversary as a banker. Mr. Erb commenced work in the Outagamie County Bank at Appleton on March 26, 1861, and upon the failure of that bank became associated with the First National Bank of Appleton, November 14, 1870, retaining the position of cashier and signing every official report of that bank for forty years until elected president of the institution upon the death of H. D. Smith and being succeeded by the present cashier, George H. Utz.

Mr. Erb comes from a family of bankers, his father having been a banker in the old country, and he is to-day one of the active business men of Appleton.

The First National of Appleton has deposits of nearly two and one-half millions and is recognized as one of the strongest banks of Wisconsin.

Wisconsin Legislative News

Under the heading of "The Secretary's Corner" in the April number of the Wisconsin Banker, the official publication for the state association, the legislative measures pertaining to banks and now pending at Madison, are summed up as follows:

Twenty-four bank bills have been introduced in the senate and sixteen in the assembly. The latter body has already passed the bill prohibiting loans on bank stock of certain banks and prohibiting loans on real estate except in Wisconsin and adjoining states and the bill which prohibits loose-leaf books of original entry. The bill requiring all directors of state banks to be residents of Wisconsin has also been passed.

Bills providing for additional examiners' fees, increased fees of commissioner and deputy and for increased payments by banks for examination fees, have been reported for passage by the assembly committee and are now in the hands of the finance committee, who seem to object to the increase in the salaries of the commissioners.

The Crowell bill providing for the segregation of savings deposits and the Binner bill authorizing cities to conduct savings departments, and also the Long bill relating to the liability of stockholders of banks, have been recommended for indefinite postponement by the assembly committee.

Senator Owen's bill providing for the guaranteeing of deposits has not been reported upon by the senate committee and very little talk is heard among the members of the legislature concerning this bill.

Paragraphs on Wisconsin Banks

Cashier W. K. Smith, of the Oconto National Bank was a visitor in Milwaukee recently.

United States secret service agents are busy in Milwaukee endeavoring to locate the person or persons who are circulating counterfeit $20-bills, counterfeit bills of $5 and $10 denominations are also said to be in circulation.

The First National Bank of Shullsburg has been selected as a Wisconsin state depository by the state board of deposits. This institution has recently added $3,000 to its surplus of $62,000.

The Commercial Bank of Chilton was recently organized in that city with a capital of $25,000. The following officers were elected: President, F. G. Eggerer; vice-president, Henry Paulson; cashier, A. C. Kingston; directors, F. G. Eggerer, Joseph Hanart, Henry Paulson, O. L. Dorschel; A. J. Steffes; Walter J. Kroehnke and R. C. Hugo. A new building will be erected immediately for this bank.

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

Considerable difference of opinion exists among St. Louis bankers as to the condition of the money market. Certain institutions report a fairly brisk call, while elsewhere there are complaints of slowness in the inquiry for all classes of loans. Certain it is, however, that the week has developed no marked improvement in general business. While no one can explain just why things are quiet, the fact remains that there is a holding back which is curtailing the volume of transactions in nearly all lines, and this is reflected in slightly reduced clearings. Total clearings for the month of March were under those of a year ago, and last week's aggregate was less than that of the preceding week or of the corresponding period in 1910.

It is agreed that conditions are fundamentally healthy, much more so than at any time since the last panic, but some extraordinary factor is needed to infuse life and produce industrial momentum. Thus far the demand from the country for spring agricultural purposes has been unusually light. Banks handling this class of business report shipments of currency and gold smaller even than last year. Country banks appear well able to handle the crop needs with their own resources, and as a result the reduction of balances of rural institutions at this center has not been on a parity with the last ten year average. The complaint is that business is routine, routine, with no new enterprises nor anything out of the usual to stimulate a demand for money. Activities absolutely necessary to life and existence and the conduct of daily economy are being financed, but this is so easy to do that surpluses are not vanishing, and rates remain painfully low—that is from the banker's viewpoint. Prices of all food products are declining, and this is especially true of cereals. In the local market wheat touched the lowest point since 1907, and indications are for still lower levels. The flour trade is stagnant. Another barometer, the lead and spelter market, points to quietness. Values in that line have not declined so much, but the trend is downward and demand extremely slow. Deposits are holding their own fairly well, and reserves with all leading banks are high.

Equitable Surety Company

The Equitable Surety Company of St. Louis, one of the largest concerns of the kind in America, obtained a charter this week from the Missouri State Insurance department. The capital stock is $1,000,000, all of which is paid up. This company was organized early this year, and the organizers include some of the most powerful men financially in the West.

James E. Smith is president. The directors are Edward Mallinckrodt, C. H. Huttig, B. F. Edwards, R. E. Maloney, Thomas M. Pearce, George T. Priest, H. C. Haarstick, A. T. West, J. E. Smith and J. S. Humphrey. The headquarters are in the Third National Bank building.

Veteran Banker Passes On

Francis Kuhn, organizer and for many years president of the old Chemical National of St. Louis, died this week after a long illness. Mr. Kuhn was born in the Province of Lorraine, France, but had been a resident of St. Louis since 1858. He was interested in numerous enterprises here, and organized the Anthony and Kuhn Brewery, which was absorbed by the St. Louis Brewing Association.

Beggs Comes to St. Louis

John I. Beggs has severed his official connection with the Milwaukee Electric Railway and Light Company, a North American property, and come to St. Louis to begin his work as president of the St. Louis Car Company. Mr. Beggs is a director in the Third National, and was formerly president of the United Railways Company and Laclede Gas Light Company of this city.

Cuts Capital Stock

The American Bakery Company, at its annual stockholders' meeting this week, voted to reduce the common stock from $2,000,000 to $1,000,000. Only two stockholders voted against the proposition. The date for calling in the surplus stock for cancellation was not fixed. No dividends have been paid on the common stock since the organization of the company, about four years ago, and the reduction is expected to pave the way to some payment to common shareholders in the near future. The company has $753,300 preferred stock outstanding, on which an annual dividend of 7 per cent is being paid. There are also $1,000,000 6 per cent bonds.

Building Fairly Active

Building operations in St. Louis for the month of March, according to the report of Building Commissioner Smith, were more than $2,000,000, which shows an advance over the corresponding month a year ago. Statisticians in Mr. Smith's office say the increase is as large as that shown by any other city in the United States. Reports indicate that many cities will show a falling off. This is in a measure accounted for by the fact that banks and trust companies in other parts of the country have been placing their money in other securities. Here money for building purposes has been very easy to get, and the rate of interest has been comparatively low. It has been possible to secure money at from 5 to 6 per cent, according to security.

Frisco Bonds Listed

About the only feature on the St. Louis Stock Exchange this week was the listing for trade of $7,000,000 St. Louis and San Francisco General Lien 5 per cent gold bonds. This is the French series, and was listed here in response to many demands, there being extensive holdings in St. Louis and the tributary territory. Bank stocks have been extremely strong, though dull. National Bank of Commerce and Bankers Trust both scored goodly gains, and St. Louis Union Trust made a new high record price, selling on Monday at $437.50. Mechanics-American National and Third National shares have been in excellent demand, with offerings almost nil.

Independent Telephone Stocks

Stocks and bonds of the independent telephone companies had another spurt of activity and strength, Kinloch Telephone being most affected by the strength. The rise in price of this stock is attributed in certain quarters to the activity of interests associated with J. P. Morgan and Company. Efforts have been made to purchase all the floating stock in the market. The Morgan house has evolved a scheme for merging the independents and St. Louis is the pivotal city in the consolidation. Control of the Kinloch Long-Distance Telephone Company, which owns the Kinloch Telephone Company is held by a group of trustees. This pool has fought the Bell interests tooth and claw, and will be loath to surrender control at any price to any interests which might dispose of it to the hated Bell Company.

Club Banquet

A note of pathos and sadness marked the banquet of the Chicago Bankers' Club last Saturday evening. This gathering was the last of the season for the club, and a ladies' night had been planned. The banquet was held at the Blackstone hotel and drew the largest company that the club has entertained for many months.

"A message from across the sea has left me heartbroken and the sorrowful task of writing. I had hoped to clasp your hands in friendship and now must not cloud you with my grief, but ask your prayer that my waiting may not be in vain."

This message from Mrs. La Salle Corbell Pickett, widow of the late Gen. George C. Pickett, the Confederate general who was the leader of the famous charge in the final battle of Gettysburg, was read by President Goddard and caused a rearrangement of the program. Mrs. Pickett had been invited to be the guest of the evening and to tell tales of the old South. The message announced the probable fatal illness of Maj. George E. Pickett, U. S. A., who is stationed in the Philippines, and the inability of the mother to come to Chicago from Washington, D. C.

"For weeks I have been looking forward with pleasure to meeting you and your friends and telling you stories of my Southland and of my soldier, who is your soldier, too, for he was appointed to West Point from what was the Third district of Illinois, through the influence of your great statesman, Abraham Lincoln," said Mrs. Pickett in her letter to President Goddard. "The Virginia boy, studying law under his uncle in Quincy, Ill., met Mr. Lincoln, then practicing law in that city, and the friendship then formed was not broken by the lapse of years or the stormy time that brought death to the martyred president and to the soldier a melancholy fame engraved on the scroll of honor.

"The stories of my old South, of the old plantation days, and a people unto themselves such as the world never will see again, of the old black mammies and daddies who belong to a yesterday that has no dawning tomorrow, I had hoped to give you. Now I send you a copy of the cable that has broken my heart."

The accompanying cablegram was from the Philippines to the war department at Washington concerning the illness of Maj. Pickett.

It stated that Maj. Pickett's illness probably would terminate fatally within a few days. It was dated March 29th.

However, there was no lack of good features. In place of Mrs. Pickett's part on the program Benjamin Chapin gave impersonations of Abraham Lincoln. Mr. Chapin is an extremely tall man and has other characteristics which make him closely resemble Abraham Lincoln. He dressed exactly as the war president did and for an hour and a half held his audience spellbound as he presented scenes in Lincoln's stormy career. He gave the Lincoln speeches and stories with fine dramatic effect.

Carter's Carolinians, four men and three women, rendered plantation and jubilee music, winning unstinted applause. This was supplemental to the excellent work of the orchestra.

At Pierre, S. D., articles of incorporation have been filed for the Loyalton State Bank at Loyalton, Edmunds county, with a capital of $10,000, incorporators, Henry Brown, John H. Mohr, Albert C. Munson, cashier of the American Exchange Bank of Pierre, has purchased a controlling interest in the bank at Quinn, Pennsylvania county.

NOTICE OF BOND SALE

The Hood River Irrigation District, Hood River, Oregon, will sell $70,000.00 completion bonds at the office of its secretary on April 17th at 2 p. m. The irrigation District is not a Carey Act project but is organized and operates under state law practically the same as a school district. These bonds bear 6% interest, semi-annual, are retired in 20 years, and are a first mortgage on the lands of the district, and a prior lien against the lands to everything else. The District has been operating 5 years and must now complete its system. The lands within the District are mostly bearing orchards and strawberry fields, and were last year assessed for state and county taxes at $820,701.00. Further information will be furnished by

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

The committee chosen to formulate a program for the joint meeting of the Missouri and Kansas Bankers associations in Kansas City May 24th and 25th, has made a report. The convention will be called to order at the Willis Wood theater by A. O. Harrison, president of the Missouri Bankers Association. Following the invocation by the Rev. J. B. Silcox of the Westminster Congregational church, an address of welcome will be delivered by Mayor Darius Brown of Kansas City. After the routine business of the day which will include reports of committees, election of officers, etc., an address will be made by E. R. Gurney, vice-president of the First National Bank of Fremont, Neb. In the evening in Convention hall Franklin MacVeagh, secretary of the treasury, will speak, as will also Davie R. Francis of St. Louis on "Kansas from the Viewpoint of a Missourian," and by W. J. Bailey, of Atchison, on "Missouri from the Viewpoint of a Kansan." The following day F. O. Watts of Nashville, Tenn., president of the American Bankers Association, will make an address on "The American Bankers Association." The second day's program will also include an address by Judge Charles E. Lobdell of Larned, Kan., and William H. Burgess of El Paso, Tex. In the afternoon of the second day Judge I. P. Ryland of Kansas City will make an address, after which there will be an installation of officers.

Clearing House Election

The Kansas City Clearing House Association held its annual election Tuesday, April 4th. John F. Downing, president of the New England National Bank, was re-elected president of the association. P. W. Goebel, president of the Commercial National Bank of Kansas City, Kan., was chosen vice-president and Jerome Thralls, was re-elected manager. A clearing house committee was chosen of which Mr. Downing and Mr. Goebel were made members ex officio, the other members being E. F. Swinney, president of the First National Bank; J. W. Perry, president of the National Bank of Commerce and Walton H. Holmes, president of the Pioneer Trust Company.

Nebraska Guaranty Law

Judge T. C. Munger of the federal court at Lincoln, Neb., has received the mandate of the supreme court of the United States in the Nebraska bank deposit guaranty case. This mandate is official authority for the enforcement of the guaranty law in Nebraska. The case came before the district court at Lincoln in October, 1909, on suit brought by fifty-four banks of the state against the governor, auditor and treasurer, seeking an injunction against the enforcement of the law. The case was heard by Circuit Judge Van Devanter sitting with Judge Munger. The appeal was taken directly to the United States Supreme Court, which handed down its decision sustaining the law and reversing the lower court.

The bank guaranty law will be going into effect in Nebraska just as soon as details of the arrangement can be worked out by the state banking board. The most important feature of the administration of the law in its early stages will be the action taken by the board with regard to the payment of the sums which should have been placed in the hands of the board for the state banks in the last two years. The injunction of the district court prevented the collections of these sums. The law provided for the collection of installments of the guaranty fund from the state banks at various times in 1909 and 1910 and the collection of smaller amounts in 1911. Whether to call in the full amount of all that should have been paid in at once, or to proceed to collect the guaranty fund in the same amounts and at the ends of the same periods of time as provided for in the bill is the matter that the Nebraska board must decide.

Southwestern Miscellany

A telegram from Los Angeles informed the people of Tulsa, Okla., last week that D. F. Andrae, former cashier of the Farmers National Bank of Tulsa had been arrested at Glendale, Cal. The charge was falsification of accounts to the comptroller of the currency. The bank with which Andrae was connected failed about a year ago and he was called upon to make certain statements to federal officers. It is alleged that he reported that Eugene F. Blaise, the president, owed nothing to the bank. Later it is alleged, it was discovered that Blaise was indebted to the bank to the extent of $3,500. It is understood that Andrae will fight removal to Oklahoma.

Editorial Comment

ADVOCATES THE NEW ARKANSAS BANKING LAW

In forwarding to this paper for publication his annual address at the Little Rock convention, George R. Wood, president of the Arkansas Bankers Association, apologizes for devoting so much of his time to the advocacy of a new banking law for his state. His state association has taken the same position that was taken by the Alabama Bankers Association prior to the passage of their admirable new law. The new law for Montana was pushed through by the state association, and all who have given attention to the matter will remember that the new banking laws in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, and Indiana, were secured in the same way. There has been a very deep awakening to the interests of the public as well as of the bankers on the subject of state supervision and regulation of all forms of banking. In Illinois, however, this new doctrine seems to have been pretty well submerged by a powerful element in the state association which has placed private profits above public good.

It was intended originally to hold this year's state convention of the Arkansas bankers at Eureka Springs, but following in the footsteps of their friends in Alabama, the executive council changed the place of meeting to Little Rock and the time of the convention to the time when the legislature is in session. This was done so that the convention might discuss a number of bills now pending, the chief one of course being the one giving to the state a new banking law. Among other things the bankers hope to have a few bills passed a little more tolerant towards corporations and railroads. These interests have been very much crippled, in some cases exterminated, by populist legislation in the past. Mr. Wood came out with a very positive declaration that the public is entitled to know the quality and amount of assets, and the nature and extent of the liabilities of any concern inviting and enjoying public confidence. This good doctrine he applies quite as strongly to banking as to any other form of semipublic business.

At the present time there are two bills pending in the Arkansas legislature,—the Deaton-Turner bill in the senate and the Warnack bill in the house. The former is the bill practically as it came from the banking law committee of the association, and the latter is largely a copy of the same. Up to date the opponents of these measures have succeeded in preventing the senate bill from even coming to a vote on first reading. In the lower house the bill has passed and is up to the senate where it is feared it will meet the same fate that thus far has met the Deaton-Turner bill. The bill which has passed the lower house has a guaranty clause attached which makes it unpopular with the bankers.

Mr. Wood in closing his admirable argument, which is printed in full elsewhere in this edition, defied anyone to present a single sound argument against the enactment of a good banking law for the state. In favor of a sound banking law he arrayed every man, woman, and child in Arkansas "except some who are engaged in banking." From this it would appear that they have in Arkansas as in other states some bankers who believe that they can make larger profits without state supervision and publicity than they can make with it and this probably is true. Mr. Wood's annual address is a very able document and should be read and studied by every banker in favor of putting banking business in an absolutely safe and responsible condition.

COST OF LIVING DECLINES

One of the unmistakable signs of the times is that the cost of living is declining. This fact is made clear by the depressed prices of grain, live stock and clothing. These are large items in the average family's expenses.

There is encouragement in this condition for all who have felt the burden of high prices in recent years. It is probably true that many laborers will be compelled to work at reduced wages in the next year and if this proves to be the case it will be fortunate indeed for them if they are able to buy the necessities of life more cheaply.

Experienced dealers in live stock declare that the price of pork and beef will be lower next year than at present and there has been something of a decline already. Large crops seem to be assured for the season now opening and if farmers produce corn next fall on anything like the scale of last year prices are sure to continue on a low level. All the indications are that the country will raise more wheat than it did last summer. This also is a guaranty of low prices for foodstuffs.

The mere statement of these facts does not argue that a majority of Americans will permanently gain from the lower rates on farm products. It is important to know, however, that if the railroads and mills are to pay lower wages in the next twelve months or more the working people will be able to get along about as well as they have in the past.

For the middle class in all cities the prospect of a drop in living expenses will be hailed as a blessing.

GROWTH OF BANKING IN CHICAGO

The advance of Chicago in banking and financial importance is shown in a clever table sent out by the Western Trust and Savings Bank, late last week. The tables cover the years from 1896 to the present time and to those who haven't been keeping up on such things will be rather startling. The effect of the big bank consolidations is shown accurately in a way one would have thought scarcely possible. In the fifteen progressive years under review deposits of the national banks of Chicago have increased from $120,187,765 to $452,642,062, a gain of 276 per cent. Still more striking has been the gain of the state banks, their deposits increasing from an aggregate of $80,843,075 in 1896 to $452,800,312 at the date of the call of the state auditor, March 8, 1911, a gain of 460 per cent.

In the number as well as in the size of resources the table shows interesting changes. Back in 1896 there were 25 national banks in the city. Of these four were liquidated and thirteen merged into other banks, and three changed their names. Of the original number the Calumet National, First National, First National Bank of Englewood, Fort Dearborn, and National Bank of the Republic continue to operate under unchanged names. The Corn Exchange National Bank in 1898 sprang from the Corn Exchange Bank. There are now fifteen national banks operating in the city. At various times since 1896 there have been forty. Fifteen years ago there were nineteen state and private banks doing business. Of these the following have continued business without change of name: Chicago City, Hibernian Banking, Illinois Trust, Merchants Loan and Trust, Northern Trust, State Bank of Chicago, Union Trust. Since then there have been organized fifty-one new state banks. Of the seventy, twenty-two have dropped out of existence through merger, liquidation, or change of name, and there are now forty-eight in active operation. The merger of greatest extent has been that resulting last summer in the Continental and Commercial National Bank. Directly absorbed by the old Continental National since 1896 have been the Globe, International, and National Bank of North America, and part of the deposits of the American Trust and Savings Bank. Chicago is to be the center of the Aldrich plan propaganda and is the center of 70 per cent of the strength of the American Bankers Association. If we are to have a "Central Bank" it most certainly will be located here.

INDICATION OF BUSINESS

The Carnegie Steel Company has notified all clerks who are able to do so, to take their vacations before July 1st. This is taken by many as an indication that the management of the steel corporation expects a resumption of activity during the summer months.

True to its Name—

The founders of the Northwestern National Bank exercised foresight in selecting its title.

The growth of this bank has been continuous and sturdy, and today the scope of its activity is "northwestern" in the full sense of the term.

With correspondents throughout all the territory from Chicago to the Pacific, and in Canada, exceptional facilities are offered for handling the business of the Great Northwest.

For Texas Trade

In the last six years The Chicago Association of Commerce has paid official visits through duly appointed delegations to every state in the union west of the Allegheny mountains, save one, and that is Texas. Four years ago, sixty people, representing twenty-six towns in Texas, visited Chicago and were the guests of The Chicago Association of Commerce, and on that occasion Chicago was invited to send a delegation on a return visit at an early date. The invitation was officially accepted and a promise given that a return visit would be made at the earliest possible moment. From year to year this visit has been postponed for various good and sufficient reasons, but the Trade Extension committee this year has decided to make the trip April 15th to May 1st.

Fifteen or twenty Chicago bankers will be in this excursion and some of them will be called on to speak. In many important details this tour will be unique. It will be distinctively a Texas trip, no stops will be made either going or coming outside of the state of Texas. The train will be made up of the finest equipment obtainable, and will run on a special schedule with a special crew and special service throughout. Each delegate will be given a special compartment, and compartment sleeping cars alone will be used. Instead of the usual dining car service, the delegation will carry its own crew and its own commissary, with a special lounging car where the delegates may hold meetings en route.

While the program for each city varies according to the local conditions and the individual attractions of each locality, the general scheme followed is that one-half of the business hours spent in each city are to be given over to business purposes, the delegation being left free as individuals to call upon the trade in their respective lines, while the balance of the time the delegation will be the guests of the local business organization which will escort the visiting Chicagoans on a tour of inspection of the industries and other points of interest best calculated to show the resources of each community. Where time will permit of an evening visit banquets have been arranged and other forms of entertainments planned.

Business Manager Miller, reporting to the Trade Extension committee on his preparatory tour said:

"Governor Colquitt of Texas will join the delegation at Austin en route to San Antonio, where the governor is to be the guest of honor at the annual 'battle of flowers,' and the delegation has been invited to occupy the governor's reviewing stand as guests."

FOREIGN EXCHANGE MARKET

Discounts in London have tightened from 2 per cent a week ago to $2\frac{1}{4}$ and $2\frac{3}{8}$ for sixties and nineties, respectively, this week. In Germany money rates are easier, having declined from $3\frac{3}{8}$ to 3 per cent. In Paris conditions are unchanged at $2\frac{1}{4}$ per cent for both 60 and 90 days' sight bills. Sterling exchange is stronger, demand being quoted at $4.86\frac{1}{4}$; 60 days at $4.84\frac{1}{4}$; bankers' demand francs 5.20; 60 days $5.21\frac{7}{8}$; bankers' demand marks 95 1-16; 60 days 94 9-16.

NO DISCOURAGEMENT THERE

Samuel H. Lockin, cashier of First National Bank of Red Wing, Minn., was a visitor at First National of Chicago Tuesday. Mr. Lockin is in a position to know what the feeling is among Minnesota farmers and business men. He states that crop prospects have greatly improved since the recent fall of snow and rain. The acreage of flax will be enlarged and perhaps that of wheat also. There is no discouragement among the progressive people of the Northwest.

William J. Burns

Chief William J. Burns of the Burns National Detective Association left on Thursday night to address the Arkansas Bankers Association on American Bankers Association protective measures and policies. Burns is a good number on a state program being nearly as good a talker as he is a detective. He gives many valuable pointers and makes suggestions which avoid many troubles in the conduct of banks. He became nationally and world-wide famous as a thief catcher and his plan now is to tell bankers how to keep out rather than how to get out of trouble. His Little Rock talk was along these lines. Mr. Burns has been invited to visit Nashville at the time the executive council has its meeting.

GERMAN BANKER IN CITY

Curt Kaufmann, an official of Bank of Commerce and Discount, Berlin, is spending a week in Chicago. Mr. Kaufmann stated to a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER that it is becoming more and more difficult for the German government to carry forward its policies owing to the strength of the united agrarians and clericals. There is a general demand for a lessening of the cost of living, and this is made to reflect on the government. Some moderation in tariff duties is called for. But regardless of politics business is good and the banks are on a sound basis.

DAKOTA BANKER IN TOWN

Frank E. Duba, cashier of the Belle Fourche State Bank, Belle Fourche, South Dakota, visited Chicago Monday.

P. M. Joice, formerly banker at Lake Mills, Iowa, is dead at St. Paul, 51 years of age.

Little Rock Convention

Little Rock, Arkansas, April 7.—The attendance at the twenty-first annual state convention of the Arkansas Bankers Association was the largest in the history of the organization. This partly is to be accounted for by the fact that the legislature is in session and that the bankers came from all over the state in hope of being able to induce the state legislature to give to the state an adequate banking law. The state banks of Arkansas, not being under supervision and inspection, cannot hope to become depository institutions of the new postal savings banks established by the government. The state has been handicapped for all of these twenty-one years in securing outside capital because of adverse banking conditions within the state.

The convention was held in the Hotel Marion, and proceedings opened promptly yesterday morning at 9 A. M. with the meeting of the executive council. This body made a hasty review of the two days arrangements and provided for having as many legislators attend the session as possible. At 10 o'clock the convention proper was called to order by President George R. Wood of Van Buren. The address of welcome was made by Judge E. A. McCulloch, Chief Justice of the Arkansas supreme court, and the responsive address was made by Carl Hollis of the Merchants & Planters at Warren. Both of the addresses were interesting and entertaining, and were followed immediately by the president's annual address which will be found printed elsewhere in this issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER. Treasurer F. M. Smith of De Queen read his report as did Secretary Robert E. Wait of Little Rock. For the executive council, report was made by A. D. Foster of Pine Bluff, vice-president of the association. H. L. Rummel, president of the Mercantile Trust Company of Little Rock, reported for the delegates to the Los Angeles convention of the American Bankers Association.

During the recess between the morning and afternoon sessions of Thursday, each of the seven groups of the state held short sessions. Each group selected its member of the nominating committee, and groups Nos. 3, 4, and 5 each elected a member of the executive council to serve until 1914. The results of these meetings were reported to the afternoon session of that day.

The afternoon session of the first day drew a large attendance. The principal address was by J. H. Johnson, president of the Peninsula Savings Bank of Detroit, Michigan. Mr. Johnson spoke on "A Savings Deposit and Its Responsibilities." Following his address there was a general discussion on "Bond Issues in Arkansas" led by J. F. Loughborough. Honorable Thomas C. McRae reported for the banking laws committee and the first day session concluded by giving attention to miscellaneous business. There was a session of the members of the American Bankers Association immediately after adjournment.

On Thursday morning at 9:30 A. M. there was an opening discussion on "Liability of Common Carriers on Bills of Lading." This was led by J. B. McDonough of Fort Smith and by W. B. Smith of Little Rock. The big event of the morning session was a discussion of the "Aldrich Plan" by the Honorable Robt. W. Bonyne, a member of the national monetary commission. This consumed all of the time before the noon recess and the convention adjourned until 2 P. M. The convention of Friday was given up to reports of the various committees and to a very interesting general discussion of pending legislation in the Arkansas legislature. This was followed by the annual election of officers and the installation of the new president.

The entertainment features were provided by the members of the Little Rock Clearing House Association. In order that the members might all enjoy the night at the theatre the banquet was postponed from Thursday evening and the guests of the city were given a choice of seeing "Madame Sherry" at the Capital Theatre or of participating in high class vaudeville at the Majestic. The annual banquet therefore came on Friday evening and was given at the Hotel Marion with J. N. Heiskell, editor of the Arkansas Gazette as toast master. This was one of the most enjoyable features of the entire program and the visit to Little Rock.

The controlling interest in the Commercial Bank of Watertown, S. D., has passed from the Union Investment Company of Minneapolis to South Dakotans. The bank becomes the head of an association of five banks with a capital of $126,000 and resources of more than one million. Heavy stockholders are E. A. Syverson and L. W. Stoeckle of Bryant, the new president and vice-president, J. M. Knudson is to be cashier, and John Foley, assistant cashier.

CHAPTER RECORD

(Department of Chicago Banker)

An Open Forum Dedicated to the American Institute of Banking in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Systematic Education and Universal Membership

KANSAS CITY CHAPTER

George P. Reichel, assistant cashier of the First National Bank of Kansas City, addressed the Kansas City Chapter of the Institute of Banking last Wednesday evening, taking for his subject "Foreign Exchange." This was one of the winter series of weekly discussions which have been well attended by the members of the chapter which has a total enrollment of more than 600 employees of banks in Kansas City. Mr. Reichel said in part:

"Up to about ten years ago the bulk of the international exchange transactions were handled by private banking firms in New York, generally known as foreign bankers. Since then, however, foreign exchange departments have been installed in many national and state banks and trust companies in the larger cities and the greater part of the foreign business is now transacted direct between them and their foreign connections.

"The supply of foreign drafts consists of flour, grain, meat and cotton bills. All of these are generally drawn payable sixty days after sight, with bills of lading attached, to be surrendered upon payment of the drafts. If the draft is paid before maturity, which is usually the case, rebate is allowed on the unexpired period at 1 per cent below the Bank of England minimum discount rate. Against the credits created by the payment of these bills of lading drafts, the American banker issues his drafts, generally drawn payable upon demand, and sold to importers and foreigners. He also issues circular letters of credit to travelers.

"In late years the traveler's check has to a certain extent taken the place of the letter of credit, because of its simplicity and general negotiability with hotels and shop keepers, in addition to banks. The continental banker makes a profit on every exchange transaction. This profit is adjusted to the rate of exchange. Most American bankers doing a direct foreign exchange business find it necessary to carry an account in Holland, for the reason that a great many bills of exchange are offered them drawn on Amsterdam and Rotterdam. There is, however, no corresponding demand for bankers' checks on Holland. Checks on Great Britain and the continent are paid without identification being required from the holder. Checks on Great Britain, however, may be crossed, and then they become payable upon careful identification only. The laws of Europe are very severe in the punishment of forgeries and comparatively few attempts have been made to obtain payment of drafts bearing forged indorsements.

PITTSBURGH CHAPTER

In a lecture on the Canadian Banking System before the Pittsburgh Chapter, American Institute of Banking, Tuesday evening, March 28th, Dr. H. W. Temple said that the Canadian system seems to have solved the problem of an elastic currency. Comparing it with our system he said that it was the result of a growth rather than of law such as ours. Although the system seems to work satisfactorily in Canada, we could hardly transplant the entire system to our own with good results. Business conditions being similar to those of our own country we could afford to study this system in view of pending legislation as recommended by the monetary commission. The prompt redemption of the bank notes and unity of control over the entire system which prevents over expansion of issues without a complex system of laws gives them a currency that is almost ideal for their needs.

W. M. Rosendale, assistant cashier of the Market and Fulton National Bank followed Dr. Temple with a talk on "Call Loans." This talk coming from one whose daily duties are in the midst of our great financial center was a practical one and following so closely on the talk by Dr. Huebner on the "New York Weekly Bank Statement" added actual practice to the theory.

HOME FOR NEW YORK CHAPTER

Plans for a permanent home for the New York Chapter of the American Institute of Banking are now well matured. They contemplate the leasing of a room in a modern office building, large enough to seat at least two hundred men, with an office and library adjoining. Substantial assistance has been assured the chapter for such an enlarged work, provided a program of education can be arranged that will make the venture worth while. In compliance with this proviso, it is now planned to run lectures at least four and possibly five nights a week. The work is to be under the direction of an enlarged educational committee, subdivided into sections, acting in an advisory capacity, with a paid secretary.

The educational scheme comprises a course of thirty lectures on practical banking, covering every department, and intended primarily for the juniors; a course of thirty lectures on English and correspondence, including grammar, composition and public speaking; two courses in banking law, covering bills and notes, negotiable instruments, stocks and bonds, pledges, contracts, national and state banking law, etc.; and fifteen lectures on subjects of interest to savings banks and trust companies.

LOUISVILLE CHAPTER

A feature of the last meeting of the Louisville (Ky.) Chapter of the American Institute of Banking was a paper read by Samuel W. Wilhite, City Comptroller of Louisville, on the subject of "Budget Making, Public Revenue, Public Credit and Public Expenditures." The paper was unusually interesting, analyzing methods of providing for the fiscal needs of a municipality. Mr. Wilhite urged that the fiscal calendar years should be the same, as this would eliminate to a large extent the necessity of borrowing money to tide the city over the "barren period" between the two dates.

FIGHTS TWO CENT FARE

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company and the Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis Railway Company seek to have the act of April 5, 1907, by which railroads in Pennsylvania are required to charge only two cents a mile for transportation, declared unconstitutional and void, by bills in equity which have been filed in common pleas court against Allegheny county.

W. S. WEBB ON SAVINGS

One of the most interesting of the winter's series of addresses to the Kansas City chapter, American Institute of Banking, was that of Will S. Webb, cashier of the Missouri Savings Bank, March 16th. Mr. Webb discussed savings institutions and began by telling the bank clerks that a woman, Miss Pricilia Wakefield, was the founder of the first savings bank among English speaking people.

"There has been a great deal written to prove where and when savings banks originated," said Mr. Webb. "A French writer has asserted that the idea originated with Hugh Delestra in 1610; an Austrian author has insisted that the first savings bank was founded in Brunswick in 1765, in Berne in 1787 and in other cities of the continent on different dates. No one can go far in his investigation of savings and their origin until he is brought face to face with the somewhat startling fact—there was a woman at the bottom of it."

"We find women to-day who have risen to be the actual heads of banks; but their work has been compared to the efforts of Miss Pricilia Wakefield, who blazed the way for all women—and men, too—in starting the first English savings bank. This remarkable woman lived in the parish of Tottenham, Middlesex county, England. She founded her bank in 1789."

Tracing the growth of the savings bank idea, Mr. Webb deplored the fact that there were so few savings banks in Missouri. "The lack of savings bank in Missouri is not due to the absence of thrift," said Mr. Webb. "Nor is it because of lack of industry among its people. We must look to the laws of the state to find the reason for lack of means to foster savings in Missouri. In the early '90s our lawmakers attempted to make model laws, but they too much resembled the man who was teaching his horse to live without eating—the horse died. Few banks can exist under the presents laws, and no one would be foolish enough to invest in bank stock, for there is no chance of profit, as you will see from the following section of our laws: From section 1447 in the revised statutes we find the following to be the exact words: 'It shall be unlawful for any such corporation to loan money upon, or to discount, or deal in notes, bills of exchange, or other personal securities, or to transact any banking business, whether of issue, deposit or discount. The board of directors may, however, make loans to depositors on their pass books to the amount of 50 per cent of said deposit.'

"Another section provides that no depositor shall be allowed to deposit more than $4,000. Another that a certain per cent shall be set aside for a guarantee and indemnity fund, which is commendable, but it provides that the stockholders shall receive only 6 per cent per annum on their stock and that all above that shall be divided among the depositors, whose pass books must be called in every three years, when the distribution is made. No sane investor will put his money in bank stock where he knows he can make only 6 per cent per annum, and with such restrictions as I have named would probably eliminate all profits and make his stock a liability instead of a profit."

Canada is trying to exclude negro immigrants from the United States.

Bank Reception

Fully 10,000 persons visited the new home of Fort Dearborn National Bank, at the Northeast corner of Monroe and Clark streets, on Monday. The reception lasted from morning till night and had the appearance of a brilliant festival. Floral decorations were profuse, many large and beautiful collections of roses and carnations having been sent in by friends of the officers. The lighting of the bank has been greatly improved, so that the scene was one of brightness and cheerfulness.

While thousands paid their respects in person and made the occasion largely social, hundreds of out-of-town friends were heard from by telegraph and letter. All of the officers were kept busy greeting those who called to extend congratulations. Among the visitors were scores of other bankers, who showed keen interest and pleasure in viewing the spacious and artistic rooms. The social features of the day were augmented by the presence of many ladies, patrons of the bank or friends of the officials.

Plans for handling the regular business of the bank had been carefully worked out and customers received prompt attention. The additional room and general improvement of the bank's facilities were appreciated and drew out an unlimited amount of favorable comment.

Fort Dearborn National and its auxiliaries, the savings and trust departments, now have ample room to grow and are housed in one of the greatest and most beautiful of Chicago's modern buildings, in the exact center of the loop district. The five banking floors have a total of 38,857 square feet. The main banking floor has 9,663 feet. Only a few financial institutions in the United States have such advantages, but Fort Dearborn National's steady and rapid growth amply justifies the enterprise of its owners in securing these magnificent new banking quarters.

Among the banks whose cards appeared on the floral gifts were:

Corn Exchange National Bank, Hibernian Banking Association, First National Bank, Merchants' Loan & Trust Company, National City Bank and Continental & Commercial National Bank, and Woodlawn Trust & Savings Bank of Chicago; Irving National Exchange

Bank, New York, and the Third National, the Manchester, the Mechanics' American National, the Mississippi Valley Trust Company, and the Central National Banks of St. Louis.

Among the individual remembrances were flowers from the following:

George M. Reynolds, Edward F. Swift, Carl H. Steere, New York; Kennedy Furniture Company, A. G. Becker, Herman Waldeck, Clark & Trainer, Edward O. Rice, L. Lurya Lumber Company, Mr. and Mrs. John Cort, Oscar E. Binner, Charles P. Gifford, J. Jaffe, John Jay Abbott, H. B. Lusch, C. S. Castle, Adolph Borie Babcock, Adolph Kurz, Levin & Warshawsky, Adams, Bobb & Adams, J. E. Ingram, John T. Muir, John J. Arnold and E. E. Crabtree, Jacksonville, Ill.

"We are under great obligations to our friends for their many expressions of good will," said President W. A. Tilden. "As for the new trust department, its first day's business was most gratifying, and it gives great promise of being a very successful branch of our business."

The Fort Dearborn National Bank was organized in April, 1887, with a capital of $500,000, which in 1905 was increased to $1,000,000 and later to $1,500,000. The board of directors has now taken steps to increase it to $2,000,000.

It was the rapid growth of business in the last few years that necessitated the present larger quarters, the deposits having increased from $9,887,954 in 1908, to $21,574,536 on March 7th last.

The officers of the Fort Dearborn National are: William A. Tilden, president; Nelson N. Lampert, vice-president; J. Fletcher Farrell, vice-president, and Henry R. Kent, cashier.

The officers of the trust company are the same, with the exception that John E. Shea is cashier.

A contract has been let to a Rhinelander, Wisconsin, firm for erecting a new building to be occupied by the First National Bank of that city. The cost of the new structure is to be about $40,000. An old building now occupies the site which will be torn down at once.

UNIQUE OPPORTUNITY. I need $8,000 to complete purchase of safe, successful Illinois enterprise. 8% returns sure first year; 12% to 16% by third year. Marketable assets more than double present invested capital ($35,000). Best location in state. Must enlarge plant to meet demands. $8,000 purchases one-third interest. Investments of $1,000 and up only considered. R. H. FERRIS, Gen. Mgr., 169 Commonwealth Avenue, Detroit, Mich.

Harris Trust

The magnificent new Harris Trust building is three-quarters rented already. The demand is remarkable. The finish of the interior of the Harris building is well advanced and ample provision is being made for taking care of everybody in a first-class manner. The occupancy of the building is devoted chiefly to bankers, bond dealers, insurance and large industrial interests, including the Harris Trust and Savings Bank and F. R. McMullen, and the following bond dealers: John P. Welling, Ruggles and Company, Ames and Emerich Company, Compton and Company, Seney, Rogers and Company, F. C. Rutan and Thompson and Poole. The representatives of the legal profession moving in includes: Harris F. Williams, Strong and Meacham, William Bither, William H. Utt, Thaddeus O. Bunch, Trumann H. Miner, Henry Hutmann, A. D. Schaffner, John A. McKeown, Ingram, Hallen and Masson, Grollman and Weinberg, J. W. Drouillard, Montgomery, Hart and Smith, Charles B. Haffenberg, Fyffe and Adcock, Atlas Adjustment Company, and the following commercial paper dealers: E. Naumberg, W. B. McKeand, Weil, Farrell and Company Bayne, Ring and Company, and the following insurance companies and agents: A. D. Langworthy, C. W. Greene, Enger and Barnett, Lansing B. Warner, Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company, Provident Life Insurance Company, Aetna Life Insurance Company, H. Dalmar and Company, and the following: Rufus C. Dawes, S. D. Stevenson, copper; Godso and Banghart, advertising; Cudahy Refining Company, Cudahy Packing Company, Haskins and Sells, Raymond Concrete Pile Company, D. C. and W. B. Jackson, William Hoskins, Audit Company of Illinois; Underfeed Stoker Company, American Colortype Company, A. S. Rosing, United Food Products Company, and the German-American Car Company.

John J. Arnold, manager of the foreign exchange department of First National, will give a talk on "Foreign Banking Facilities" before the foreign trades division of Chicago Association of Commerce next Tuesday evening. There will be a general discussion of the subject after Mr. Arnold's address.

Aldrich Plan

The currency commission of the American Bankers Association, which met in Washington last week, reached a harmonious conclusion in its recommendations on the Aldrich draft of the proposed new currency law, made to the full monetary commission. No doubt is expressed that the monetary commission will itself agree with the bankers and Mr. Aldrich and that then will begin a campaign of education looking toward non-partisan legislation.

George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National Bank, and one of the members of the currency committee of the American Bankers Association, speaking of results accomplished, said:

"At the meeting of the full currency committee, agreement was harmoniously reached upon recommendations previously made by the bankers who had been called East for a conference some time ago by Mr. Aldrich. We all went into the meeting of the monetary commission and submitted our recommendations.

"It will probably prove of considerable help to the commission if the bankers are agreed in their views. We made little change in the recommendations as previously drawn up.

"It is not possible to speak for the monetary commission, but from the manner in which the conferences were conducted and the talks made, it was apparent that the members of the commission in attendance were about as thoroughly agreed upon the wisdom of the Aldrich draft of the proposed law as were the bankers.

"It looks, therefore, as if the country as a whole will find the bankers and the monetary commission in harmony. So far as I can learn, there is no dissent anywhere from the general plan.

"We did make one important new recommendation, and that was that the president or governor of the reserve association be elected by the forty-five directors of the association themselves. The draft of the law, as originally made, provided that the president should appoint the governor from a list of names presented to him by the forty-five directors of the association. The power to appoint carried with it the power to remove, and, effectually to separate in every way the banking system from politics, it was proposed that the directors select the governor and the two deputy governors.

"Mr. Aldrich readily agreed to this change. The two deputy governors are to serve for a period of seven years. The term of office of the governor or president is not limited. He will serve during good behavior or at the pleasure of a majority of the forty-five members of the board of directors.

"But, taken as a whole, the changes made in the Aldrich draft, while important, have not been fundamental, and it shows how thoroughly Mr. Aldrich has gone into the question.

"He insisted at the meetings in Washington that neither party should make the findings of the monetary commission a part of its political platform. He did not want the Republican, his own party, to do so, nor the Democratic. He said it was a business proposition which he wished congress to act upon without any restraint occasioned by political obligations.

It is understood that an organization known as the affiliated boards of trade, will undertake to explain the provisions of the proposed new law, and enlist the support of trade organizations throughout the country.

It is expected that the headquarters of the organization will be in Chicago. H. A. Wheeler, president of the Association of Commerce, and F. W. Upham, are to be made two directors and will use their influence at this center.

EDWARD C. REYNOLDS HERE

Edward C. Reynolds, a director of Union Savings Bank & Trust Company of Portland, Maine, visited Chicago last week. Mr. Reynolds, who is one of the leading lawyers of Portland, was on his way to Minneapolis to make the regular quarterly audit of the finances of the supreme lodge, Knights of Pythias, as he is chairman of the finance committee.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL PENSIONS

Illinois Central has paid out $1,000,000 in pensions in the last ten years.

Indiana

J. G. B. Short is reported vice-president of the new Hillsboro State Bank.

The Bank of Attica has been absorbed by the Farmers and Merchants State Bank.

At a recent meeting of the directors of the Bank of Idaville, Milton Timmons was elected cashier of the institution, to succeed J. M. Townsley, who resigns.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the new Hillsboro State Bank, the following officers were elected: John J. Williams, president; John W. Frazier, cashier; and Isaac Hamilton, assistant cashier. The capital stock is $25,000.

The Studebaker Bank of Bluffton is one of the largest state banks in Indiana and it is safe to say that there is no other city or town in the state the size of Bluffton, which has a bank as large as the Studebaker Bank. Its deposits of $933,793.41 speak well for the prosperity of Wells county.

The Wells Act passed by the last legislature, exempting gravel road bonds from taxation, has aroused considerable discussion among brokers, as it promises to have a marked effect on the municipal bond market. They say that the effect of the law will naturally be to increase the demand for the gravel road bonds, but it will also weaken the market for straight municipals. There is also a question as to whether the law is constitutional.

Following a general call, issued by the comptroller of the currency for a report from all national banks at the close of business March 7th, the banking department of the state auditor's office called for the reports from all state and private banks in Indiana. The call of the state auditor was sent to 293 state banks and 200 private banks and the call of the comptroller of the currency affects 261 national banks in Indiana.

Presidents of Indianapolis trust companies are practically of one mind in regard to the outlook for the local financial market and general business conditions during the coming months. In reviewing the business of the year of 1910 and in attempting to predict the result on conditions during the coming months of 1911, the heads of different financial institutions say that indications point to a prosperous year. In the amount of money on hand and in the number of savings accounts opened, local bankers believe they see an era of prosperity predicted. Much depends upon confidence and upon the volume of savings accounts opened by wage earners and those who, though receiving small salaries, save enough to have money to their credit in the local financial institutions.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

The advice given by James J. Hill to the working classes urging them to live within their means, is bearing fruit and its influence is already tightening the purse strings of Minneapolis workers, according to Minneapolis bankers, who say that savings accounts in local banks for the last three months are above the average in number for years.

With the banking accounts of the working population soaring skyward and the general tone of business as satisfactory as it ever has been, there seems to be little ground for thinking that Minneapolis is affected by depressed conditions said to exist in other parts of the country or that it has an unusual number of unemployed, business men think.

"We have more working men with accounts at the present time than we ever had before," said Irwin A. Yarnell, secretary of the State Institute for Savings. This may be explained in part, Mr. Yarnell thinks, by the fact that the cost of living is somewhat lower than last year, but his opinion is that it is due mostly to the working men's following the advice of the great railroad magnate and to satisfactory business conditions in the city.

Workers are Saving

William F. Olson of the Union State Bank, is positive that Minneapolis workers are saving more this year than they have saved at any other time. Mr. Olson bases his opinion on his observance of general conditions prevailing in the city, and the increase in the number of savings accounts in the Union State Bank. "Never before," he said, "have the working classes shown greater tendency to economize, and the result is an increase in savings accounts. People who never thought of putting money in banks before have substantial accounts now."

In one bank savings accounts have increased by 960 since January 1st, as compared with the corresponding period of 1910. Another bank says the number of its safety deposits during the last half of 1910 increased by 1,500 over the same period in the preceding year. N. F. Hawley of the Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank also says that Mr. Hill's advice has made a hit with the working community of Minneapolis.

Began at Foot of Ladder

Two bank officers report their first money obtained as follows:

"I was 17 years old when I began to earn money," said John W. Lusk, president of the German-American National Bank. "For three long summers I sat on the seat of a reaper down on a farm in Sauk county, Wisconsin. I drove four horses and felt real proud. Most of my pay went for board. Each night I studied law until, from slicer exhaustion, I was forced to lie down."

Kenneth Clark, president of the Merchants National Bank, came to St. Paul from New York state. He went to work in the law office of W. B. Warner.

"I used to dust off the books and look up matters for my employer," said Mr. Clark. "Between working times I had plenty of opportunity to study law. All I received for my labors was my board which, I believe, constituted money earned."

General Banking News

Comparative quarterly statement of the state superintendent in Minnesota shows 26 state banks in Hennepin county with deposits of $8,682,963, and 10 in Ramsay county with $2,517,724 deposits.

On certificates of deposit the Ramsey banks have $450,422 and Hennepin banks $1,660,418, a ratio similar to the check amounts. The combined total demand, cashiers and certified checks in the Ramsey banks was $132,904.41, while the Hennepin institutions had an aggregate total of $159,256.58.

Three New Ulm banks will entertain in June the Second Group meeting of Minnesota bankers. The membership is 125. Kelsey S. Chase, state bank examiner, is to deliver an address.

The First State of Federal Dam, Minn., has been incorporated, $10,000 capital. H. D. Reed of Crookston is president and H. K. Zeiser is cashier.

George F. Orde, vice-president of the Minneapolis First National, has taken passage on the Empress of Great Britain, sailing in May from Quebec.

J. W. Lusk, president of the National German American, back from a month in the South, says the good farming idea is taking hold in the South as well as the North. Cotton ranging higher than in years has helped greatly and the outlook is for continued progress.

M. C. Tift, president of the People's Bank, Long Prairie, Minn., has entered the real estate, loan and insurance business in Minneapolis as Tift & Donaghue.

C. H. Miller and H. L. Brandt of St. Ansgar, Iowa, have organized the State Bank at Okaton, S. D., with $15,000 capital. Officers are: President, C. H. Miller; vice-presidents, Thomas Hughes, S. P. Brown; cashier, H. L. Brandt.

J. M. Williams, C. F. Swarthout and F. F. Swarthout have incorporated the State Bank of Pettibone, N. D., $10,000 capital.

The German State Bank of Mott, N. D., capital $27,000, is the result of consolidation of the German State and the Farmers State. Officers are: President, Emil Movius; vice-president, J. L. Opfer; cashier, R. E. McCain.

E. J. Bowman, Marcus Daly Loan & Trust Bank of Anaconda, Mont., says that his city, in proportion to population, has more money on deposit in banks than any city west of the Mississippi river. The Western need, says Mr. Bowman, is men to cultivate the soil and aid development.

W. F. Graves, manager of the Middlesex Banking Company, St. Paul, thirty years, is dead.

The United States Coal Exchange, which is to be the selling agency of the principal bituminous coal corporations in this section of the country, was formed at largely attended meeting of coal men. Twenty companies with a capital of something like $500,000,000 were represented and will be parties to the new agency, which will be formally organized at another meeting to be held April 12th. The temporary chairman of the new agency, which starts with preliminary capital of $500,000, is G. J. Gams of Uniontown, Pa., one of the well known men of that section and long identified with coal and coke interests. The attorneys are Chester Kaufman of Pittsburgh, A. L. Pearson of Pittsburgh and L. B. Brownfield of Uniontown. At the meeting two weeks hence permanent organization will be effected with the election of twenty-five directors and officers and the agency will then take over the selling of the product of most of the companies in Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia and Kentucky.

At a special meeting of the stockholders of the Manufacturers' Light and Heat Company the proposition to issue $8,500,000 bonds for the purpose of retiring all outstanding bonds, liquidate all floating indebtedness, besides providing working capital, was defeated by a vote of 32,299 for and 329,629 against. A resolution, however, was adopted, authorizing the appointment of a committee with instructions to confer with the board of directors and prepare another proposition that will meet with the approval of the stockholders.

An order was placed with the Pressed Steel Car Company Thursday by Birmingham and Garfield of Salt Lake City for 120 all-steel ore carrying cars. The cars are to be the largest that have been built by the company being of 120,000 pounds capacity and are to be shipped as quickly as possible.

The Mellon National Bank has declared a stock dividend of 50 per cent. By its last statement, the capital stock was $4,000,000 and surplus $3,300,000. The dividend is declared from the surplus fund, making the present capital $6,000,000 and leaving $1,300,000 in the surplus.

The Pittsburgh Life and Trust Company has sold the Washington Life building at 141 Broadway, New York, at a price that is highly gratifying to the officials of the company. The selling of this property for about four and a half millions removes a burden from the company that was assumed when the Washington Life was taken over.

From a dividend paying standpoint the importance of this sale is indicated by the fact that the increase in interest income on that portion of the company's assets invested in this building, will approximate $45,000.

The directors of Union Trust Company of Pittsburgh declared a dividend for the quarter of 25 per cent. This is an increase of 10 per cent over the quarterly rate that this institution has maintained for some years past and places the stock of the Union Trust Company on a basis of 106 per cent, including the extra Christmas dividend of 6 per cent always paid by the Union Trust Company at the holiday period. The officers and directors of this company are being highly congratulated on the wonderful showing, the capital and surplus now being in excess of $29,000,000.

The Jones and Laughlin Steel Company will extend its operations in the manufacture of wire. A contract has been let for a new mill which will be ready for service by July 1st. It will make Jones and Laughlin one of the foremost producers of wire and wire rods in the country. With this mill in operation the company will have a capacity for an annual output of 200,000 tons of wire rods.

GROUP MEETINGS

Group meetings of the Minnesota State Bankers Association are arranged as follows: First district, Hastings, May 16th, Kelsey Chase, president of the group and state superintendent of banking presiding; second, New Ulm, June 7th, John S. Tolversen, president of the First National Bank of Fulda, presiding; third, Winona, June 5th or 6th, E. E. Shepard, assistant cashier of the Deposit Bank of Winona, presiding.

The fourth and fifth district groups comprise the Twin City Bankers Club, which will hold the equivalent of a group meeting. A banquet will be given in the St. Paul Hotel.

BOYS NEED MORE WORK

C. T. Jaffray, of First National, Minneapolis, declares that boys do not have sufficient work.

"The boys of to-day are different from those of my day because their parents are different," said Mr. Jaffray. "If the parents wouldn't indulge them so much they would be more earnest, ambitious, responsible and efficient. Work is the boys' salvation. The trouble is that they don't get enough of it these days."

APPEL VISITS SOUTHWEST

Vice-President J. M. Appel of LaSalle Street National has been through Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas, since the middle of last month, going as far as Dallas. He found the wheat crop in a promising condition and planters about ready to put in a largely increased cotton acreage. There is a good feeling all through the Southwest over the business outlook.

Burglars entered the residence of John G. Rexford, president of the First National Bank of Janesville recently and secured valuable diamonds and jewelry.

President Charles S. Calwell of the Corn Exchange National Bank, announces that the bank has bought the two adjoining properties Nos. 123 and 125 Chestnut Street from George H. McFadden and will use them for an enlargement of the institution. Work will be started early next year. This is the third time in twelve years that the bank building has been enlarged.

Philadelphia is being offered funds freely by New York with maturities running into July at 3½ per cent, and this has given rise to reports of an impending reduction in rates here, but officials of both banks and trust companies declared no such step was contemplated, all asserting they had not loaned a dollar under 4 per cent and added that no loans had been paid off. Some went further that this by stating they were either below or a shade above their 25 per cent requirement in reserves.

Jobbers and wholesale houses report orders coming in, but complain of their size. Manufacturers of cloaks and suits are fairly busy, but merchandise moves slowly and the return of goods is not infrequent. Manufacturers of shirtwaists are doing a fair trade. Woolen jobbers report trade up to the average, with an active demand for duplicates. Collections are fair and prices firm for the better grade of goods. Clothing manufacturers report conditions for the spring unfavorable, owing in part to the weather. Buyers are scarce and demand small for all grades of goods, with lower prices.

John O. Sheatz, former state treasurer, is to be president of the new 52d Street Bank, a state institution now in process of organization. Mr. Sheatz succeeded Thomas F. Barrett as chairman of the organization committee. This step was taken at Mr. Barrett's request.

The new Farmers Trust & Mortgage Co. of Johnstown, opened with a reception lasting all day in its handsome marble building adjoining the city hall on Main Street. The new building is one of the handsomest in the city, and is complete in every detail.

The Farmers' Trust and Mortgage Company was incorporated in 1910 with a capital stock of $200,000. The board of directors is composed of some of the most successful farmers, professional men, contractors, bankers, and business men of Cambria and Somerset counties, under the following management: P. J. Blough, of Hooversville, president; George Wild, of Johnstown, vice-president and manager of mortgage department; J. F. Dietz, vice-president and solicitor; E. M. Blough, of Hooversville, treasurer, and G. M. Walker, of Berlin, assistant treasurer.

William T. Kemper, president of the Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City, is at his desk again after several days' illness.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, April 5.—The last week has seen a revival of interest in investment and banking circles in the city. The bankers are gratified with the gradual increase in deposits and the recovery of the collections. The prospects of the North Coast and Milwaukee Railroad companies starting their $6,000,000 to $8,000,000 worth of construction work, has given renewed interest to the small as well as the large investor of the local investment field.

The North Coast Railroad Company has recently let contracts for several hundred thousand dollars for ties alone and indications are that the construction work within the city limits will be rushed forward this spring. That the Milwaukee Railroad Company is anxious to begin its work is assured in the recent statements of the officials of the road and the fact that the last financial statement of the company showed that the Pacific division of the road paid a higher net profit for its year of operation than any other division of the road. The fact that the Pacific division has been in actual operation not more than a year, is taken as the reason for the road wanting to get its western construction under way. Spokane is expected to be a heavy traffic point and will lend a large proportion to the Pacific division business.

Will Entertain Vanderlip

In anticipation of the coming of Frank A. Vanderlip, president of the National City Bank of New York, the Spokane Clearing House Association is making arrangements to entertain the distinguished financier with a banquet and diversified program. It is expected that Mr. Vanderlip will arrive in the city April 8th or 10th although the exact date has not been named. Mr. Vanderlip is touring the country on an annual inspection trip, and is accompanied by William E. Kierman of Spokane.

Owns Old Book

W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National Bank, has recently purchased a book printed in 1577 and once the property of the Duchess of Northumberland, and in her private library. The book is especially valuable in that it has marks of the book worm microbe, which has scalloped the margins of the pages in such a way as to make them appear as if they had been worked upon by expert lace makers. Mr. Vincent is something of a bibliophile and has a small library of rare volumes. The one printed in 1577 however, is the most antique of anything he has acquired.

New Bank at White Salmon

Gillett State Bank has been organized at White Salmon, Wash., with a capital stock of $25,000, taking over the assets of Gillett Brothers and Company's private bank. C. L. Colburn is first vice-president of the new institution and will remain at the head of the bank. George Reed is cashier. The directors elected are: T. Z. Gillett, S. C. Ziegler, G. A. Read, C. H. Pearson, C. L. Colburn, R. Lauterbach and O. P. Kreps.

Becomes Cashier

At the annual meeting of directors of the Bank of Orofino, Alex P. Ramstedt, for many years county auditor of Latah county, was elected to the position of cashier to succeed William J. White, resigned. The bank was organized about a year ago and is headed by T. H. Humbird, the St. Paul timber magnate. Jerome J. Day is vice-president of the institution and other prominent men are identified with its management.

New Concern at Lacrosse

Papers have been filed with the secretary of state at Olympia incorporating the First State Bank of Lacrosse, Wash. The new concern takes over the private bank of Scriber, Lyons and Moore. The capital stock, $25,000, has all been subscribed for by the business men and farmers of Lacrosse and officers of the Colfax National Bank at Colfax.

Bank Remodels Home

The Union Trust and Savings Company has completed the alterations of the basement of its new home at the corner of Wall Street and Riverside Avenue. The building was formerly occupied by the Old National Bank, but was sold to the Union Trust and Savings Bank, when they removed to their new fourteen story building. A new entrance has been constructed to the safety deposit vault. At the entrance leading to the basement are two large granite lions which add greatly to its appearance. The interior is entirely of marble, and is furnished with mahogany. At the right as one enters the building is a comfortable seat for visitors, and at the left is the hallway leading to the vault to be used for the storage of more bulky articles that cannot be placed in the small deposit boxes. This vault is accessible both from the interior of the bank, and by an elevator through the sidewalk which will be used to convey trunks and boxes. Within the iron cage that leads to the big vault are desks where the representatives of the Spokane clearing house meet every day to transact their business. Another feature of the alterations which greatly adds to the convenience of the patrons is a small room where they can hold private consultations. In a short time they will begin alterations in the main banking room. These alterations will consist of a new white art glass dome skylight and an entire new arrangement of offices. The decorative scheme also will be changed.

The Benton County National Bank of Prosser, Wash., has moved into its new quarters in the Finn building at that place. The fixtures of the building are of the latest design and are of quarter-sawed oak, with a base in the vestibule of marble, which gives the room a very rich appearance. The bank was the third institution in Prosser, and has made very rapid strides since its organization.

New Idaho Bank

The State Bank of Plummer, Idaho, will be organized as soon as the papers arrive from Boise, and will begin business immediately. The incorporators are, E. T. Coman, L. F. Conolly, and C. M. Kraemer.

THE 1911 WASHINGTON CONVENTION

A meeting of the executive council of the Washington Bankers Association will be held shortly to decide upon the place and time for this year's convention. A very cordial invitation has been received from the associated bankers of Wenatchee, heartily concurred in by the Wenatchee Commercial Club, and the North Central Washington Bankers League, to hold the 1911 convention in Wenatchee, some time during the month of September, when the fruit crop is being harvested and the Wenatchee Valley is at its best.

TELLS OF PROSPERITY

J. M. Rose of Farmers and Merchants Bank, Benton Harbor, Mich., was a caller at Fort Dearborn National recently. He stated that the fruit crop around Benton Harbor has bright prospects and as a consequence there is a general feeling of prosperity in that section.

Boost for Valdez

O. P. Hubbard, a lawyer residing at Valdez, Alaska, has been spending several days in Chicago seeking information relative to the organization of a trust and surety company at Valdez.

Mr. Hubbard stated in a conversation with W. G. Edens of Central Trust Company of Illinois, that the population of Valdez at the present time is about 2,500. The town is located 1,300 miles from Seattle. Ocean steamers are now plying between these two points, making the trip in about four days. While the winter seasons are long and there is a heavy snowfall, yet Mr. Hubbard says the climate is not objectionable and no more severe than many of the localities of the lake region here.

Valdez will have a large increase in population between now and the first of September owing to the discovery of free milling gold quartz there. Mining people of experience regard it as one of the greatest gold strikes of recent years. Mines are being opened on all sides of Valdez Bay and for a distance of eighty miles to the interior along the wagon road to Fairbanks. The principal mines developed to the present time are on Mineral Creek, a stream which flows into Valdez Bay from the north.

Mr. Hubbard is a native of Indiana and was private secretary to Attorney-General W. H. Miller in the cabinet of Benjamin Harrison. He is a man of broad legal and business experience, has spent some twelve years in Alaska, and talks most interestingly and forcefully of the legislative and commercial needs of Alaska. He says the present entanglement resulting from the disputed coal situation, in which few of the Alaska people are interested in a personal or financial way, is retarding the growth and development of the territory and is most unfortunate to every interest except the mining of gold. The coal is much needed in Alaska for domestic, mining, and transportation purposes; and the Alaska people are great sufferers from a contest in which they are not participants and for which they are in no way responsible. While this unfortunate contest is being waged between the government and non-residents, the people of Alaska are required to pay exorbitant prices for foreign coal.

Seattle

State bank examiner J. L. Mohundro has issued a charter to the Gillet State Bank of White Salmon, Wash. The bank is capitalized at $25,000. The incorporators are, T. Z. Gillet, S. C. Ziegler, A. L. Lauterbach, G. A. Read, A. D. Kreps, O. H. Pearson, C. L. Colburn. The officers are: T. Z. Gillet, president; C. L. Colburn, vice-president; C. L. Ziegler, second vice-president; G. A. Read, cashier. Mr. Ziegler formerly conducted a private bank at White Salmon.

Charles L. Schaeffer, for seven years a teller in the Seattle National Bank, has been made paying and receiving teller of the German-American Bank. Mr. Schaeffer takes the place made vacant by the death of Vice-President E. H. Price.

FIFTEEN PER CENT CASH DIVIDEND

Holders of Capital Trust Stock, Columbus, Ohio, which was merged with the State Savings Loan and Trust Company, are receiving a cash dividend along with their transfers and everybody is happy. The enlarged bank has fine prospects of being among the leaders.

The Oklahoma State Bank of Jennings, Okla., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000. Those interested in this bank are U. B. Patrick, Charles Patrick and Lee Patrick of Stroud, Okla., and C. W. Carpenter of Cushing, Okla.

Des Moines, April 5.—It is probable that a test will soon be made of the bill which has now passed both the house and senate of the Iowa legislature assessing moneys and credits at 5 mills flat and assessing bank stock at 80 per cent of its value at the regular rate of interest in the county in which the institution is located. Bankers are not particularly pleased with the second provision of this measure although glad that the flat mill rate on moneys and credits has taken place of the old law which drove so much capital out of Iowa.

It has been suggested that some Iowa bank test the constitutionality of the measure on the grounds that banks should not be assessed upon a different basis from other properties. The Iowa Bankers Association would undoubtedly back the bank which should make the test, so Des Moines bankers believe. However nothing will be determined definitely for some little time. At this writing the bill has not been signed by the governor but there is no doubt as to the governor's attitude, it is believed. Bankers are quite a little disappointed that the legislature should turn down their proposition for a ten mill assessment, later changed to 12½ and put them on an 80 per cent basis. The effect of the bill will be to increase the amount of taxes now paid by Iowa banks about $200,000 per year. At present the amount of taxes paid by bankers, as estimated by Secretary Hall of the Iowa Bankers Association is $900,000. This is figured upon a basis of $9,000 per county. These figures are not exact however, since Mr. Hall was able to secure data only upon 77 counties in the time at his disposal. It is thought that the so-called concession which the legislature made as to the 80 per cent basis will hinder the bankers when they come before the legislature two years hence and ask to be put upon the millage basis as they sought this year.

Legislative Work

With the tax ferret law repealed and the moneys and credits legislation adopted, there are not many measures that are left at the hands of the Iowa legislature in which bankers are directly concerned. However the bill to permit trust companies to act in a fiduciary capacity has not been disposed of. At this writing it is in the hands of a committee and it is feared that it will be lost in the shuffle which is always attendant upon the closing days of a legislature. The bill providing that state and savings banks need not list for publication the liabilities of the directors or the names of reserve agents and correspondents in their reports has passed the house and in all probability will pass the senate. The bill provides that these facts must be furnished the state auditor although they need not be published. The bulk sales bill which passed the house has been recommended for passage in the senate and will probably win. The Spaulding bill for a permanent tax commission to take the place of the executive council met an untimely death in the senate. There are indications that Iowa's tax laws which are badly in need of revising will not be thus treated for at least two years more.

Iowa Bankers Association

A committee from the Iowa Bankers Association is preparing to hold a meeting in Des Moines to revise the constitution. Of this committee, Lee Stevens of the Century Savings, Des Moines, is chairman. C. H. McNider of Mason City and E. D. Huxford of Cherokee are the other members. There has been much correspondence anent the proposed revision but the first meeting has not been held. The revision will do away with the patchwork that now marks the constitution and put the latter document in ship shape order. Similar revision is being made by the Illinois Bankers Association.

Bank in New Home

The Webster City First National is now in its new home and very nicely located at that. New fixtures have been installed. They are of solid mahogany with bronze grille work and art glass. Marble wainscoting extends upwards for seven feet around the wall and the counters, also of marble, are beautiful. The bank is one of the leading institutions of Central Iowa.

Condition of Banks

The abstract of the condition of the national banks of Iowa exclusive of the reserve centers as reported to the comptroller of the currency following the call for March 7th shows an average reserve held at 15.73 per cent as against 15.95 per cent at the January call. Loans and discounts decreased from $103,025,500 to $97,672,426; gold coin decreased from $2,435,642 to $2,410,914; lawful money reserve from $7,273,479 to $6,944,607; individual deposits from $97,608,397 to $97,478,309.

Decline in Clearings

Bank clearings, so far as Des Moines is concerned, showed a decided falling off for the month of March as compared with the clearings for March last year. The total for March, 1911, was $25,570,346.40. For March last year, the clearings were $23,121,831.99. Clearings for the final week in March this year were $3,633,054.91 as against $4,173,462.80 last year. This showing is an indication of other cities in Iowa and there seems little likelihood that any Iowa cities will show an increase for March.

Change of Date

The date of the meeting of Group Four at Elkader has been changed from May 10th to April 27th. This is the day following the meeting of Group Five at Council Bluffs. Arthur Reynolds and P. W. Hall who are on the program at each are looking forward fondly to a trip across the state the night of April 26th in order to get from Council Bluffs to Elkader for the second meeting. It has been announced that Group Eight will meet at Davenport, May 11th.

Promotion for Young Bankers

The Iowa National, Des Moines, at a meeting of directors, Friday, created the office of assistant cashier for three clerks who have been doing excellent work for the institution. The three new assistant cashiers are James F. Hart, Harry S. Stevenson and Rufus L. Chase, Jr. Mr. Hart who has been with the institution for thirteen years was formerly chief clerk. Mr. Stevenson has been with the institution for eleven years and was formerly in charge of the discount department. He will act as cashier while Cashier Harry Blackburn is gone on a trip to Japan accompanied by his wife and son. Mr. Chase began his career sixteen years ago with the Des Moines Savings

MORGAN GETS PERE MARQUETTE

The recent acquisition by J. P. Morgan and Company of $11,000,000 common stock of the Pere Marquette Railroad from the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton and the purchase by them of $8,000,000 notes of the road secured by part of the bonds to be issued under the $60,000,000 mortgages filed on Friday, were the direct outcome of a plan set afoot among the preferred stockholders to take over control of the Pere Marquette in their own interest.

Control of the Pere Marquette rested with the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton when that was sold in 1909 to the Baltimore and Ohio. The latter after two years' experience concluded that the Pere Marquette was not needed in connection with the Dayton road's operation and the Baltimore and Ohio was unwilling therefore to finance the Pere Marquette requirements. The expenses of the company, thanks largely to inadequate facilities, reached a discouragingly high percentage of the total income and it became essential to spend some money on the property to bring its ratio of expenses within reasonable bounds.

BANKER GARDNER'S LAURELS

A letter from Ormond, Fla., brings the news that George W. Gardner, banker, clubman and golf expert of St. Paul, is the local hero of the golf tourney of the season.

"Old George," as he is affectionately designated, does not linger in the subbie class of golfers, but he is very near the top of the list of those who take no odds from the mythical colonel.

He qualified high in the first flight of sixteen for the Ormond Cup, and barely missed a place in the championship eight. In the first round he placed W. F. Peet in the also ran, and in the second met W. H. Lightner, with whom he has had many a historic battle on the links of the Town and Country Club. Lightner is at the top of his form, but Gardner was not to be denied, and on the sixteenth green annexed the scalp of his old-time opponent.

His victory thereafter was conceded. He plowed through the semifinals, and on Saturday, after a close battle, returned to the clubhouse bearing the handsome trophy.

The letter home, which contained these revelations, concluded with the announcement that a sea bath followed, and the ceremonies ended with a telegram of jubilation to "Hod" Thompson at St. Paul.

J. B. JENNINGS FOR TREASURER

St. Louis member of the Missouri Bankers Association are quietly working up a boom for J. B. Jennings, vice-president of the Mechanics Savings Bank of Moberly, for the treasurership of the association. Mr. Jennings is in no wise a candidate, but his St. Louis friends think he is the proper timber for the office. For many years Mr. Jennings has been active in all that pertained to the welfare of the association, and Missouri banking interests in general. He is a successful banker, and clever executive, which latter fact is considered by those advocating him for treasurer, as in the time-honored sequence of things in the Missouri Bankers Association, the treasurer succeeds to the vice-presidency, and then becomes president. The Mechanics Savings Bank of Moberly has a capital of $150,000, and surplus and undivided profits of $101,000. The deposits are about $800,000.

DEERE & CO. IN BIG MERGER

It is officially announced at Moline that plans for the immediate future expansion of Deere and Co., the steel plow manufacturing corporation, involve a merger with twenty-two industrial concerns and branch houses, the consolidation to have a single ninety-nine year charter and a capitalization of $50,000,000. The name of the consolidation will be Deere and Co., the intention being to retain the name of John Deere, inventor of the steel plow.

The Carnegie Steel Company will rebuild its Edith furnace in Pittsburgh. About four months will be required for the work.

W. H. Coffinberry, cashier of the Bank of South San Francisco, was elected president of that institution at the annual meeting of the board of directors. Coffinberry succeeds Jesse W. Lilienthal, who retired. Other officers and directors elected were: Leroy Hough, vice-president; Henry L. Haaker, assistant cashier; Louis F. Swift, Edward F. Swift, Edward Tilden, Leroy Hough, W. J. Martin, C. F. Hamsher, J. W. Lilienthal and Henry J. Crocker, directors.

The Bank of Shasta county closed its doors at the request of the directors, and the president states that liabilities will be paid in full if time is given to adjust the bank's affairs. President C. C. Bush says: "We can pay in full if given time. Some big loans do not look as good as when we made them. There has been a run on our bank since December, when T. S. Henderson, in St. Louis, made the statement that we had loaned him $125,000 without security in connection with the Afterthought Copper Co. This was not true, but it hurt us just the same. Troubles between farmers and smelters have also hurt us, $175,000 having been cut from local payrolls in the last year and a half. The First Savings Bank of Shasta County, a collateral institution, is in no way involved." The First Savings Bank of Shasta County stopped payment at noon because of a heavy run of depositors. The state bank examiner posted a notice on the doors that the institution was perfectly solvent.

The American National Bank of this city says: That there will be a heavy output of the chief agricultural products of California this year cannot be doubted. Precipitation during the past two months has been unusual. The mountains are thickly overlaid with well packed snow, and an abundant supply of water for irrigation purposes through the summer is assured. Temperatures somewhat below the normal have kept back ambitious vegetation, with the consequence that fruit buds will be much less likely to suffer from frosts later in the spring. In the southern counties the shipments of citrus fruit continue in large volume, and the output will be much in excess of last year's.

Walter J. Bartnett, former vice-president of the California Safe Deposit & Trust Company, which went to the wall in the fall of 1907 and has since paid but 10 cents on the dollar of its deposits, has been freed of all criminal charges growing out of the affair. Shortly after the crash Bartnett was charged with embezzlement of certain securities held by the trust company. After three and a half years these two indictments are now dismissed, and the court calendar is entirely cleared of the criminal prosecutions growing out of the wreck of the bank. The only penalty was that visited upon J. Dalzell Brown, manager of the bank, who confessed early and earned a term of eighteen months in the penitentiary at San Quentin. Bartnett has been for three years in New York trying to reorganize the bank, so far without success.

At the annual meeting of the Associated Savings Banks of San Francisco held recently, the following officers were elected: R. M. Tobin, president; George Tourny, vice-president; John S. Drum, secretary-treasurer; Frederick H. Colburn, assistant secretary. The following eleven banks holding membership in the organization have aggregate capital, surplus and deposits of more than $165,000,000. E. A. GRANT

901 Garfield Building, CLEVELAND, OHIO

Los Angeles

I. W. Hellman, head of many banks in San Francisco and Los Angeles, who paid a brief visit to the city, on his way eastward for a trip to Europe, was the honor guest at a luncheon given by J. A. Graves, vice-president of the Farmers & Merchants National, an institution of which Mr. Hellman has been the head since its organization in 1871. As Mr. Hellman says his trip abroad is one of business his reported retirement seems far off.

As proof of the assertion that the Los Angeles banks have been piling up their reserve there is a re-appearance of the long absent advertised announcement of money to loan. The Security Savings Bank, the largest not only in the city, but in the whole Southwest, is now advertising for borrowers. Other banks report increasing deposits and a willingness to make loans more freely than for the last year. It is notable that despite the reluctance of the banks to make loans in recent months, the interest rates have remained practically unchanged.

In the fact that J. M. Elliott, president of the First National of Los Angeles, has obtained a ten years' extension of the lease of the premises now occupied by that institution, at Spring and Second streets, is disclosed the intention of the First to retain a branch at that corner when it moves to its new location five blocks further south, about two years hence. If the bank is not permitted to operate a branch, the stockholders will form a new organization, under a separate charter, to do business at the present location. This will prevent any competitor from profiting by the prestige of the big bank in the old location.

Plans are taking shape for the construction of a three-story club house for the Los Angeles chapter, American Institute of Banking, to cost about $40,000. Negotiations are now in progress for a central site, and architects are preparing plans for a modern building to fill the requirements of the chapter, which now has nearly 500 members.

Fargo F. Collins, savings teller of the Oil & Metals Bank & Trust Company, of Los Angeles, confesses that he stole more than $4,000 from the bank. According to his own story the peculations, in small amounts, have extended over a long time, but there was no discovery until March 22d.

The Hollywood National will soon occupy its new building which was erected at a cost of $32,000.

POSTAL SAVINGS IN FRANCE

Since the inauguration of the postal savings bank system in France in 1882, it has had one continued march of progress, according to Consul General Agaulin at Marseilles. The total number of banks in operation the first year was 6,024, with 211,580 deposit accounts remaining open at the close of the year. These accounts, including interest, amounted to $9,187,116, the average deposit being $43.41. In 1909, the latest year for which statistics are available, the number of banks had increased by nearly 2,000, the deposit accounts numbered 5,542,882, and the deposits, including interest, aggregated $316,456,866 averaging $57.08. In France individual accounts are limited by law to 1,500 francs ($289.50). Net profits were $526,786.

CASHIER LUNDAHL of the Peoples at Moline is in Europe on very extended (hoped to be at least) vacation. Vice-President Nelson R. Greene is acting cashier for the present. Like Editor Kohlsaats' big wind at Springfield, we are not going to tell any more about it.

NOTHING grouchy or pessimistic about the National City of Chicago. In its April letter it says that "there is nothing in the immediate situation to afford basis for the rumors that several railroads would follow the example of the New York Central in reducing their dividend rates. Many lines are making a much better showing than they did early in the year. While there has been an enormous falling off in business, compared with that reported at this season in some years, it is believed a sufficient margin of profit still exists and that many roads will make a better showing from now on."

J. B. JENNINGS of Moberly is being groomed for treasurer of the Missouri Bankers Association this year. We hear that "Dick" Hawes and several other bundles of activity are for him, and besides it's about time a country or a state banker had a chance at the Missouri chairs. Jennings is both state and country banker in one, and a good representative of those interests.

IN Missouri they start their presidential hopes in the treasurership rather than as chairman of council as is done in many states. At no time in that state association does the council attempt to usurp the selective functions of the whole body. This is another thing which ought to be "revised" into the new Illinois constitution. Back room management has gone out of favor in politics and ought to go out of bankers' association ethics.

YES, you may believe that if the Hearst papers had joined all the other Chicago papers in their villainous mud-slinging on Harrison, his majority could have been increased to 35,000.

THE Merriam junta didn't lack funds but was short of sense. A hundred cheap, amateurish blunders and over pretensions could be pointed out. Bowing to the "wets" who only turned away to laugh; abusing Harrison for taking his son to the California mountains for his health, etc.

COMRADE EDENS is said to have been caught napping for once on Wednesday morning. He was turning his paper over page by page when an acquaintance inquired "What you look for?"

"Real estate transfers," said Edens.

"Front page," said the friend, "the whole city of Chicago was transferred to clean hands."

CASHIER.

THE TWO JOHNSONS

The Two Johnsons, Wilford J. Johnson, cashier First National Bank of Lewiston, Montana and C. E. Johnson, assistant cashier, Bank of Galesburg, Galesburg, Illinois, called on officers of the Central Trust Company recently. Mr. Johnson of Montana was on his way East on a business trip, C. E. Johnson of Galesburg was looking about for pointers on architecture and appointments suitable for the modification now under consideration in their banking quarters at Galesburg. The bank of Galesburg is one of the strong down state institutions with deposits of nearly a million, whose president, former Supreme Court Justice, A. M. Craig, also controls a number of smaller banks in Knox and adjoining counties.

CHICAGO BANKS STILL GAINING

Chicago banks gained another $2,000,000 and more during March on the currency movement into and out of the city. Shipments of currency by the local banks amounted to about $8,800,000, but their receipts from the East, the subtreasury and the other direct currency shipping sources were $10,900,000. Shipments in March were the largest for any month this year, but were considerably less than shipments in March last year.

In the first three months this year Chicago banks have gained $13,750,000 on the currency movement. Their total receipts from all the direct shipping sources were $36,300,000, against total shipments of $22,600,000. Shipments in the corresponding period last year were $5,000,000 larger and all outside receipts were about $10,000,000 less.

Deposits in local banks continue to run high. While a few of the larger institutions have lost deposits since the publication of the March 8th statements, more of them have gained.

Money rates continue very easy. The demand for funds is light.

PEOPLES GAS STOCK WEAK

Peoples Gas stock broke to 103 Wednesday in the New York market and to 104 on the Chicago exchange, following the election of Carter Harrison as mayor. "Seventy-cent gas" was part of Mr. Harrison's campaign platform. The present rate is 85 cents. The closing price on the stock the day before the election was 107½.

The market gossip is that the stock will sell lower, especially if the Harrison administration attempts to force the cut it desires in the price of gas to the consumer. A reduction to 70 cents would be resisted in the courts by the company, but a compromise at 80 cents, or possibly even 75 cents, would be accepted gladly.

American Can shares were advanced in this market, following a movement in New York where the trading was active. Swift, Sears-Roebuck common, Edison and Illinois Brick were firmer and in fair demand.

Diamond Match debenture 6s touched a new high price record at 105. There was good demand again for Chicago Railways 5s up to 98¾ and for the Northwestern L 4s at the same price. South Side L 4½s opened off a small fraction, but recovered to 93¾. Other bonds were steady.

NEW NATIONAL BANKS FORMED

During the month of March seventy applications for permission to organize national banks were made to the comptroller of the currency. Of the applications pending fifty-seven were approved and eleven were rejected. During the month thirty-nine national banks were authorized to begin business. Their total capital is $2,740,000. Of the number twenty-five, with a total capital of $640,000, have individual capital of less than $50,000, and fourteen, with a capital of $2,100,000, have individual capital of more than $50,000.

At the beginning of this month there were 7,252 banks in the national system. Their authorized capital is $1,025,117,135. Their bank note circulation secured by bonds is $693,261,786 and their circulation secured by lawful money $35,891,130. The increase in national bank note circulation in March was $217,875 and for the twelve months ended with March was $11,893,920.

NEW IOWA NATIONAL CASHIERS

As forecasted in THE CHICAGO BANKER, the Iowa National of Des Moines has elected three new assistant cashiers. They are R. L. Chase, Jr., James F. Hart and Harry S. Stevenson. Homer A. Miller is the president and H. T. Blackburn, cashier.

OKLAHOMA'S BANK PROBLEM

The banking situation in Oklahoma continues to be very unsatisfactory and even the staunchest friends of the bank deposit guaranty law admit that it is proving disastrous. The report of the state bank examiner's office for the month of March is discouraging in so far as it relates to state institutions. The records show that in March there were thirty-two changes in bank charters as follows:

Central Reserve Bank, Oklahoma City, merged with the Oklahoma City National Bank under the name of the latter.

First State Bank, Norman, merged with the First National Bank under the name of the latter.

Hobart State Bank, Hobart, merged with the First National Bank under the name of the latter.

Money Firmer

An improvement is reported at Chicago banks in the inquiry for money and the market has a better tone. There is no advance in quoted rates, but they are much firmer. Counter loans are mostly at 5 per cent. Commercial paper offerings have lessened but are on a 4 per cent basis. Bonds are steady with moderate transactions.

A month ago a great deal of money was coming to Chicago for the purchase of bonds and commercial paper on a 4 per cent basis. In a measure this hurt the local money market, as it added in the aggregate a large sum to the amount already seeking profitable employment here. There is little of that sort of thing at present. The farming season is open, North and South, and interior bankers are not only finding use for their funds but are posting their Chicago correspondents as to probable necessities with the advance of summer.

Tells of New Demand

George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National, said Wednesday:

"We are beginning to find a demand from our country correspondents in order to carry grain loans. The average western farmer does not like to sell his produce at a low price, and is a believer that higher prices must come if he will hold on. In consequence there is considerable volume of money needed to hold western grain for higher prices.

"There is no suggestion of speculation or that borrowing is due to inflation of any character in the Western country. In fact, it is something of a relief to us to have our correspondents find use for some of the funds they have been placing with us.

"General business rules rather slow, and the demand from the public for accommodation is, in consequence, not large. Still, I think we are about through buying commercial paper at the low rates now quoted."

Bond Business Satisfactory

Another encouraging feature of the money market is the fact that bonds are absorbing a lot of idle capital. The dealings in bonds are out of all proportion to the transactions in speculative stocks. All exchange report lethargy in speculation, while there is a keen, discriminating interest in bonds, especially in the way of short-term investments. The bond business is quite satisfactory to bankers and dealers.

Visit Arkansas

F. A. Crandall of National City Bank, Geo. B. Smith of Continental-Commercial, Arba Perry of Colonial Trust and James G. Wakefield of Corn Exchange National are back from their Arkansas visit. They were the only Chicago bankers attending the Little Rock convention.

All of the gentlemen report a pleasant and profitable trip. The business of Chicago banks continues to grow in that direction. Chicago exchange is in such universal demand in the South that bankers there frankly admit the need of carrying accounts in this city.

The annual convention of the Arkansas

Bankers Association last week was one of the largest and most spirited ever held. Money conditions in the South are much the same as here. Trade activity is not great and capital is superabundant. Farming operations are going forward on broad lines, however, and there are prospects of a decided improvement in the money market as the season advances.

Woodrow Wilson

Trenton, N. J., April 10.—President E. E. Crabtree of the Illinois Bankers Association was here to-day bearing an invitation to Governor Woodrow Wilson to address the Illinois convention to meet at the State Capital in October. He also had an invitation from Governor Charles S. Deneen to Governor Wilson.

HON. WOODROW WILSON
Progressive Democratic Governor of New Jersey who is Expected to Speak in Illinois

From his manner the onlookers were led to believe Mr. Crabtree had not failed in his mission. Governor Deneen also will be on the program.

C. B. MUNDAY HEADS NEW BANK

Vice-President C. B. Munday of La Salle Street National, Chicago, has been elected president of the new Oconee State Bank, the organization of which was completed in this city Thursday. This action does not affect Mr. Munday's active connection with LaSalle Street National. He has interests in Shelby county and in the organization of the new bank at Oconee his friends there desired him to act as head of the concern, which starts with a capital of $25,000.

NEW YORK BANKERS HERE

James N. Donald of Hanover National, New York, and Stephen Baker, of Bank of the Manhattan Company, were callers at Continental-Commercial National, Thursday.

Corporation Tax

Secretary MacVeagh has approved some important amendments to the regulations governing the collection of the corporation tax. Among the changes is a provision in regard to the depreciation of mines, oil or gas wells and other natural deposits. Hereafter, in computing the net income deduction will be allowed for depreciation from ore and mineral deposits on the basis of the original capital investment cost.

A further deduction will also be allowed for the unearned increment represented in such properties on January 1, 1909. This is to be determined from an estimate of the fair market value of the deposits on that date, which will be based upon the total disposal value of the deposit, exclusive of the value of improvements and development work, and will be reduced to the unit of value per ton or barrel. Deduction will then be allowed on that basis at the rate of the original cost.

Under the amended regulations, depreciation of a company's stock is regarded as a loss to the stockholders but not to the company issuing it, so that it cannot be allowed as a deduction. It is provided that deduction on account of depreciation of property must be based on the lifetime of the property, its cost and value and its use. Good will is defined to represent the value of a business over and above the value of the property, and is declared not to be an allowable deduction from the income.

Many classes of corporations are affected by the amendments to the regulations. It is provided that charitable institutions supported by voluntary contributions or state appropriations are to be exempt from the tax. Building and loan associations which lend money to others than members are not thereby removed from the exempted class. Pensions paid by corporations to retired employees or their families, or others dependent upon them, or on account of injuries received, will be regarded as proper deductions under the head of "ordinary and necessary expenses," but gifts or gratuities to employees of a corporation will not be permitted in that class. Among the items which will be allowed as deductions are donations made for purposes connected with the operation of a property when limited to charitable institutions, hospitals or educational institutions conducted for the benefit of employees.

Transit Report

The printing of the transit committee's report is about completed and the scheme as finally developed will be presented at the Nashville meeting of the executive council. The plan as printed has been gone over in Chicago this week by Col. Farnsworth, E. R. Fancher, George C. Power, Ralph Van Vechten and various other bankers and is said to be one that is likely to meet general approval. The report makes a large volume, as the numerals for the different cities and banks are set forth in full.

Mathew S. Nolan has been chosen cashier of the Peoples State Bank of Mason City, Ia.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

A MOLINE banker was found in a deep, deep, brown study the other day at the LaSalle, over a copy of the New York Daily Baiker, pocket edition. "I can't tell," said he, "what Anthony Stumpf and those seven vice-presidents find to do on that little paper unless they take turns in setting type and print it on a hand press?" Now, you guess?

DEAR Mr. Merriam: Please subside. Either the people didn't want your brand of "decent and clean" government or they didn't believe you to be the real thing. Take another guess.

"GREATER BELLEVILLE," the title of a very pretentious book gotten out under the auspices of the Belleville Commercial Club, gives an exposition of that thriving German American city. There are several hundred electrotypes showing the business streets, the residence districts, the manufacturing enterprises, and the chief public buildings. This splendid growing city was described by Charles Dickens seventy years ago as "a small collection of wooden houses huddled together in the very heart of bush and swamp, its main street a forest path nearly knee deep in mud and slime." That must have been about the time that Richard Wangelin struck the town? Things began to improve immediately, and to-day it is an important city and supports quite a number of banks, daily newspapers, trolley lines, parks, theatres, good hotels, and manufacturing enterprises which send their goods around the world.

GREATER Belleville of to-day has a population of 30,000 and is surrounded by the richest land in Illinois. Belleville is an educational center, and ever since the arrival of the German element, the public school system has been one to boast of. The city is rich and is surrounded by a community of hard working, prosperous farmers, and altogether forms a unit of population of which the whole state of Illinois is very justly proud.

BALLINGER, TEXAS, is almost as live a town as the famous secretary for which it probably was named. News comes from there that M. A. Traylor, president of the First National of that city, has resigned to accept a position with the National Stock Yards National of East St. Louis. Mr. Traylor has made a great success in his chosen occupation, and heretofore has resisted many attempts to induce him to go to larger cities.

FROM Ballinger comes the news that a sheriff's posse had to be called out to protect the manager or owner of the defunct Citizens Bank, a private institution at Winchell. This little bank was not under way very long, but managed to gather up about $3,000 in money, more than its proprietor had when he came to town. What he now wants is protection from violence on the part of his depositors. Ballinger is a city of 3,500 population.

MCALISTER, OKLAHOMA, had a near holiday on April 3d when the First National of that thriving city opened for business in its new building. The new home which was erected upon the site of the old one has a front which attracts attention. It consists in chief of two large granite columns between which, deeply recessed from the street, is one enormous window, the sash being made of copper.

THE interior has what is known as marble furnishing, the main portions being white and the trim in green. All of the railings are of green bronze and splendid vaults have been installed. Altogether the First National of McAlester has an up to date home, one of the finest in the state. The present officers of the First National are Wm. P. Freeman, president; R. B. Brewer, cashier; B. S. Brooks, assistant cashier. The inactive vice-presidents are J. H. Morgan and W. S. Ambrose.

APRIL THIRD was a great day for McAlester. The day before the First National opened in its new home, the First Baptist Church dedicated its magnificent new building, and the Elks opened a new club house. Even in Oklahoma this might well be considered a high record.

FROM Washington we see a great many dispatches pretending to distribute the information that depositors like national banks very much better than state institutions, and especially state guaranty banks. If these dispatches really originate in the office of the comptroller of the currency, which often is hinted at in their construction, it would seem to the casual observer almost like something that ought to be discontinued.

WHATEVER opinion the officials who have to do with national banks may have about the popularity of state institutions might better be kept for executive sessions. State banks and trust companies have been increasing in number and importance at a wonderful rate. In some states they predominate. The ethics of the situation should be observed.

IT does not pay to become too much agitated over display head lines in a St. Louis paper. One day last week there were two of these scare heads in one issue of one paper which read like this: "Bank of Commerce Higher," "Scores a Large Gain," and more of the same kind. Just to see if by chance the great National Bank of Commerce might have changed owners, we looked up the records and found this inscription: "Only two lots changed hands,—one lot of one share at 225, and one lot of ten shares at 226." The last sale had been at 221 a couple of days before.

BROKERS explain these varying prices by the rumor that the National Bank of Commerce shortly is to open the Commerce Trust Company as an auxiliary. This the bank denies although the ground floor of the new bank building at Broadway and Pine is being held in reserve for this apparent purpose. The active work which is being done is in preparation of the quarters of the Commerce Safe Deposit Company which hopes to open in June.

BABCOCK, RUSHTON AND COMPANY of this city and of New York is marketing the four millions of new Booth-Fisheries bonds. These bonds pay 6 per cent and are redeemable at 101 for sinking fund purposes. Central Trust Company of Illinois is the Chicago trustee.

PERHAPS it is possible that too much time is given, too much space wasted in the daily newspapers over the doings of the state banks of Oklahoma. At last report of all the state banks covering all of the state institutions in the state, the combined individual deposits were less than fifty millions. It ought to be possible for these banks and their owners to work out their own salvation without too much critical attention from the bankers and banking papers of other states. Give them a chance.

A BANKER up in North Dakota has written a long letter explaining why North Dakota farm mortgages are superior to those of most other states. First he calls attention to the fact that mortgages in most other states represent from 50 to 60 per cent of the valuation while in North Dakota they represent from 15 to 40 per cent of the value of the land exclusive of improvements.

HE further shows, quoting United States census, that farm products "at the farm" sell for more money in North Dakota than they do in either Illinois or Iowa. He further shows that the average cost of land in North Dakota is $20 per acre and that they raise 15 bushels of wheat per acre, showing a profit on the investment of 14 per cent.

THE same crop on land costing $50 per acre would yield a profit of less than 2 per cent, and an Illinois farmer would be obliged to raise nearly 40 bushels of wheat to the acre to produce a similar income. This makes a pretty strong showing for the prime securities prized so highly by the North Dakota bankers.

THINK of a minister being sued for $50,000 in a mining stock deal. Must be a better business than it has been rated.

"WHAT shall we do with our ex-mayors?" inquires the Tribune. Perhaps it hasn't noted the freshly painted "F. A. Busse" on the numerous coal wagons which did such a thriving business all the four years of his reign, under a nom de plume, as it were.

BAYNE, RING AND COMPANY, now at 226 LaSalle, will be at home in the Harris Trust, fourth floor, after May 1st. The tenant list in the Harris palace has been so carefully edited that those who "pass" are to be congratulated.

BAYNE, RING AND COMPANY is one of Chicago's younger investment houses but has made enviable progress. In their new quarters they will have space in keeping with their growth. They have put considerable time on the selection of their new furnishings.

Bills of Lading Movement

Thomas B. Paton, general counsel to the American Bankers

Association, delivers an important address on this subject before national body of business men

New York, April 10.—Speaking of the progress made toward improvement in conditions governing bills of lading, General Counsel Paton, of the American Bankers Association at a recent banquet of a business men's association held at the Hotel Astor, gave an outline of the efforts which have been made on behalf of shippers and bankers during the past five years for improved documents and better laws. He also told of certain beneficial results. He said in part:

"During the last forty years there has been tremendous development in the interstate commerce of our country. The business now carried on between citizens of California and New York or any other Western state with New York is greater in volume than was carried on a third of a century ago between New York and Massachusetts or between any two Eastern states. As a consequence of the vast increase of interstate transportation, new and technical questions have constantly arisen growing out of disputes between carrier and shipper and the courts have been called upon in a multitude of cases to declare and define rights and liabilities. In the earlier days the carrier had about everything his own way. He framed shipping documents and contracts of carriage to suit himself and put in them conditions and exemptions from liability which in many instances enabled him to deny fair treatment to the shipper and to the consignee of the goods at destination. The records of reported cases in the courts of the country give evidence of a long-continued struggle upon the part of the mercantile community to establish just rights against carriers in cases of lost, delayed and damaged goods.

"Five years ago conditions were so bad that a concerted movement was inaugurated by the shippers of the country and by the bankers which had the twofold object, first, of improving the form of the bill of lading itself, and second, of obtaining better and more adequate laws governing that document and the rights and liabilities of the parties thereto. In that movement there were banded together a large number of shippers' organizations throughout the country and the bankers were represented by the committee on bills of lading of the American Bankers Association. At that time one bill of lading document was used for both 'straight' and for 'order' shipments, with a provision that if the word 'order' was written before or after the name of the consignee surrender of the bill would be required before delivery of goods, but if the word 'order' was not so written, delivery could be made at the option of the carrier without taking up the bill. This kind of document was especially objectionable to bankers. It was not infrequent that the holder of a straight bill of lading—one upon which he could get the goods without surrendering the bill—would fraudulently write the words 'order of and notify' upon it, thus making it apparently an order bill of lading and upon this worthless document obtain advances to the pecuniary loss of the defrauded lender. This was very serious from the standpoint of the banker. The old kind of bill of lading was also very unsatisfactory to the shipper, as the carrier had placed many conditions and exemptions on the back of the bill that were unjust, and, furthermore, there was no standard set of conditions used alike by all carriers.

"I will not take the time to give details of this unsatisfactory state of affairs. Suffice it to say that proceedings were instituted before the interstate commerce commission, protracted negotiations followed between shippers, bankers and carriers and a final hearing was held before the commission, as a result of which the interstate commerce commission in June, 1908, recommended, and we now have in general use, two forms of uniform bills of lading, one for 'order' and one for 'straight' shipments, with the words 'order of' printed on the order form, with the words 'not negotiable' printed on the straight form and with the same set of conditions on the back of each bill which, while not all that shippers might desire, were far more satisfactory than the old conditions. So much for the progress towards improvements in the form of the bill of lading. But apart from form there was a more serious situation from the standpoint of the banker who advanced money, or the consignee who paid drafts, on the faith of the bill of lading, arising from the rule of the common law that the authority of the agent of the carrier, when he signs a bill acknowledging receipt of goods, is limited to cases where the goods are actually received; that the signing and issuing of a bill without receipt of the goods does not bind the carrier to a bona fide holder who has acquired the bill for value. This rule, it is true, does not obtain in New York state, but it is the rule more generally prevailing. When it is realized that the bill of lading has evolved from a mere contract of freightment into an instrument of credit, that the cotton crop, grain, lumber, shingles and a multitude of other products in vast amounts are shipped upon order bills of lading, and that the amounts of money annually advanced on the faith and integrity of the statements contained in such bills run into billions of dollars, it is at once recognized how serious a situation it is when a railroad can in any particular case say to the holder for value of such a bill: 'True, this bill acknowledging receipt of one hundred bales of cotton, or one hundred tubs of butter, or two carloads of shingles was signed and issued by our agent whose duty it is to sign bills of lading, but as a matter of fact we never received the cotton or the butter or the shingles. Our agent in signing and issuing this bill did so fraudulently, or he wanted to accommodate the shipper who promised to deliver the goods at the railroad station in a short time. Not having received the goods our agent of course had no authority to bind us by signing this bill, and while we are sorry that you, Mr. Banker, or you, Mr. Consignee, have paid out your money upon a draft attached to a bill of lading acknowledging that we had the goods, we are not responsible and it is you who must suffer the loss.'"

The speaker here reviewed in detail the efforts for national and state legislation on the subject of bills of lading, and concluded as follows:

"If I may summarize the progressive steps in the bill of lading situation during the last five years, which mark an improvement over former conditions, I would say: First, in 1906, the enactment by congress of the Carmack amendment to the interstate commerce law, which has just been declared constitutional by the supreme court of the United States. Before the enactment of this amendment carriers quite uniformly put into their bills of lading provisions that they would not be responsible for loss, damage or delay not occurring on their own road or after the property had been delivered to the next carrier. The evil under this old system arose from the inability of the shipper whose goods had been lost or damaged to know which particular one of a number of connecting carriers had caused the injury. The Carmack amendment was aimed to remedy this evil by making the initial carrier liable to the shipper or lawful holder for loss or injury, caused not alone by himself but by any subsequent connecting carrier, and it made void any contrary provision in the bill of lading. It gave the initial carrier when held liable a remedy over and against the carrier in default, and it also preserved the right of the shipper to sue any connecting carrier directly if he so chose. The passage of this act has been a great boon to the shipping public while it works no hardship to the initial carrier, who is in much better position than the shipper to locate the line upon which a loss has occurred.

"The second progressive step is one I have already mentioned, namely, the recommendation by the interstate commerce commission in June, 1908, and the quite general adoption by carriers of two forms of uniform bills of lading. Thirdly, the passage in 1909 in four Western states, of a bill of lading law drafted by our bankers' committee, designed chiefly to make carriers responsible to bona fide holders for the truth of recitals in their bills of lading; followed in 1910 by the enactment in the states of Maryland and Massachusetts of the uniform bills of lading act. The subject of bills of lading in their relation to the complicated transactions of commerce is a vast one, and complete realization of the reforms in view is, of course, a matter of time. But the commercial and financial community most certainly have cause for congratulations in the decidedly beneficial progress that has already been made during the last five years, progress which has only been possible by organized effort and by an energetic campaign of education."

Total production of coal in Ohio during 1910 was 34,424,951 tons, an increase of 6,669,919 tons over the production of 1909.

Mattoon Bank Merger

First National and Mattoon National merge and will take in the Mattoon Trust Co., also. Large capital and surplus and strong staff

Mattoon, Ill., April 10.—The town has not gotten over its surprise at the amalgamation of its two leading banks—the First and the Mattoon Nationals—into one powerful financial institution with strong capital and a working force of sixteen men. The whole matter was concluded between Wednesday and the close of last week. President C. E. Wilson of the Mattoon National retires and L. L. Lehman of the First will be president of the new bank. Both banks will be liquidated and a new name for the future. Probably the First's valuable numeral title will be taken. It was as much of a surprise to the bank employees as it was to the public at large. The amalgamation will be completed on or before July 1st. The exact steps to be taken in accordance with the federal statutes are not yet known. At meetings of directors of each institution held last Wednesday, the officers were instructed to call special meetings of the stockholders on a date to be fixed later. By that time the method of procedure will be known definitely.

The organization of the new bank is yet indefinite. It will occupy the magnificent new bank building erected by the Mattoon National, will have a capital stock of $150,000 with an equal surplus and will be a complete unity of the interests of both banks. The deposits will aggregate nearly $1,500,000, being the strongest and greatest bank in this part of the state of Illinois.

Two material desires led to this deal. One was the ambition of the First National to secure a site for a building or a building commensurate with its growing needs. Another was the imperative retirement of President Wilson, whose health is suffering under the strain of long service and a never-ceasing tendency to work with close personal touch in all departments of his bank.

That strategic maneuvering, coupled with characteristic business diplomacy has been used is self-evident, for these two banks have been rivals in the financial field for years. In point of chronology, the nail that clinched the deal was driven before President Lehman went to California last January, and since that date the details have been worked out rapidly.

The first step that has made possible this deal came when President C. E. Wilson announced a willingness to dispose of his bank stock so that he might retire. The result was a contract for the sale of his holdings to George W. Parker of St. Louis, also a heavy stockholder, the stock to be delivered upon request.

Associated with Mr. Parker were R. S. Hodgen of Charleston and President Lewis L. Lehman of the First National of Mattoon. Negotiations between President Lehman and Mr. Parker were opened and an agreement to the amalgamation was entered into. Mr. Lehman then went West, leaving Vice-President George S. Richmond and Cashier W. H. Ownby to work on the details. Correspondence to a small extent passed between Mr. Parker and Mr. Lehman while the latter was in Los Angeles. While there Mr. Lehman was given a blue print plan of the banking floor of the Mattoon National building, and mindful of the coming needs, he suggested some minor changes that have been made.

Upon his return it was determined to inaugurate the legal evolutions attendant upon the process. Investigation showed that only the comptroller of the currency of the United States could dictate, and to his office communications have been sent. At meetings of the directors of the banks—the Mattoon National at two o'clock Wednesday afternoon, the First National at seven o'clock Wednesday night—resolutions were passed authorizing the presidents to notify the comptroller of the intention and to call special meetings of the stockholders at a date to be fixed by them, when word has come from the comptroller.

The plan of President Lehman is to liquidate both banks. This means that the stockholders will be paid back the worth of their stock. This return will be made at the book value of the shares at the time of liquidation. At present the book value of First National bank shares is $230 per share; of the Mattoon National about $360, due to a larger surplus compared to capital stock. This will end the existence of the corporate bodies of the banks.

Simultaneously a new bank whose name is not yet determined will open. It will have a paid capital stock of $150,000, and will open with a surplus of $150,000. Stockholders of the Mattoon National bank will receive cash to offset the additional book value of their shares as compared with the First National shares. The new bank will assume the liabilities of both banks and likewise their assets, which, incidentally mentioning, includes the two bank buildings now occupied.

Gathering information from the latest statements of condition given publication, it is shown that the new bank will have deposits of $1,416,307.18. This amount is subject to change daily and will probably exceed a million and a half. The last statement showed the First National with deposits of $903,042.38, the Mattoon National with $513,264.80. The Mattoon National carries a surplus and undivided profits more than equal to twice the amount of its capital stock. In this connection it is interesting to note that one of the best advanced advertising features of this bank has been "two dollars laid by for every dollar of its capital, to protect its clients." The bank stood seventh in the United States and second in Illinois on the roll of honor. The surplus of the First National is fixed at $130,000, equal to its capital stock.

The staff of the new bank will consist of the staffs of both banks combined—save that President Wilson retires. This will make a working force of sixteen men remarkable for a city the size of Mattoon. There will be two paying tellers, one now with the Mattoon National Bank, one with the First National Bank, and one receiving teller, the departments to be separate. Then there will be a receiving teller to relieve the active man and two tellers to relieve the active paying tellers. By this method a greater number of patrons may be accommodated in shorter time.

The line up of the official staff of the new bank is not determined. President Lehman of the First will be the active head; that is settled. The directorate will be made up of the directors of both banks.

The new bank takes over also the Mattoon Trust Company, recently organized by the Mattoon National. It will operate this upon slightly different plans in the same space set aside for it in the new building.

The two deserted bank buildings will be sold. For the business of both banks will be conducted wholly together and the problems that have faced the heads of both institutions are solved to the entire satisfaction of each.

The First National was organized in 1865 and the Mattoon National in 1874. Both have been successful and influential institutions. Mattoon is very proud of the splendid new bank building and of her enlarged banking powers.

CHICAGO SAVINGS BANK.

President Teter announces an increase in the capital stock of the Chicago Savings Bank. The increase is $500,000 and the additional stock has been fully subscribed at 120. This makes the capital of the bank $1,000,000. Vice-President Hubbard of the Chicago Telephone Company and Secretary Thompson have been elected directors.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

The death of Vinton E. Howell, formerly president of the Corn Belt Bank of Bloomington, removes a figure which has been prominent in Central Illinois banking circles for many years. Mr. Howell was one of the stockholders of the Corn Belt when it was organized in 1891, was elected president the next year and remained in this position until November, 1910, when he retired because of ill health.

Mr. Howell served three years in the Union army during the Civil War and afterwards followed farming and stock-raising in McLean county with great success. He was elected sheriff of McLean county in the late eighties and served four years. He was a Republican and a state senator from 1892 until 1896. His son, Frank A. Howell, is at the present time assistant cashier of the Corn Belt Bank.

Legris Organizes New Bank

The resignation of H. J. Legris, cashier of the First National of Kankakee, was noted a few weeks ago in THE CHICAGO BANKER. At the time of his resignation it was announced that Mr. Legris was to enter other business lines. It seems that the present activity of Mr. Legris is directed toward the organization of a new state bank in Kankakee to be known as the American State and Savings Bank. A permit to organize this bank with capital stock of $100,000 has just been issued by State Auditor McCullough to Mr. Legris, Otto Weber, and A. B. Trudeau.

Other New Banks

Freeport is also to have a new state bank to be known as the Galena Street State Bank. A permit to open this bank has been issued to Messrs. George Lawyer, Thomas Wohlford, and Henry Spelman. The capital stock will be $100,000.

The Cervenka and Klicka State Bank of Morgan Park has also been granted a state charter, the incorporators being Joseph Klicka, Harry M. Neben, and James Cervenka. The capital of this bank will be $100,000 also.

The village of Saunemin, near Pontiac, will have a new state bank. Michael Ferch, J. B. Edward, and John A. Berry, are the organizers of this institution which will be capitalized at $25,000.

Bank Charter is Extended

The New Farmers State Bank of Mason City has been granted a charter to continue the business of the Farmers State Bank of that town. The capital is $90,000 and the business of the old bank will be carried along by the officers and directors of former institution. John Freeman is the president, J. J. Ainsworth is vice-president, and W. E. Ainsworth is the cashier. Merchants Loan and Trust of Chicago, Central National of Peoria, and National Park of New York, are the correspondents of this bank.

Illinois Notes

The Peoples Bank of Bloomington has its new building so nearly completed that the office rooms are now offered for rent.

"The directors of this bank direct. A trained corps of officers and assistants guarantees a thoroughly high-class service in every department." This is some of the good advertising of the Central National of Peoria. The first part is especially good.

A farm of 160 acres near Towanda, McLean county, has recently been sold for $43,200 or $270 an acre. Delivery of the farm will be made March 1, 1912.

A. M. Augustine, the well-known nurseryman of Normal, says: "We never have had before more magnificent prospects for a good fruit season than we have at the present time. I do not think that it has been cold enough in the southern part of the state to result in injury."

The oil fields of Illinois produce annually about 34,000,000 barrels of oil from 18,500 wells.

GROWTH OF SOUTHERN BANK

Chattanooga has at least one million-dollar bank. It is the Hamilton National.

At a general meeting of the shareholders it was voted to ratify the recommendation made by the directors about one month ago to increase the capital stock to $1,000,000. This action will take effect June 1st.

The price quoted to the old shareholders is 140, while the new subscribers to stock will be required to pay 150. The Hamilton National will thus be given a capital stock of $1,000,000 and surplus and undivided profits of approximately $500,000. It becomes the second largest bank in the state.

Another important item of business transacted at the shareholders' meeting was a decision to repurchase the banking property at Seventh and Market, where the skyscraper is now approaching completion. This property was taken over nearly a year ago by the Hamilton Safe Deposit Company, a corporation formed for the purpose of erecting and holding the fifteen-story building that is now nearly ready for occupancy. After June 1st the Hamilton National Bank will own this property and it will be free from incumbrance.

GETS NATIONAL CHARTER

The Citizens Bank of Pukwana, S. D., after nineteen years of existence has been made the First National with $25,000 capital. The old management will continue. Officers are: President, H. R. Sanborn; cashier, J. S. Sanborn; assistant cashier S. S. Stowell. Mr. Stowell has been with the bank eleven years.

YEGG LAW PASSED IN KANSAS

The legislature of Kansas at its recent session passed the American Bankers Association measure for punishment of burglary with explosives fixing the term of imprisonment from ten to thirty years. Since the first of last September there have been no less than fifteen attacks on banks in Kansas by yegg burglars, in ten of which the burglars were successful in robbing the bank, while the remainder were attempted burglaries. It is a striking fact that of all these crimes, only one was perpetrated upon a member of the American Bankers Association, the attacks in fourteen cases being upon non-members. This record of crime indicates the necessity for the law which has now been passed. There are other states which have not yet enacted this law where yegg burglaries also have been perpetrated in considerable number and the record of such crimes should be a most potent argument with the legislatures of such states to do what they can to protect bank property by passing the yegg law. Crimes of yeggmen, while decreasing so far as members of this association are concerned, seem to be increasing in other directions and there should be the most stringent laws against this class of criminals.

BANKRUPTCY FOR CARNEGIE TRUST OFFICIALS

New York, April 12.—An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed here to-day against William J. Cummins, president of the failed Carnegie Trust Company and now under indictment. The liabilities are given as $5,000,000 and the assets as worth $400,000. Payson Merrill was appointed receiver with a bond of $100,000.

The petitioning creditors are Hermann C. Brewster, with a claim of $30,000 for money loaned; Herbert Hatfield, $9,600, money loaned and James S. Watson, $80,000, money loaned. They allege preferential payments and transfer of property while involunt.

Other petitions in bankruptcy were filed against Charles Arthur Moore, Jr., a director of the Carnegie company, and Martin J. Condon, also a director. The liabilities of Moore are given at $2,000,000, with assets of $100,000, and of Condon, $6,500,000 and $500,000.

Guaranty Tangle

The failure of the Planters and Mechanics Bank of Oklahoma City April 6th has brought the bank deposit guaranty troubles of Oklahoma to a critical stage. This is the second failure of a state bank in Oklahoma since the closing of the Columbia Bank and Trust Company in September, 1909. Bank Commissioner Lankford and Fred G. Dennis, members of the state banking board, stated that the failure of the Planters and Mechanics Bank was due to bad loans and poor management upon the part of former officers and directors. The bank had a capital of $50,000, deposits of $200,000 and $250,000 outstanding loans. The present officers of the bank are A. M. Gustin, president; A. L. Norfleet, cashier. Nick M. Ellis, former cashier, is under a $3,000 bond on a forgery charge having been arrested two weeks ago on complaint of the banking department.

It is impossible to state what effect this failure will have upon the already depleted state guaranty fund. The profound secrecy that has been maintained as to the true condition of the guaranty fund makes it impossible to state just how much available cash is on hand, but two months ago it was said to be only $12,000 in cash with a lot of doubtful securities. If the state banks will be called upon to make up a substantial deficit, there is no doubt that some of them will be forced to go out of business.

Since the bank guaranty law went into effect about three years ago more than $1,000,000 has been collected from less than 700 state banks. One of the authors of the bank guaranty law remarked recently that within seven months there would not be 200 state banks left in Oklahoma, whereas there were 690 on March 1, 1911.

In all probability the Oklahoma state banking board will bring suits to collect special assessments which some fifty former state banks have attempted to escape by taking out national charters. As these banks are no longer under state control they claim that the state no longer has any control over their assets and cannot force the payment of the assessments. There is no way that the state can prevent state banks from becoming nationalized and thus escape the payment of guaranty assessments. There is strong probability that this is the beginning of long and expensive litigation on which the ultimate fate of the Oklahoma bank deposit guaranty law rests.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE MARKET

Discounts in London have risen during the week to $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent for 60 and 90 days sight bankers' bills, while rates in Germany and France remain unchanged at 3 per cent and $2\frac{1}{4}$ per cent, respectively. Sterling demand is quoted at $4.86\frac{3}{8}$; 60 days' sight $4.84\frac{1}{4}$; check on Germany $95\frac{1}{8}$ less 1-32; 60 days' sight on banks 94 9-16; check on France, 5.20; 60 days' $5.21\frac{7}{8}$.

A NOVEMBER CONVENTION

From latest information it appears that the A. B. A. convention will go either to San Antonio, Tex., or New Orleans, and in either case will come the second week in November. Col. Farnsworth was in the city this week, but was non-committal.

CINCINNATI BANK CLOSED

Cincinnati, Ohio, April 13.—The Deposit and Commerce Bank of Cincinnati went into voluntary liquidation after its books had been inspected by its board of directors. Its affairs were immediately turned over to F. E. Baxter, state bank examiner. It was announced by the president, W. A. Hopkins, that all depositors will be protected and paid off dollar for dollar. Any loss that is sustained will be borne by the stockholders. Mismanagement is the reason given for the failure, but the amount involved is said to be small.

Directors and officers of the Western Electric Company have been re-elected.

Banking Opinion

Frank A. Vanderlip, who has returned to New York after a trip to Seattle, took occasion while here to discuss currency reform. He enthusiastically advocated the plan for a central reserve association.

In the event that such a bill should become law, Mr. Vanderlip predicted that approximately half a billion dollars, now tied up, could be used in making loans on discounts.

"Under this proposed bill," said Mr. Vanderlip, "the banks would be permitted to deposit with the central reserve association all that part of the present reserve kept in the vaults that they desired."

"It would result in banks loaning more money on commercial paper, and, in inverse ratio, would withdraw money used in stock speculation."

Asked how the law would effect that end, he explained that accepted notes would then become liquid assets in much the same manner as call loans are now, as such notes could be turned into the central reserve association, and there used as a basis of note circulation.

"When the borrowers of this country," said Mr. Vanderlip, "understand the full import of the proposed law, they will be insistent in demanding its passage."

With such an association in existence, Mr. Vanderlip predicted that panics would be impossible, on the theory that all commercial paper held by the banks would be liquid securities immediately convertible into cash, and on the further theory that the sacrifice of securities in such cases being obviated, the act of realizing cash would not then, as now, promote the speed of the panic instead of staying its course.

He explained that the term "accepted notes" meant commercial paper accepted by one national bank and rediscounted at other banks. By the time these notes reached the central reserve association they would bear the indorsement of every bank through which they passed.

Further Mr. Vanderlip indicated that where a merchant might approach a bank for a loan, and the bank be fully loaned up, the bank could assist his client by accepting the note when it would be negotiable at any national bank having loanable funds.

Mr. Vanderlip explained that the central reserve association would be free from any political or selfish financial interests.

Cheerful over Outlook

Bankers of the Central West have not felt the business revival which is due with the beginning of the cattle feeding season, but there is no anxiety whatever on that score. The weather has retarded cattle operations materially and these same rains are insuring bountiful harvests later on.

"I consider the outlook not only hopeful but decidedly cheerful and encouraging" said Walton H. Holmes, president of the Pioneer Trust Company of Kansas City to a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER. "There is not much demand for money, yet there is no cause whatever for alarm. Last year was a record breaker in this respect and I think it is just as well that financial operations should be upon a more normal basis. Deposits are very satisfactory and general business as reported to the banks is good. I look for a season of abundant crops and our usual prosperity in this part of the country."

Looks for Better Money Market

Vice-President Moulton of the Corn Exchange National Bank says: "We never follow money rates all the way down or up, and to-day we are getting $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent on most loans, with 5 per cent on a good many of them. We do a big business on Board of Trade collateral. I believe the general tendency of money is upward rather than downward."

Boost for Montana

Bound from New York for his home, Wilford J. Johnson, cashier of First National of Lewistown, Montana, waved Montana's opportunities before the Twin City people in interviews, suggesting that they should seize them eagerly. He says business is good and the crop outlook excellent.

"If the Twin Cities will keep an eye on Montana," said Mr. Johnson, "they will see something in the way of wholesome development that will surpass even that of the intermediate country, which has been wonderful.

"If we could get into the minds of the people the geographic relation between the rich country of the Judith basin of which Lewistown is the center, and these big cities, it would be seen there is a great opportunity out there.

"Lewistown, the center of one of the most fertile valleys in the world, which had good crops last year, is almost as far removed from Helena and Butte, from the standpoint of railway travel, as it is from Minneapolis. This may seem like exaggerated statement, but Montana is a big and mountainous state and it is substantially true. I think that the development of Montana in the next five years will astonish the East. The character of the state will change with the increasing influx of Eastern moneyed men. Lewis and Clark, when they came up there a hundred years ago, saw the beauties and rich productive possibilities of the country but in later development it became thought of generally as a mining and grazing state. Its agricultural possibilities were not understood until within recent years."

BANKER IS KILLED

Sylvania, Ga., April 13.—Escaping unharmed, though three loads from a repeating shotgun had been sent at him, C. E. Lee, a planter of this county, this afternoon sent three bullets into the breast of L. P. Hilton, president of the Screven County Bank, member of Sylvania City council and one of the wealthiest men of this county. Hilton was dead in five minutes.

H. W. Eddy has succeeded John G. Reid as vice-president in First National of Juneau, Alaska.

TELLS OF SOUTHERN INDIANA

Murray S. Wilson, cashier of Borden State Bank, Borden, Ind., was a visitor at Fort Dearborn National the fore part of the week. The town of Borden is the center of a wealthy and interesting agricultural section, where the principle of intensive farming has raised the value of land to a high level. The chief product in that neighborhood is strawberries and the growers supply the markets of Louisville, Indianapolis, Cincinnati and Chicago. It is no uncommon thing for farmers to clear $200 an acre from their strawberries, and in some cases men have refused $500 an acre for their land, although in other sections of the state good farms are selling at $100 an acre. This shows the difference between modern and old-fashioned customs in managing a farm. Mr. Wilson is an enthusiast on the advantages of Southern Indiana.

NEW COUNTERFEIT BILLS

New York, April 13.—W. H. Moran, acting chief of the secret service here, has sent out a warning to banks, business houses and ticket offices to keep a strict lookout for two new counterfeit bills which have been discovered in circulation.

One of the counterfeit bills is a $20 national bank note on the United States National Bank of Los Angeles, Cal., check letter "B," series of 1902-1908. There are many mistakes in the lettering on the bill, the word "national" being spelled with a final "i" instead of an "l," and cashier being spelled "casher."

The other counterfeit is a $10 United States note, check letter "C." The back of the note is reddish brown instead of green. Neither counterfeit, according to Moran, should deceive the ordinary careful handler of money.

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER By Mortimer I. Stevens

WISCONSIN

During the past week there appears to have been a considerable renewal of activity among iron and steel manufacturers and promise is now held out that Milwaukee manufacturers will be able to operate full time and full handed during the summer months.

At the various banks there has been an active demand for loans but according to a number of bank officials this demand is not above normal for this time of the year. Collections are reported as satisfactory. Country bankers anticipate unusually good crop returns this year and are carrying healthy balances in their city depositories.

Bond trade has been good thus far this month and salesmen who have been spending much of their time out-in-state say that there is every indication of a good trade throughout the summer months.

Work Started on Milwaukee Bank

Work has been started on the North Avenue State Bank, Milwaukee, and it is believed that the building will be ready for occupancy by August 1st. The bank is capitalized at $50,000 and was incorporated February 11th. The new North Avenue Bank is to be two stories in height and 30x70 feet. It will have a terra cotta front and will be modern in every respect. The structure will cost approximately $10,000. The contract for the building has not been let but it is expected that the directors will announce the name of the successful bidder within a few days.

The stockholders in the new bank are all merchants and business men of the northwest side of the city. Fifty shares was the limit allotted to any one person and no difficulty was encountered in placing the stock. The following have been named directors: William F. Coerper, William C. Garens, George Klippel, Otto A. Hensel, George Bauldauf and Richard Wittenberg. Officers will be elected within the next few weeks.

Work has also been started on the Home Savings Bank and is progressing satisfactorily, the officers expecting to be able to open the bank by May 1st. The bank will be a one story building with Bedford stone front, 20x80 feet, and will cost about $15,000. The interior will be finished with ornamental tile, mahogany fixtures and ornamental stucco ceiling. An ornamental glass skylight will furnish interior light. Faustin Prinz is president of the new bank and Michael B. Wells, now with the First National Bank of Wauwatosa, will be cashier.

No Postal Deposits for State Banks

Judging from the continued applications filed by the state banks of Wisconsin for postal fund deposits, many bankers are not yet aware that no Wisconsin bank is eligible for such deposits. The politicians at Washington were far-sighted enough to know that the Wisconsin banking law, and doubtless of many other states, prohibits state banks from depositing such bonds as are required under the postal bill as security for any deposit, such security being termed a "preference."

Provision for surety company bonds was originally made in the postal bill, but eliminated at the last moment, thus limiting the postal deposits in this state to national banks. Secretary Bartlett, after consulting with Banking Commissioner Kuolt prepared an amendment to the present state banking law to permit state banks to qualify as depositories of postal funds.

Cashier Pullen Resigns

Charles F. P. Pullen, cashier of the German-American Bank of Milwaukee, has resigned and the resignation has been accepted. About one year ago Mr. Pullen was severely ill and has never completely recovered his health. He will leave for Alabama where he expects to spend several months on his plantation.

Mr. Pullen was one of the founders of the bank and has been connected with it as cashier during the fifteen years of its existence. It is reported that Edward A. Farmer, present assistant cashier, will be promoted to the vacancy thus created.

The following resolutions of regret were passed by the board of directors: "Whereas—Owing to the state of his health, Charles F. P. Pullen has found it necessary to retire from all strenuous business activities and to tender his resignation as cashier of the German-American Bank, be it resolved, that we, the directors of the German-American Bank, in accepting the resignation herewith tendered express our deep sense of regret in losing a valuable bank official and an agreeable business associate; that we recognize in Mr. Pullen not only one of the Purchase Causes Speculation

The recent purchase of the property at 289-291-293 East Water Street, Milwaukee, by Grant Fitch, vice-president of the National Exchange Bank, has caused not a little speculation as to whether it was the intention to eventually move that institution to the location of the new purchase. The consideration paid for the property is said to be about $125,000. It has a frontage of 60 feet and 120 feet depth. Mr. Fitch admits that he has purchased the property but refuses to disclose future plans.

If this has ostensibly been purchased for the National Exchange Bank it will add another of the city's largest financial institutions to what has already been termed "Bankers' Row" in Milwaukee. It is only a few hundred feet south of this that the Wisconsin National Bank is located and also the Wisconsin Trust Company. Just a trifle south is the site of the new home of the Marshall and Ilsley Bank while still further south is the proposed location for the new First National Bank and First Savings and Trust Company buildings. The Marine National and the Milwaukee National banks are only a few doors north of the Fitch purchase while within the two blocks thus embraced there are already a number of bond and brokerage houses.

Oshkosh Bank to Select Plans

Plans for the new building to be erected by the State Bank of Oshkosh will be selected at an early meeting of the board of directors. Specifications will be made without delay and building operations started at once so as to complete the structure before the winter months. A two story building of Oshkosh stone will be erected with a frontage of 36 feet. The structure will be 80 feet in depth.

Edgerton First National Entertains

The directors of the First National Bank of Edgerton gave a dinner recently to the subscribers to the additional stock in the bank. By a recent reorganization the capital is increased from $25,000 to $50,000 which has been placed among Edgerton investors. Covers were laid in the banquet hall for thirty-seven and an excellent menu served. The affair gave the new stockholders an opportunity to meet the officers in a social as well as a business way. The full reorganization will be announced when the necessary papers are received from Washington.

New Bank at Valders

Commissioner of Banking A. E. Kuolt has approved the charter of the Valders State Bank at Valders, Manitowoc county. The new institution is to have $10,000 capital. Otto C. Berge is president and George Renther, cashier.

New Bank Elects Officers

Frank E. Neff of Castle Rock is the president of the new Farmers and Merchants Bank of Muscoda; Ed Schwingle, vice-president, and Ben L. Marcus, cashier. The other directors are William Victorio and Frank Pospichal. The bank is to open for business June 1st. There are fifty-five stockholders.

Hayward Bank Holds Election

At the adjourned meeting of the First National Bank of Hayward the following officers were elected: President, Edward Hines; vice-president, T. S. Whitten; cashier, H. E. Rohlf and assistant cashier, E. E. Rohlf. The directors in addition to the foregoing are J. W. Cochran, Ashland; J. H. Hellwig and J. F. Riordan of Hayward.

Missouri Bankers

Secretary W. F. Keyser, of the Missouri Bankers' Association, has made public the program of the twenty-first annual convention which, as heretofore announced, will take place in Kansas City, Mo., on May 24th and 25th. The various sessions will be held at the Willis Wood Theatre and the headquarters of the delegates will be at the Hotel Baltimore.

President A. O. Wilson will call the convention to order on the morning of May 24th. The address of welcome will be by Darius A. Brown, Mayor of Kansas City. On behalf of the Kansas City Clearing House Association, President J. F. Downing will welcome the visitors. President Wilson will respond and will also at that time deliver his annual address.

Secretary W. F. Keyser and Treasurer R. R. Calkins will next read their annual reports; E. R. Gurney, vice-president of the First National Bank of Fremont, Neb., will deliver an address, after which reports of group chairmen will be heard, and group meetings held.

In the evening the Missouri-Kansas joint meeting will be held, as has been stated before. The men scheduled to speak at the joint meeting are J. F. Downing, president of the Kansas City Clearing House Association; the Hon. David R. Francis, vice-president of the Merchants'-Laclede National Bank, St. Louis, Mo., and ex-governor of Missouri; the Hon. W. J. Bailey, vice-president of the Exchange National Bank, Atchison, Kan., ex-governor of Kansas; the Hon. Franklin MacVeagh, Secretary of the Treasury, and F. O. Watts, president of the American Bankers' Association, Nashville, Tenn.

During the second day's session of the Missouri convention, Judge Charles E. Lobdell, president of the First State Bank of Larned, Kan., will deliver an address; William N. Burgess, El Paso, Tex., will speak on "International Commerce," and Judge I. P. Ryland, of Kansas City, will also speak on a subject to be announced later.

The Kansas City Clearing House Association has under way arrangements for a very elaborate entertainment.

—Special correspondence concerning also

Quietness, but withal the quietness of health, was again the predominating feature in the St. Louis monetary situation throughout all of last week. The banks are unanimous in agreeing that things are not brisk, but the lack of activity is not extreme, nor of the character followed by still further depression. General business is moving along well enough in a routine way, but the volume is not sufficiently large to produce a demand for funds which would be calculated to sharply reduce available cash in vaults of the financial institutions.

Money continues plentiful, and banks specializing on southern business say the demand from that quarter thus far this season has not been up to expectations. It is the consensus of opinion that the year will be a quiet one, one of "wholesome rest" as one banker put it. The near future does not hold out any promise for an increased inquiry for funds, but at least the present pace will be maintained. The nearest relief is the expected activity which will develop as a result of good crops. Throughout the entire winter wheat belt prospects are fairly ideal, almost the best on record for this period. While the government on the April 1st condition showed only 83.3 per cent of normal, marked improvement has taken place since that date, owing to seasonable temperatures and abundant moisture. Reports from all sections are favorable. For instance out in West Texas, where a crop has not been raised for years, the plant is knee high and thriving.

This has had a tendency to stimulate confidence in the Middle West, and a canvass of the Washington Avenue wholesale district developed the information that business continues to gradually expand, showing less timidity than at any time since the last panic. Confidence seems to be taking root with country merchants, and is communicating itself by induction to the manufacturers.

No Successor to Doerr

As yet no successor has been named to Peter J. Doerr, president of the Lafayette Bank, who died suddenly of heart disease last week. It is not known when a new president will be chosen, as the directors of the bank are uncommunicative on that subject. Most of the directors are old men, who have served with the bank for years, and, it is rumored, none wishes to succeed to the presidency owing to sentimental reasons. Henry Ziegenhein, who preceded Peter Doerr, also died suddenly of a heart stroke. No one was appointed on the directory to succeed Mr. Ziegenhein, so that now the local banking fraternity begins to wonder if the little circle will be allowed to contract until none is left. The Lafayette Bank is unique among St. Louis financial institutions. Its shares are the most costly, as the last official bid was $900, but this offer failed to bring out any stock. The holders simply will not sell, neither will they buy. The annual dividend is at the rate of 40 per cent, payable in two installments. The deposits are about $5,000,000, the capital stock $100,000 and the surplus and undivided profits close to $1,000,000. The clientele is largely German, and though the bank is one of the oldest in the city, it is said that money is on deposit there which has never been withdrawn since the first year of the bank's existence. The institution has the reputation of being ultra conservative.

Heavy Tribute has been Paid

Many deaths among bankers have occurred in St. Louis within the past year or two. Besides Henry Ziegenhein and Peter Doerr, presidents of the Lafayette Bank, there were Rufus J. Lackland, president of the Boatmens Bank; G. W. Garrels, president of the Franklin Bank; John Wahl, president of the German Savings Institution; W. B. Wells, vice-president of the Third National and a little further back J. C. VanBlarcon, president of the National Bank of Commerce.

New Trust Company Planned

The National Bank of Commerce is completing plans for a new safe deposit and trust company, which will occupy the new building at Broadway and Pine streets. Both trust company and safe deposit company will be adjuncts of the bank and controlled for the bank stockholders by trusteeship. The plans have been discussed for some time by the officers and executive committee.

Banks Get Tax Reduction

St. Louis bankers are rather jubilant over the local board of equalization's decision to reduce taxation of banks and insurance companies from a basis of 55 per cent to 50 per cent on their returns. This action was taken following a vigorous protest of the banking and insurance interests of the city. The direct cause of the reduction was an opinion by the city counselor upholding a recent decision of the state board of equalization setting the basis for all banks in the state at 50 per cent. Assessor Brinkop was of the opinion that the local board did not have to confirm the decision of the state board, and with his well known propensities for energetic assessment, leaned in the direction of the higher rate. However as the banks doubtless would have carried the matter into the courts, and caused costly and long litigation, the members thought best to let it go at 50 per cent. Many members of the board were in favor of the reduction anyhow, as it would put the St. Louis banks at a decided disadvantage with those of other cities of the state.

Depositors are being Paid

Advices from Oklahoma City are to the effect that the state banking board has practically completed the paying of all depositors in the failed Planters and Mechanics Bank who were at all insistent for their money. Less than $50,000, it is stated, has been called for of a total of $213,000 deposits since the suspension last week. Most of the larger depositors seem to be satisfied that they will eventually receive their money and are willing to wait until such time as the assets can be realized upon. This, if true, will serve to prevent further depletion of the guaranty fund, the exact amount of which even the bank commissioner claims not to know. The Planters and Merchants Bank was taken over by the commissioner last Thursday. Poor management is the only cause assigned for the embarrassment. On March 7th the assets were $323,747, and the undivided profits only $100.48, though the capital stock was $50,000. The officers are A. Gustin, president; A. L. Norfleet, cashier.

Total Returns were Heavy

The banks of St. Louis, together with corporate and insurance companies returned to the city assessor a total taxable amount of approximately $83,000,000. Under the law that official was bound to send to the state board this full amount and report also a taxation at the rate of 100 per cent. The state board usually approves the assessment and it is returned to the city for equalization locally. For years the banks have been paying 55 per cent on their returns, but when the report came back from the state board this year the $83,000,000 had been cut to $41,892,000, and this latter amount will stand. Last year the rate of taxation for St. Louis was $2.22 on the $100 valuation. In fact ever since the abandoning of the scheme to take over the Commonwealth Trust. At the time it was decided to erect the new sixteen-story building on Broadway, announcement was made of the intention to form trust and safe-deposit annexes. The safe deposit plant will be opened soon, but just when the trust company will be formed has not been determined. Two ideas have been considered. One contemplates employing part of the bank's capital in the trust company, and the other using part or all of the surplus.

Walker House Sells Bonds

G. H. Walker and Company has announced that they have sold all but about $200,000 of the $1,188,000 of equipment bonds, issued by the American Refrigerator Transit Company, which owns and operates the refrigerator cars of the Gould railroads. The securities were sold, practically, as soon as they were offered in the market.

Insurance Deal Closed

Arrangements have been made between the Missouri State Life Insurance Company of St. Louis and the Southern Surety Company of Muskogee, Okla., whereby the latter company acquires the accident and health department of the Missouri State Life. General offices will be opened here in the new National Bank of Commerce Building.

MISSOURI ADOPTS BANK PROTECTION LAWS

The Missouri legislature has passed two of the bills recommended by the American Bankers Association.

They are the act to punish the making or use of false statements to obtain credit and the act to punish derogatory statements affecting banking institutions. Certain other bills were passed by the Missouri legislature affecting the financial institutions of the state. One of these is a measure increasing the rates for exinaminations of Missouri state banks and trust companies—a law designed to put the state bank department upon a self-supporting basis. Another law provides for the incorporation of mortgage loan companies with power to loan money on real estate in Missouri only and to issue debentures thereon equal to 90 per cent of the first mortgage loan, with restrictions and limitations; providing also that these companies shall be subject to the examination and control of the bank commissioner, the same as are banks and trust companies.

These bonds bear 6% interest, semi-annual, are retired in 20 years, and are a first mortgage on the lands of the district, and a prior lien against the lands to everything else. The District has been operating 5 years and must now complete its system. The lands within the District are mostly bearing orchards and strawberry fields, and were last year assessed for state and county taxes at $820,701.00. Further information will be furnished by

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

There are two bankers' associations in Kansas. The Kansas Bankers Association is part of the American Bankers Association and the Kansas State Bankers Association grew out of the enactment of the state bank guaranty law two years ago. The Kansas Bankers Association will hold a joint meeting with the Missouri Bankers Association in Kansas City, Mo., May 24th and 25th. The Kansas State Bankers Association held its second annual convention in Kansas City, Kan., Wednesday and Thursday, April 12th and 13th. It was strictly a business affair as most of the bankers who attended will also be present at the joint Missouri and Kansas meeting later which will have various social features.

John R. Mulvane of Topeka, probably the best known banker in Kansas, discussed rediscounts on Wednesday morning. He asked and answered the question of whether rediscounts are an honor or a disgrace to a bank. M. A. Householder, president of the Cherokee State Bank of Columbus, talked on, "Making and Examining Abstracts." State Bank Commissioner J. N. Dolley explained many features of the state deposit guaranty law and H. D. Tucker, cashier of the Eureka Bank, addressed the bankers on the question of "What Can We Do To Elevate the Standard of the State Banks in Kansas?" Obedience to the law was impressed upon the meeting by Justice R. A. Burch of the Kansas supreme court. Legal phases of the banking business were taken up by C. C. K. Scoville president of the Citizens State Bank of Seneca and John E. Wagner, former president of the Citizens Bank of Altoona, told what the association had accomplished. Governor Stubbs also delivered an address on general business conditions in the state.

Yeggmen are Captured

Two men have been arrested near Tulsa, Okla., who are believed to have been implicated in the robbery of the First State Bank of Broken Bow, Okla., recently. Before the men entered the bank they overpowered James Wilson, engineer of the Broken Bow electric lighting plant. They then cut all the wires running from the plant and threw the town into darkness. Blowing the bank safe and securing a small amount of cash the men escaped on a handcar. The men arrested gave the names of Fred Walker and John Bowman and put up a hard fight before being captured.

Mystery in Theft

Kansas City banking circles have been deeply interested in the theft of $100,000 worth of stocks and bonds belonging to Mrs. S. B. Armour and which were held in the safety deposit department of the New England National Bank of Kansas City. The profound mystery that enshrouds this matter is explained on the ground that Mrs. Armour does not wish to prosecute the thief. There is no blame whatever attached to the bank as it was only when Mrs. Armour visited the vaults herself with an attendant and her private secretary that the securities were taken. It is believed that practically all of the property has been returned to Mrs. Armour. She is the widow of Simeon B. Armour, brother of the late P. D. Armour and is very wealthy.

Imboden's History

Leonard Imboden, who with James A. Hill was sentenced in March, 1906, to nine years in the Colorado penitentiary for attempting to wreck the Denver Savings Bank and who has just been paroled, is well known in Kansas City. In 1899 with a total cash capital of $285 Imboden organized a bank in Kansas City and was apparently prospering when the authorities began looking him up. He was sentenced to ten years for alleged forgery but the Missouri supreme court reversed the case and sent it back to the lower courts for trial. After considerable delay the case was dropped and Imboden drifted to Texas where he was sent to the penitentiary for five years for forgery and embezzlement. From Texas Imboden went to Denver where he repeated his operations.

Southwestern Notes

During the waning days of the legislative session at Lincoln, vigorous efforts were made to amend the Nebraska deposit guaranty law but without success. It was feared that any changes in the law at this time might give opportunity to reopen the fight upon the guaranty principle which was recently upheld by the United States supreme court.

Tulsa, Okla., is to have another special booster train to advertise the resources and opportunities of that city. The trip will be begun about May 1st and the itinerary extending over 19 days will include visits to St.

TRACKING GRAFT HIS GAME

Rudolph Spreckels is touring the country trying to interest big men in the graft hunting game, rather than in the killing of harmless beasts in the forest or jungle. At clubs and in interviews he tells how he bagged Abe Ruef and broke up his game of graft which was so deeply entrenched that Abe thought nothing of bringing on street car, public service and industrial strikes so that his confederates could get a huge issue of city bonds at par or less. Quoting James B. Morrow, who has written some clever articles on Spreckels shows how easy it is when you know how and have the money. Mr. Morrow says:

The fact is not denied that Rudolph Spreckels discovered the hideous governmental conditions existing in San Francisco. "Abe" Ruef, just taken to San Quentin prison for a term of fourteen years, would establish the truth if it ever were disputed. Spreckels, acting alone, started the mighty crusade against vice and official corruption. Francis J. Heney, the lawyer, and William J. Burns, the detective, did the spectacular fighting, but Spreckels called them in and financed the revolution. Now he is traveling the country as a militant reformer of business and political methods. He is talking with millionaires, and being of their class—a real brother of the mighty—they give him a respectful, if not always a sympathetic, hearing. By his own word, he is making headway.

The W. J. Burns here named is the big chief of the A. B. A. protective system, the foremost detective, both in character and performance in the world to-day. Even in fiction they haven't produced an equal. He was offered $100,000 cash to "throw the case" in San Francisco and promptly refused. This is the point where most agencies fail—honesty.

It was an editor of a newspaper who spoke to Mr. Spreckels of Burns and Heney and their big work in routing the Oregon land frauds. Mr. Spreckels went at once to Washington to get the services of the two men named. "He told President Roosevelt of the situation and his intentions, saying that he would raise all the money that was required for the detection and the prosecution of the criminals who were plundering and debauching San Francisco. Heney and Burns were then in the service of the national government. Mr. Roosevelt instantly said that he could have them. And that is the way the work began and why Mr. Spreckels turned away from money making to a more important undertaking."

This is a simple tale. Success came through Mr. Burns and Mr. Heney and Mr. Spreckels paid the bills. It is to be hoped he will continue and be successful in enlisting other capitalists in the game.

THE HOUSE ORGAN NUISANCE

Experimentally we have collected thirty-five house organs claiming to cater to banking and financial interests but primarily printed to boost the business of their publishers, or, the private-interests of some place-holding individual. Nearly a third of them claim to be official organs of state bankers' associations and nearly all the balances come from incorporated or private banks. Nearly all of them circulate (with a question mark) gratuitously but two or three of the more pretentious claim to have a genuine subscription list. One of these is said to cost its publishing bank twenty thousand dollars per year above direct income. It lives and is carried on as most of them are, to boost the publisher's business for one thing but to use in securing reserve accounts and business discounts on supplies purchased. Seems small business, when you think of it; buying typewriters and carbon paper from the concern which will take the most of it out in advertising in the bank's house organ. Just as small to filch a reserve account from a neighbor bank by running a "free" ad. in the house organ. On the basis of circulating and influence such an advertisement can do no good and the "consideration" merely is so much "hold-up," or graft for some one. These papers are made up solely from press bureau clippings, cut from the independent papers. There is no doubt that they are burdens to their publishers, and of little good to the public. A few of them have crept into the second class mails on false statements of circulation and character, but they ought to be put out. If banks and supply houses would refuse to help support them by "rebate" advertising they would die out and the atmosphere would be clearer and cleaner for it.

It is announced from Washington that the new Panama canal bonds will be dated June 1st. Only the exact amount of the issue remains undecided, but it is generally understood Mr. MacVeagh retains his original idea to issue $50,000,000.

UNITY IN BANKING

It has not been expected that a currency reform bill could be passed by congress without long and bitter discussion. Evidence that the matter will be both tedious and protracted is shown in the daily reports from Washington.

The business world will not be disappointed, therefore, over the failure to get practical action in the near future. Most likely the subject will have to be threshed out by the leading political parties during the presidential campaign next year, after which congress ought to be ready for decisive action.

While this appears to be the status of the case at present, there is universal belief that the country needs unity in banking as a general policy. Leading financiers everywhere agree on this proposition, as was shown at several recent conferences, and they are supported in the main principle by the greater part of the commercial world.

How sadly this country has missed a possible unity in banking from the days of Alexander Hamilton to the present time, is understood by nearly all business men. Disagreement comes as to methods. For a century and a quarter public men have shied at the bugaboo of a centralized power in providing the nation with a suitable currency. THE CHICAGO BANKER believes that this feeling of alarm is narrowing down and in time will almost wholly disappear. The campaign of education now going forward is having good results. It is the general hope that the nation will be ready to approve such a bill as the financial element can produce in the coming year.

UPHOLDS RAILROAD RIGHTS

Judge Walter H. Sanborn, senior United States circuit judge, eighth judicial circuit, in an exhaustive opinion decided the Minnesota rate cases against the members of the Minnesota state railroad commission on the grounds that the necessary effect of the reductions ordered was substantially to burden and directly to regulate interstate commerce, to create unjust discriminations between localities in Minnesota and those in adjoining states in violation of the commercial clause of the constitution and to take the properties of the railroad companies without just compensation in violation of the fourteenth amendment to the constitution.

NEW JERSEY BANKERS' CONVENTION

Secretary William F. Field, of the New Jersey Bankers Association, announces that the eighth annual convention of the association will be held at the Hotel Chelsea, Atlantic City, Friday and Saturday, May 12th and 13th.

TAFT MAY MEET WITH BANKERS

Senator Root recently escorted a delegation of New York bankers to the White House to invite President Taft to attend the next convention of the New York State Bankers Association at Manhattan Beach, June 22d. The President took the matter under advisement.

Banking Reforms

Columbus, Ohio, April 13.—There has been a satisfactory compromise reached upon the Kennedy banking bill in the house of representatives. This measure is designed to increase the powers of the state banking department so as to prevent further imposition by the wild-cat bankers who have been raiding the rural communities and founding fake state banks.

As originally introduced it gave power to the superintendent to arbitrarily refuse a charter to a bank on the ground of "inexpediency or undesirability." It was thought that this was too wide a range of power. Thereupon an agreement was framed and submitted to-day by Morton Laundon and Thomas E. Monk, of Cleveland, representing the executive committee of the bankers, which greatly modifies this section.

It provides that there may be an appeal from the decision of the superintendent to the governor and attorney-general, and that the superintendent shall be convinced before adverse action on his part that the character and general fitness of the persons named in the charter are not such as to command the confidence of the community in which they propose to locate the bank.

The friends of the bill went even further and offered an amendment to the provision relating to the power of approval of reserve depositories by the superintendent. This gave the bank the same right of appeal.

As these sections were the only objectionable clauses in the bill and then only because they were not safeguarded, it is thought that the opposition will be dissipated. Under its provisions legitimate banking interests will have no difficulty, while the illegitimate will have a troublesome road. The appealing sections will prevent any harm coming to persons who are honest and sincere and are at the time misunderstood by the superintendent of banks. The changes have the approval of Superintendent Baxter, to whom they were submitted.

MERGER PLANS DELAYED

New York, April 13.—Bradley Martin, Jr., president of the Nineteenth Ward Bank, which for some time past, it has been proposed to merge with the Twelfth Ward Bank, has made a statement in which he said that the merger plans are being delayed by the present investigation into the Carnegie Trust Company affairs, as some of the interests that are expected to enter the new institution prefer to await the ending of this matter before any formal announcement is made.

Mr. Martin further stated that he hoped to be able to announce the composition of the board of directors of the new institution early next month, or prior to May 27th, the date set for the many-times adjourned annual meeting of the Nineteenth Ward Bank.

JOLIET BANKER A VISITOR

President C. E. Wilson of Will County National Bank, Joliet, was a visitor at Western Trust and Savings Bank last week. Mr. Wilson has one of the oldest and strongest banks in Illinois and his intimate knowledge of business conditions makes his opinions of especial value. He is an earnest believer in high-class bonds and real estate as security for investments.

Kelsey Chase, state bank examiner, one of the principal speakers at the Minnesota state convention June 21st at Bemidji, is to speak also at group conventions as follows: May 16th, Hastings; May 18th, Appleton; June 7th, New Ulm.

Honor for Cahill

D. W. Cahill, note teller and clerk in charge of foreign exchange with Central Trust Company of Illinois during the past two years, resigned on April 8th to accept the cashiership of the South Side State Bank, located at Forty-Third Street and Cottage Grove Avenue. Mr. Cahill began his banking experience with the Royal Trust Company some ten years ago as a messenger, and before the absorption of that bank by the Central Trust Company of Illinois, had worked his way up to the position of note teller. His many friends in Chicago and his former associates in these two banks wish him every success in his new position.

CHEERFUL FEELING IN OHIO

Asael E. Adams, one of the principal bankers of Youngstown, O., was a visitor at First National, Chicago, the fore part of the week. He reported a cheerful feeling in business circles. Some improvement in manufacturing and jobbing has helped the money market. Mr. Adams is president of the Dollar Savings and Trust Company and vice-president of First National Bank, strong and popular institutions.

TIP ON NEXT CONVENTION PLACE

For the next convention, which will be held in the fall of this year, the association has received invitations from San Antonio, Texas; New Orleans; Richmond, Va., and Atlantic City. These invitations have been extended by the clearing houses and affiliated banks in these various cities, reinforced by urgent invitations from the commercial organizations. The question will be settled by the executive council at its meeting in Nashville in May 2d or 3d, the council having requested at the Los Angeles convention that its executive officers make a recommendation. The four cities have recently been visited by General Secretary Farnsworth.

There can be no question as to the hospitality which will be extended on the part of the bankers in these various cities, nor as to the attractiveness of the cities in the field and in each case peculiarly its own. San Antonio is one of the attractive cities of the Southwest and is now much visited by tourists owing to its delightful climate, three fine hotels, the historic interest attached to the Alamo, its old missions, its government reservations, and more or less of the Mexican type in the city and its surroundings. New Orleans, the Crescent city, is the important seaport of the South, with several fine hotels, and the attractions of an old French city with its Bohemian life; rehabilitated in fine homes, broad streets, good pavements and drives. Richmond, the capital of the confederacy, now one of the modern, thriving, up-to-date cities of the South, rich in colonial, Revolutionary and Civil War history. Atlantic City, with its abundance of hotels and probably the most noted resort in the United States. The council will face the problem of selecting one of these four cities: one which can adequately take care of the members of the association in proper manner and at good hotels, bearing in mind the largely increased attendance at succeeding conventions, without questioning the hospitality of the bankers at these various points.—Col. Farnsworth, in A. B. A. Journal.

CHAPTER RECORD

(Department of Chicago Banker)

An Open Forum Dedicated to the American Institute of Banking in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Systematic Education and Universal Membership

TACOMA CHAPTER

The Northwest chapters are handicapped early in the season by the glorious weather which brings with it the boating, motoring and sundry pastimes which fill the heart of the bank man with expectation and realized joy. This tends to warp the attendance at chapter meetings long before our Eastern friends realize the peril of summer in their work. However, I believe I can truthfully say, speaking for Tacoma's near sister chapters as well, that our load is not altogether one of regret but is carried and lightened by the redoubled energy of the faithful who hold on and boost.

The regular monthly meeting held on the evening of the fourth was largely taken up with the annual election of the board of governors and chapter officers for the coming year. The following were elected: President, W. W. Newschwander of the National Bank of Commerce; vice-president, Geo. E. Dixon, assistant cashier of the Fidelity Trust Company, secretary Virgil W. Fell (re-elected) of the Bank of California, N. A.; treasurer, H. Berg (re-elected) of the Scandinavian-American Bank. New members elected to the board of governors were Geo. E. Dixon, W. W. Newschwander, James W. Lynch and Arthur A. Miller, assistant cashier of the Pacific National Bank.

Mr. Newschwander's speech of acceptance was very interesting as well as encouraging and with the proper support our new president will get the chapter mill grinding busily and well. After listening to short addresses from several other leaders in Tacoma chapter circles the meeting adjourned and scattered out over the city to learn how its individual candidates for mayor of Tacoma had fared in the press-famed recall election.

VIRGIL W. FELL.

SEATTLE MEN GIVE SHOW

On the evenings of the 11th and 12th of April, the stage of the Grand Opera House at Seattle was held by sixty members of Seattle Chapter, American Institute of Banking, in an extravaganza of singing, dancing and black face comedy, entitled "Bankers in Burnt Cork." It was an old time minstrel show, with the regular first part and an olio, with a few modern inventions. The first part contained two ensemble numbers, three ballads, four end songs and numerous specialties. The second part followed with an olio of five vaudeville acts, three of them professional and two recruited from the ranks of the bank men. The feature of the second part was the Currency Quartette and the Venetian Troubadours.

E. G. Norris, vice-president of Seattle Chapter, was interlocutor and sang the base ballad. The baritone and tenor ballads were sung by Chas. More and James Valentine. The end men or jesters were Harry Colwell, Rowell Marshall, Don Fullen, E. P. Burns, H. T. Miller, J. H. Callahan, G. L. Sultan, E. W. Burns, Walter Heath and Tom Lawson.

Few in the audience would have recognized in the actors the polite and immaculate young men who serve them daily without the aid of the handsomely printed libretto. This revealed the identity of each bright particular star; told who rattled the bones with such professional skill and who it was whose darkey dialect was almost too natural to be true. The program also included the songs of the show and the history of the American Institute of Banking and Seattle Chapter by George R. Martin, the chairman of the educational committee of the chapter.

The receipts of the show will be used to procure permanent club rooms for Seattle Chapter.

DEBATE TEAM PICKED

The debate society of Chicago Chapter has been a little hotbed of activity during the past month. Craig B. Hazlewood, assistant secretary of the Union Trust Company gave a talk on "Preparation for Debate" before the society, March 21st. Mr. Hazlewood, not so long ago was a very active and energetic member of the debate society and chairman of the Western Debating Conference. His remarks were opportune and of immense aid to our aspiring orators, especially to those who were preparing for the contest which took place the Tuesday following.

The general chapter meeting of March 28th was turned over to the society, John Drummond presiding. The question for debate was "Resolved, that United States senators should be elected by the people." Messrs. Rich, Ashley, and Coleman spoke on the affirmative side of the question while Messrs. Tood, Kuhn, and Schroeder took the negative. The arguments were presented in such a convincing manner as to render a decision by the judges a somewhat difficult matter. After a considerable wait, during which the crowd was pleasantly entertained with a number of excellent piano selections by Edward Englebrecht of First National, the decision was finally announced by Mr. Hill of the Bankers' Life Insurance Company in favor of the negative. The judges at the same time picked the team which will represent Chicago in the next intercity debate. O. J. Kuhn of First National, W. W. Todd, Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings; and Louis Rich of Illinois Trust and Savings were the fortunate members selected. Mr. Hill devoted a few minutes at the close of the meeting to a sound and interesting talk on public speaking, its benefits to the young man, together with numerous suggestions on its acquirement.

John Drummond, chairman of the debate committee, announces that negotiations with Milwaukee Chapter for a contest next month have been dropped as it is impossible for Milwaukee to get her team together again this year. It may be possible that arrangements can be made with St. Paul Chapter for a debate in the near future and Mr. Drummond is using his best efforts to that end.

RAPID RISE OF MR. KRECH

Alvin W. Krech, who was a Minneapolis resident through youth and early manhood, and who left some years ago to identify himself with New York banking, has brought the control of the capital stock of the Equitable Trust Company of New York, according to advices received by Minneapolis bankers. Mr. Krech is president of the trust company. Of its capital stock, 14,531 shares were held by the Equitable Life Insurance Company, and it is this stock, or a portion of it, that Mr. Krech is reported to have secured. The New York reports say that the price at which the insurance company held it was $500 a share, or $7,265,500.

The trust company has total resources of about $50,000,000.

The acquisition of control of the trust company is the most important news that has been heard from Mr. Krech since he moved to New York, where his rise has been rapid.

Money, Banking and Finance from Chicago Viewpoint

Financial features are developing too slowly to satisfy Chicago bankers, and still the conditions governing the money market are improving. One important fact is that interior bankers are beginning to find employment for their funds in the farming districts.

This is an encouraging turn but it has not gone far enough to stimulate the Chicago money market. Rates are still low, with a majority of loans at 5 per cent and the larger customers getting accommodations at $4\frac{1}{2}$. Real estate loans remain on a 5 per cent basis—that is, gilt edge propositions do not need to pay more than 5 per cent. A few instances are reported where loans were made at $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent, but these cases are exceptional and do not come often enough to make a market. Smaller borrowers pay $5\frac{1}{2}$ to 6 per cent.

Among the most important operations in the international bond market has been the quick absorption of $22,500,000 of Brazilian bonds, issued to supply funds needed in enlarging and improving the harbor of Rio de Janeiro and the completion in France of negotiations by the state of Minas Geraes, Brazil, for contracting a loan of $10,000,000, which made a total of $50,000,000 which this state has borrowed in France within the last 10 months. Among new financing and refinancing operations of American railroads are the sale to banks by the Pere Marquette of $1,024,000 equipment trust 5 per cent bonds, series "A," and $1,088,000 equipment trust 5 per cent bonds, series "B," and the sale by the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha Railway Company of $1,500,000 of Superior Short Line first mortgage 5 per cent bonds.

Chicago banks have assisted in nearly all of the important transactions reported. Concerns having both New York and Chicago offices have been especially fortunate in marketing a large and miscellaneous line of securities.

A. B. Leach and Company are offering \$50,000 Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway Company general mortgage gold 4s, to yield 4.08 per cent; \$100,000 Delaware and Hudson Company first and refunding mortgage gold 4s, to yield 3.89 per cent, \$50,000 San Antonio and Arkansas Pass Railway Company first mortgage gold, guaranteed 4s, to yield 4.75 per cent; \$100,000 Fonda, Johnston and Gloversville Railroad Company first general consolidated refunding mortgage gold $4\frac{1}{2}$ s, to yield 5.25 per cent, and \$50,000 Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company general mortgage gold $3\frac{1}{2}$ s, to yield 4.08 per cent.

Harris, Forbes and Company are offering Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company 5s, due 1937, at $97\frac{1}{2}$ and interest, to yield about 5.15 per cent; Rochester Railway and Light 5s, due 1954, at 101 and interest, to yield 4.95 per cent; Michigan State Telephone first 5s, due 1924, at 100 and interest; Oklahoma Gas and Electric first 5s, due 1929, at $97\frac{1}{2}$ and interest, to yield about $5\frac{1}{4}$ per cent, and Sierra and San Francisco power first 5s, due 1949, at 94 and interest, yield $5\frac{3}{8}$ per cent.

Coffin and Company are offering Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific collateral 4s of 2.002, at about $73\frac{1}{2}$, to yield about 5.50 per cent;

Wabash Railroad refunding and extension 4 per cent bonds of 1956, at about 71; Pere Marquette refunding 4s, due January, 1955, at about $76\frac{1}{2}$, to yield about 5.40 per cent.

Hornblower and Weeks are offering $350,000 Connecticut Valley Lumber Company first mortgage 6 per cent bonds, due August 15, 1933, at par and interest, to yield 6 per cent.

MOVEMENT OF MONEY

Known movements of money for the five days ended with the close of business Wednesday night indicate that the New York banks gained within $64,000 as much net cash as in the six days' period the week previous, or $4,279,000 this week, against $4,343,000 last week. The associated banks gained $5,958,000 from the interior, against $5,533,000 last week, and lost $1,679,000 to the subtreasury, against $1,190,000 lost to that institution last week. The day omitted in this week's calculations (Thursday) is usually one of the largest money receiving and shipping days, but the tendency of the money movements is clearly outlined. The New York banks will probably show a larger gain than above indicated, owing to a debit of $1,704,000 by the subtreasury at the clearing house. This is for larger pension payments.

PLANS OF THE RAILROADS

In the hope of preserving the privilege of securing reduced rates on returned shipments manufacturers and shippers in Chicago are contemplating making a request for further conferences with the railroads, and in the event they are successful it is probable that opposition before the various railroad commissions will be raised against the alleged intention of the carriers entirely to wipe out this system of rate. In a request which has just come before the Nebraska state railroad commission to eliminate provisions in that state for reduced freight charges on defective and damaged returned goods it is believed that a beginning has been made to do away with the rates in the various states where they now exist, following action already taken regarding interstate shipments.

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS

Indiana

Directors of the Andrews State Bank have decided to pay four per cent on all time deposits of more than four months.

Dr. L. E. Maddox has succeeded D. A. Bryson as cashier of the First National Bank, at Montpelier, and will fill that position in the future owing to the ill health of Mr. Bryson.

Workmen are busily engaged in making the improvements to the room in the Hotel Ray block to be occupied by the Shelbyville Trust Company. The concrete footing for the big vault is now being put in.

The banks of Bluffton, Markle, Ossian and several other towns have begun paying 4 per cent on time deposits. The movement may become general in the state.

The Corydon National Bank has moved into its new building, one of the handsomest in southern Indiana. Open house was kept Saturday and a number of banking officials from other places attended the reception.

The fourth banking institution has opened for business in Monticello. The new one, the Farmers State Bank, is the outgrowth of some four or five years' planning. The principal stockholders are J. D. Timmons, Frank J. White, A. A. Anheir, W. F. Brucker, James Lods, L. G. Gustavei and B. B. Baker. The officers of the bank are: J. D. Timmons, president; E. J. White, vice-president, and B. B. Baker, cashier.

FARM LOANS INCREASING

Advices from St. Paul and Minneapolis say that the steady demand for farm loans in Minnesota, the Dakotas and Montana and the apparent loosening of the eastern money market to this form of investment indicate that the period of over-speculation in western lands has passed. Reports from country banks placed the call for farm loans at about 20 per cent greater than at this time last year, all for legitimate investment, and with the speculative element so manifest last spring nowhere apparent now. The Vermont and New Hampshire savings banks have about $20,000,000 invested in western and northwestern farm loans. The insurance companies which a year ago shut down entirely on such loans and afterward resumed moderately are now taking the normal amounts, but with somewhat severer restrictions.

Kansas Prosperous

Kansas banks have been enjoying a season of much prosperity since the new year began. In a little more than three months the deposits have increased $4,500,000. On March 16th last the call showed the total deposits to be $96,254,685. The 869 state banks reporting have a combined capital of $17,050,552 with a combined surplus of $6,179,651 and undivided profits of $2,166,029. Speaking of this showing, J. N. Dolley, state bank commissioner, said:

"The result as shown by the call statement of March 16th is very pleasing indeed. It shows a healthy increase in capital stock, surplus, undivided profits and deposits, a decided decrease in overdrafts and several points' increase as to reserve. The state banks of Kansas were never in better condition than they are to-day and more deserving of the full confidence of our Kansas people. It shows that business is again assuming normal conditions and that we have passed through the stringency and semidull period in commercial and banking channels which was keenly felt in the last month of 1910 and the beginning of 1911."

STANDARD TRUST

The Standard Trust and Savings Bank has been authorized by the state auditor of public accounts to accept and execute trusts and to receive deposits of trust funds. The bank's deposits passed the $3,000,000 mark last week on the day the institution was seven months old.

The Provident Loan Society of St. Paul is about ready to open its doors. It is anti-loan shark.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

"There is no dark spot on the agricultural outlook, so far as I can judge at this time," said Frank A. Vanderlip, while here. He was on his way East and spent the morning in Minneapolis and afternoon in St. Paul. In Minneapolis he went over the St. Louis road terminals with John R. Mitchell, president of the Capital National. At a luncheon in the Minnesota Club were present among others: James J. Hill, Louis W. Hill, Governor A. O. Eberhart, J. R. Mitchell, Ben Baer, W. A. Miller, J. W. Lusk, F. E. Weyerhaeuser, C. T. Jaffray, Perry Harrison, Theodore Wold.

Take School Bonds

St. Paul clearing house banks have taken the $220,000 high school building construction bond issue offered for sale by Comptroller W. H. Farnham without a bid at par. These are thirty-year 4 per cent bonds. The charter of St. Paul prohibits the sale of bonds below par and the interest on these bonds was fixed at 4 per cent. Contracts have been made for construction of high school buildings, which will require the proceeds of these bonds to carry out. The clearing house banks include the First and Second National, the Merchants National, the National German American National and the Scandinavian American Bank of St. Paul.

Minneapolis Bond Problem

Experience of Minneapolis in not selling bonds has been common among cities of high standing, according to C. B. Rich, bond department of the National City Bank, on a visit to the Twin Cities with President Frank A. Vanderlip. "We know of the fact that issues of Minneapolis park and school bonds at 4 per cent were not salable," Mr. Rich said, "and that it was because of the limitations here that provide that Minneapolis bonds may not be sold below par and must not bear more than 4 per cent interest. There has not been a circumstance about it that in the slightest way indicated that the credit of Minneapolis is not good. On the contrary the city's credit is high. But renters of money, if you want to look at it as a rental proposition, do not want to rent their idle money, to a municipality or any other borrower, for 4 per cent a year. They want more, and have been able to get it.

"It is difficult to foresee the future, but the situation is not much different now. Money, for long time investment in bonds, looks for a return greater than your city can offer under the restrictions."

Montana Bankruptcy

Charles F. Chalsma of Dodson is the first Montana banker to take advantage of the national bankruptcy act. He was doing business as Bank of Dodson, unincorporated. Assets are given at $14,000 and liabilities at $23,115. Two secured claims are notes held by the Minnesota National of Minneapolis, $4,000, and Houston State of Houston, Minn., $2,000. The security is customers' notes for $9,000. Due patrons on open accounts is $10,450 and depositors $6,355. Assets are promissory notes and commercial paper.

Optimistic on Crop

Northwestern bankers reporting are optimistic on the crop. T. L. Beiseker, Fessenden, N. D., said: "The crop outlook is fine. We have plenty of moisture and will have a big grain acreage." J. W. Booth, cashier of the First National Bank of Winona, reports: "We are looking forward to a good crop year." W. M. Evans, president of the Worthington National Bank, Worthington, Minn., reported conditions excellent and farmers confident of a good year.

Receives Promotion

J. R. Byers has been made assistant cashier of the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company. He has been with the bank eleven years and last was discount clerk for two years. He was on the list as candidate for election as chapter treasurer, but his advancement cuts him out of the nominations for the bank clerks' organization at the coming election.

Chapter Presidency

John G. MacLean of the Security National is nominee for president of the Minneapolis Chapter of bank clerks. H. E. Cobb, retiring, was not up for re-election. G. G. Struthers, paying teller at the Union State Bank, is nominated for vice-president; Joseph Cameron of the Northwestern for secretary, C. C. I. Norman, Chapman, Stevens and Company, for treasurer. The election is April 25th. The annual dinner is April 22d. at the Commercial Club. E. D. Hulbert, vice-president of the Merchants Loan and Trust, Chicago, speaks on the Aldrich reserve plan from the viewpoint of a state banker. The chapter will take the Lyric Theatre, April 17th and 18th, stock company, and receipts will go to maintenance of club rooms and expenses of delegates to the Rochester meeting in September.

Northwestern Miscellany

L. C. Murdock, formerly with Stevens, Chapman and Company, investments, has been made representative of Thomas J. Bolger Company, with office in St. Paul.

G. A. Lyon, assistant cashier of the Minneapolis First National, returned from Mason City, Iowa, reports arrangements under way for the state bankers' convention there, June 14th-15th, with promise of the largest attendance yet. Twin City bankers will attend the meeting of Group Four, April 27th, at Elkader.

Side by side P. M. Kerst, clearing house examiner, has been working with the national examiner, C. H. Myers. Their paths have not crossed before. They worked on the Northwestern National last week and then started on the First National books. This plan of co-operation resulted from lack of men.

President L. A. Huntoon, Moorhead, will soon name the committees in charge of the next Minnesota state convention at Bemidji, week of June 21st.

PITTSBURGH	CHICAGO	PHILADELPHIA

Pittsburgh

There are now three strong life insurance companies in Pittsburgh—The Pittsburgh Life & Trust, The Reliance and the Standard Life. These companies may in time do for Pittsburgh what the New York Life, The Equitable and the Mutual have done for New York.

President A. C. Dinkey of the Carnegie Steel Company denies he has resigned as president of the company. He states the rumor being circulated regarding his resignation is false, and stated that his relationship with the head of the United States Steel Corporation is very satisfactory.

J. S. & W. S. Kuhn were awarded the issue of $300,000 Allegheny county three year four per cent tax exempt bonds, one of the finest investment issues that has been offered in the Pittsburgh market for months and one that should go very readily in view of the present cheapness of money.

At a special meeting of the stockholders of the Philadelphia Company, Tuesday, an increase in the capital stock from $47,000,000 to $48,400,000 was authorized, making it an increase of $1,400,000. The stockholders also authorized an increase of indebtedness of an equal amount, to be issued into convertible notes, which can be converted into stock of the company.

New business booked by the United States Steel Corporation during March was at the rate of about 35,000 tons daily, compared with 40,775 tons in February. March shipments were very heavy, but notwithstanding that, the month will show a fair increase of unfilled business. Corporation mill operations are now about 72 per cent. The American Steel & Wire Company broke all records for shipments for any month during March and new bookings were at normal rate. Car companies are specifying freely for material.

At a reorganization meeting a few days ago the general office staff of J. S. & W. S. Kuhn, Incorporated, was enlarged to meet the requirements of a growing business. Within the last three months strong and permanent connections have been formed for the company in Europe by L. L. McClelland. Mr. McClelland reported also several important sales of securities while abroad. The company since its organization in February, 1903, has grown steadily, until now it is generally declared to be one of the most progressive bond houses of the country. It has established branch offices in Chicago, Philadelphia and New York, and is interested in Boston through Kuhn, Fisher & Company, Incorporated. It has correspondents in practically every large city in the United States. From a modest beginning the company has reached a position where it is now handling securities amounting to many millions of dollars annually. At the meeting a few days ago the following officers were elected: James S. Kuhn, president, and W. S. Kuhn, vice-president, re-elected; L. L. McClelland, formerly secretary and treasurer, becomes vice-president; James K. Duff, formerly office manager, becomes treasurer, and H. C. Ward was elected secretary. The other new officers are as follows: F. S. Carmack, assistant secretary; J. Gordon North, assistant treasurer; F. D. Glover, manager of sales; G. G. Applegate, assistant manager of sales; S. M. Vockel, manager municipal department and F. O. March, advertising manager. By this reorganization L. L. McClelland will be able to devote more of his time to the larger financial affairs of the company, being now relieved of many of the details. He has been manager of the company since its organization having come to the Kuhn interests about eight years ago from the Commercial National Bank. J. K. Duff, treasurer of the company, left the Peoples Savings Bank in 1908, where he was secretary and treasurer, to become identified with J. S. & W. S. Kuhn. H. C. Ward was formerly treasurer of the Guarantee Title and Trust Company, forming connections with J. S. & W. S. Kuhn last August. J. Gordon North, assistant treasurer, has been with the company almost since its organization. F. D. Glover, F. S. Carmack, and G. G. Applegate are well known to investors in Pittsburgh and vicinity. The municipal department, in charge of S. M. Vockel, is most active and is said to handle as many Pennsylvania municipals as any single agency in the state.

KENTUCKY BANK IS CLOSED

Frankfort, Ky., April 13.—Secretary of State Bruner has directed the Utica State Bank of Daviess county to close its doors and is investigating a report concerning one of the officers.

W. A. Sherrill, the cashier, is a brother of C. W. Sherrill, former cashier of the Roboards State Bank, who is under indictment on the charge of making false reports as to the condition of that bank.

Secretary Bruner said to-day that he had examined the Utica Bank in February and found that Sherrill had overdrawn his account more than $800, and that there was paper in the bank which the banking department of the state did not regard as good collateral. At the time Mr. Bruner took steps to have the bank closed, but the directors promised him that they would see that Sherrill made good his overdrafts and other indebtedness to the bank, and he has a letter dated March 2d saying that this indebtedness of Sherrill had been made good.

William R. Nicholson, president of the Land Title and Trust Company of Philadelphia, has returned from a two months' trip to the Pacific Coast.

E. H. Rollins and Sons and J. S. and W. S. Kuhn, inc., have been awarded $300,000 Allegheny county (Pa.) tax free 4s of 1941, which they are now offering.

Official announcement is made by President Rigg of the Interstate Railway Company that all the subscriptions to the new issue of $1,000,000 cumulative preferred stock of the company have been paid in full.

Cablegram received by relatives announces the death in Paris, of J. Gardner Cassatt, a well known financier of this city and brother of the late A. J. Cassatt, former president of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

Formal demand for an increase in wages from 23 cents per hour to 28 cents, made by the trolley men of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company, was refused, the directors assigning as a reason the fact that the company is not financially able to make an advance at this time.

The Electric Storage Battery Company has sold to the Consolidated Gas, Electric Light and Power Company of Baltimore a storage battery which will be the largest in the world. The weight complete with plates and electrolyte will be 1,079,200 pounds. The battery will be capable of lighting 240,000 tungsten lamps of 20 candle power each for twenty minutes. The battery is intended to be used for emergency purposes.

The stocks and bonds owned by the Lexington and Interurban Railways Company, and pledged as collateral for its $1,569,000 collateral trust 5 per cent bonds, which have been in default since February 1st, were sold at auction, Friday, at the Bourse by Barnes and Lofland, for $600,000.

The purchaser was the newly organized Kentucky Securities Company. The stocks and bonds sold represent the control of the gas, electric light, and ice business in Lexington, Ky., and surrounding towns and cities. The Kentucky Securities Company assumes the operation of these properties. The Lexington and Interurban Railways Company has voted to dissolve. The sale of securities was made under the terms of the collateral trust indenture.

Searching, it is believed, for secret information of the Bethlehem Steel Co., thieves forced their way into the office of that corporation, on the sixteenth floor of the Morris Building, and ransacked every desk in the place, including that of Charles M. Schwab, the president of the corporation. It is understood that a number of papers of considerable value are kept in the offices of the corporation but it is considered doubtful whether documents of such value as a formula would be kept there. That the entrance was effected by a person or persons who hoped to realize a large sum by selling the secret processes to another concern the police are convinced.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, April 12.—During his stay in Spokane, April 3d and 4th, F. A. Vanderlip, of New York, president of the National City Bank of New York, was entertained by local bankers and the Spokane Chamber of Commerce. He was accompanied by Mrs. Vanderlip, H. R. Williams, president of the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound Railroad Company; C. V. Rich, Ames Higgins, his secretary, and W. H. Kiernon of Spokane.

Speaking as the representative of eastern capital Mr. Vanderlip urged the necessity of fair and careful legislation by the people of Washington.

Mr. Vanderlip declared business conditions were sound but that capital was timid and would wait decisions of the supreme court on some big questions, among these being the anti-trust act and the Standard Oil and Tobacco trust cases. With these questions settled he said investors would have a better idea of what they were doing. It would clarify the whole situation.

Mr. Vanderlip was greatly impressed with the entire Northwest. This is not his first trip, but he is taking renewed interest in the country and declared he could see evidence of great advancement.

"One particular form of investment which is popular in the East is irrigation bonds," said Mr. Vanderlip. "They are regarded as safe, and as giving good returns. I would advise any man to get hold of land in the Northwest and hold it for development and advance."

He discussed the Aldrich plan of banking system and the necessity of bank organization in districts to help carry out this plan, believing congress would not pass it unless it was ardently urged by all of the bankers. He is very much in favor of the postal savings system, and is confident that it will not harm banking interests in the slightest degree.

The National City Bank is one of the greatest financial institutions on this continent. It has a capital and surplus of $60,000,000 and about $225,000,000 in deposits. It does a general commercial business, but is remarkable for its business relations with foreign governments having handled Japanese, South American and other bonds for investments in this country.

General Financial News

The Bank of Nez Perce, the oldest financial institution at Nez Perce, Idaho, having been organized over 10 years ago, has passed out of existence, the stockholders liquidating the concern's indebtedness and transferring the deposits and accounts to the Farmer's State Bank. The bank was capitalized at $25,000. O. M. Collins of Uniontown was president and D. V. Dowd of Nez Perce was cashier.

The First National Bank of Walla Walla, Wash., has moved from the Paine building, where for thirty-three years the institution has been conducted, and work will be begun the first of the week remodeling the old building.

The state law which states that banks shall be assessed for the amount of deposits contained in that bank by various depositors will be opposed here according to local bankers. They assert that there is no law that will compel them to give out the amount of deposits held by any one depositor.

Cashier Kincade of the First Bank of White Bluffs, Wash., publishes a statement in which the deposits are shown to amount to more than $25,000. When a bank in a place the size of White Bluffs has accounts with that standing, it shows careful management and cautious investments. The business of the bank has more than doubled in the last year, and with the present prospects, it is expected to grow remarkably fast this year. The community is just beginning to open up to development.

J. L. Mohundro, state bank examiner, announces that the banks of this state are in excellent condition according to the reports of March 7th. That call shows that the state banks are holding a larger reserve than ever before since the banking department was organized.

B. W. Snow reports winter wheat condition 85.4 against 81.3 last year.

Seattle

Plans formed by the directors of the Commercial State of Seattle a year ago, by which that institution is to be converted into a national bank and its capital stock increased from $200,000 to $500,000, are likely to be consummated within the next few weeks. Negotiations have been conducted for some weeks past between certain stockholders of the bank and J. W. Maxwell, former vice-president of the Seattle National, and president of the Commercial Club, which have for their object a reorganization of the Commercial Bank and the election of Mr. Maxwell as its president.

Concerning the plan to make the Commercial a national bank, President Lester W. Lewis, of the bank, said:

"When the Commercial State Bank was organized one year ago and took over the business of the Title Trust Company, it was understood that this was but the first step looking to the conversion of the institution into a national bank. At that time we contemplated increasing the capital stock of the bank to $500,000 with $100,000 surplus. Necessarily we considered enlisting new capital in the bank, but the board of directors has not yet decided how this shall be done or who will do it."

Lester W. Lewis is president, Frank W. Baker, vice-president and William B. Shoemaker, cashier of the Commercial State Bank.

The last statement of the bank shows $200,000 capital stock, $40,000 surplus and deposits of $558,072.

WENATCHEE INVITES WASHINGTON CONVENTION

A meeting of the Washington executive council will be held shortly to decide upon the place and time for this year's convention. A very cordial invitation has been received from the associated bankers of Wenatchee, heartily concurred in by the Wenatchee Commercial Club and the North Central Washington Bankers League, to hold the 1911 convention in Wenatchee, some time during September, when the fruit crop is being harvested and the Wenatchee Valley is at its best.

AMERICA HAS GRAIN SURPLUS

Whatever else may be said of the season's very remarkable movement of prices, one thing is certain—a supply of grain and provisions in excess of consumptive requirements confronts the trade at present. How long it will last or how much lower prices will go is a problem difficult to answer. Bankers, however, are hoping that prices will yield to a point where Europe will become freer buyers. Conditions at present are practically the reverse of those prevailing in the last five years, and prices seem to be working to a generally lower level. There seems to be a surplus of grain and provisions the world over, and should the crops turn out in this country as yesterday's report by the government seemed to indicate, a still lower level of prices may be expected.

Los Angeles

Walter J. Sherwood, who for sixteen years has been a prominent real estate man of Chicago, has become associated with the firm of Swank and Letton, of Los Angeles and has assumed the management of the city homes and lot department. He expects to make Los Angeles his home and has purchased a residence.

T. W. Phelps, who was vice-president of the American National Bank of Los Angeles until the consolidation of that institution with the Citizens National some time ago, and who has been a prominent financial man of the city for many years, died recently.

In the April number of The West Coast Magazine J. A. Graves, vice-president of the Farmers and Merchants National Bank, contributes delightfully interesting "Reminiscences of the San Francisco Bar."

The Moneta Commercial and Savings Bank is ready for business in their new building. The officials of the new institution are C. B. Casler, president; H. L. Harris, vice-president; F. G. Baldrige, cashier. The bank has a capital of $25,000.00.

The National Bank of Alhambra has received its charter for a capital stock of $50,000.00.

As one result of a complete change of personnel and policy of the All Night and Day Bank (which does not keep open all night) it is shown that the deposits have grown from a little more than $800,000, January 1st, to $1,200,000 at this writing. With this increase in the total there has been a decrease in the number of depositors, the flock of persons who do business in small amounts having rapidly diminished as the bank put into effect the real banking rules. Now that the concern is in the hands of men who are affiliated with some of the largest banks in Los Angeles it is not antagonized by nor antagonistic to the clearing house.

IOWA BANKING CHANGE

Former Bank Examiner J. Olson, for twelve years associated with the Winnebago County State Bank, Forest City, Iowa, has bought the banking interests of F. L. Wacholz, who for eighteen years has been associated with First National as assistant cashier and director. Former Cashier R. C. Plummer will be vice-president, B. A. Plummer will be president, and Mr. Olson the cashier. The transfer amounted to about $20,000. Mr. Wacholz will go West.

Minnesota has more than $23,000,000 at interest, bringing in nearly $900,000 a year. The investment is larger than that of any state except Texas. Of this amount there is in the university and school funds $17,558,163. The money is largely the result of sales of lands and timber and ore on state lands. Contracts are out with land settlers for $6,000,000 more. The state has discontinued investing outside its limits.

E. L. Bailey, vice-president of the Bank of Northern California, was found in a cemetery at Redding recently, lying across the graves of his two wives, with a bullet hole in his head and an empty revolver by his side. The following note was found on his body:

"I am weary and worn, and physically and mentally unable to bear the load."

A school savings bank system was formally endorsed by the Board of Education of San Francisco last week, that body adopting a resolution authorizing the establishment of such a system in the department. The arrangement of the details of the banking system is still in the hands of a special committee, of which Director Power is chairman.

The 75th annual report of the Bank of British North America has been received and is being distributed by G. B. Gerrard, of the San Francisco branch agency. This bank, which has its headquarters in London, is under the general management of H. Stikeman, of Montreal, and has some 80 branches and sub-branches scattered throughout the Dominion of Canada from the Province of Quebec to the Yukon district. Branch agencies have been established in the United States, at New York and San Francisco.

A meeting of the directors of the Bank of Yolo was held Saturday for the purpose of electing a successor to the late A. D. Porter, who was president of the institution when he died. The choice was unanimous, and fell upon John Wohlfrom, who was one of the organizers of the bank, and has been vice-president for many years. H. H. Gable was elected vice-president.

CRAIGE LIPPINCOTT'S ACTIVITIES

Craige Lippincott, the millionaire publisher, who committed suicide in Philadelphia was a director of the Farmers and Mechanics National Bank and the Pennsylvania Company for Insurance on Lives.

Des Moines, April 13.—The sudden death of James Watt, president of the German Savings Bank of Des Moines while on a train near Newton, Kansas, en route to Texas, has removed one of the best known bankers in Central Iowa. News of the death of Mr. Watt came as a complete surprise to his relatives and associates in Des Moines. He had left Des Moines in comparatively good health although he complained of not feeling at his best.

The body was taken off the train at Newton and brought back to Des Moines for interment Sunday. Deceased was 69 years old and is survived by his wife and his father, aged 90, who is in precarious health. Mr. Watt had resided in Des Moines for many years. He was for twenty years engaged in the wholesale grocery business but ten years ago, he became identified with the German Savings Bank. He was also interested in the bank at Carlisle and the bank at Beveridge. Mr. Watt had always taken a great interest in his fellowmen. He had been president of the Iowa Humane Society for a number of years. He was also chosen as president of a driving club organized by Des Moines horsemen a short time ago. The funeral was largely attended.

Decision on Taxing Stocks

An important decision involving the rights of owners of corporate stock to offset assessments thereon with personal debts has been given. In the case brought by Morrell against County Treasurer Bentley of Waterloo, the supreme court held that corporation shares of stock are not credits within the meaning of the law and refused the right to deduct debts. In a similar case in Polk county in September, Judge McHenry held to the contrary, so that the decision in the Black Hawk county court is expected to presage that Judge McHenry will be overruled in his decision as to the Des Moines cases. The decision is of much importance to cities and counties and will add not a little to the assessable valuation of each.

Mental Strain Kills

Excessive mental strain is thought to have caused the illness from which P. M. Joice, formerly a well known banker at Lake Mills, died at St. Paul last week. At the time of his death, Joice was under indictment in the federal courts charged with violation of the federal banking laws. He was to have been tried in June at Ft. Dodge. Joice was taken to his bed at Thanksgiving and his death was not unexpected. His downfall was due to heavy investments in land which failed to materialize in values with sufficient rapidity to keep up the payments. He floated bad paper, covering up one questionable transaction with another and another. At the time of his indictment he had disposed of his banking interests at Lake Mills and had removed to St. Paul.

Signs Banking Bill

Governor Carroll has signed the bill passed by the senate and house of representatives fixing a flat rate of five mills on moneys and credits and providing for the assessment of bank stock at 80 per cent of the actual value at the rate of taxation in the district in which the bank is located. The Balluff bill to permit savings banks to invest their funds in real estate outside of Iowa and in real estate in cities of 100,000 or over failed to pass. The senators attacked the bill as a measure to take Iowa money outside the state. However on the roll call, the vote was 23 to 21 with 26 votes necessary to passage. The senators in the towns and cities along the borders of the state were for the bill. A similar measure died in committee at the session two years ago.

Change of Bank Ownership

An important change is announced in the ownership of the Hardin County National and the Hardin County Savings Bank at Eldora. A contract has been drawn up providing that on June 15th, 202 shares of the former and 101 shares of the latter will be transferred from Mrs. Fanny W. Crockett and Lois and Gilman Wisner to Moser Bros. The price is to be $39,000. For many years the institution has been in the hands of the Wisners and has been known as "The Wisner Bank." H. H. Turner, cashier of the Farmers Exchange at Steamboat Rock will become cashier of the Eldora institution after the transfer. S. McKeen Duren, who has been president of the institution and connected with it for forty years will retire at the end of the year.

Another important change is reported from Sanborn where the ownership of the Sanborn State has passed from C. D. and M. W. Ellis of Charles City to Sanborn parties. Ellis and Ellis organized the institution twenty-eight years ago at which time Morton Wilbur, now cashier of the Security Trust and Savings of Charles City, took charge of it until the Security was organized. The Ellis interests will concentrate their efforts in the First National and Security Trust and Savings at Charles City. The transfer occurred April 1st.

Cashier Disappears

George C. Anderson, cashier of the Vincent Savings at Vincent, a small town near Fort Dodge, has disappeared leaving behind him a shortage of $20,000. A bank examiner notified the officials that some of the paper was missing and that some loans had been made on bad security. Anderson when summoned before the directors turned over deeds to his real estate which the directors at that time thought would be sufficient to cover the shortage. After Anderson had gone, it was found that the deeds were not sufficient to make the amount good. Anderson is thought to have been careless in loaning money to relatives in Canada. It is thought that he has gone to the relatives to see if they can assist him in making good his shortage.

Draft Unpaid for Many Years

O. J. Dutton of the bank of Grand Junction was somewhat surprised last week when he was confronted with a draft issued by the bank December 10, 1894. A Des Moines institution had sent it to him to ascertain if it was good. Although Mr. Dutton had issued over 50,000 Chicago drafts in the seventeen years that had elapsed since the one in question was issued he did not hesitate to pronounce the paper O.K.

The BURROUGHS MACHINE is only part of the Burroughs sale—the SERVICE is the other part

BURROUGHS INSPECTION SERVICE—keeping the machine in absolute repair and working order, and furnishing another in case of an accident.

BURROUGHS BUSINESS SYSTEMS SERVICE—the selection, revising and improving of the best ideas of 110,000 Burroughs users, and furnishing to you of those suited to your needs.

BURROUGHS INVENTIONS SERVICE—the constant employment of experts working to perfect a still more perfect machine in YOUR line.

who uses a Burroughs whether he'd part with it for the original price.

Our interest doesn't end with the sale of the machine. The Burroughs method is to insure the service of that machine for all time.

To make Burroughs Service real to you we conduct three important departments.

The new systems of all the users of Burroughs Machines—and especially those of bankers—are turned into our Systems Department and remodelled to meet your needs and sent you—for instance, a new way to get out collection letters quicker and easier. That is Burroughs Systems Service.

Accidents may happen—perhaps to your Burroughs. Our representative (within easy reach) will repair it, and place another machine, free, while doing so. Every now and then he'll clean the parts of the machine, anyway. That is Burroughs Inspection Service.

On one of the floors of our factory, keen-brained men are working out better and more useful machines for you. That is Burroughs Inventions Service.

And consequently you get the uninterrupted service of the machine—a continuous return on your investment.

Just a little suggestion of what the Burroughs can do—a complete resume of the day's dealings in a few minutes at the end of the day is possible with its use.

HIGH RECORD OF EXPORTS

Imports of pig tin and exports of tin plate promise to make their highest record in the fiscal year which ends less than 90 days hence. The eight months' record of tin imports shows a total higher than that of the corresponding period of the former high record year, 1910, and the export record of the eight months' period of the fiscal year 1911, also shows a larger total of tin plate exported than in the corresponding period of the high record year in the outward movement of that article, 1908. The total importation of pig tin in the eight months ending with February, 1911, was 68 million pounds, against 66½ million in the same months of the preceding year, when a new high record was established, and the exports of tin and terne plates in the eight elapsed months of the current fiscal year aggregated 24 million pounds, against less than 12 million in the same months of 1908, the former high record year, and 15 million pounds in the corresponding period last year.

Adding and Listing Machine

THE WALES is the one machine that combines exclusive features of convenient operation with mechanical perfection of construction.

Some of these features are the Self-Correcting Keyboard—that corrects automatically when the right key is pressed—and the Non-add key that adds without printing.

It is the only machine that is perfectly visible at every operation, showing totals and printing, in the same field of vision.

A glance gives you the number as it prints and the total up to that point. In construction the WALES is superior to all others.

5-Year Guarantee

The WALES is the only adding machine with a 5-year guarantee. Why buy an adding machine with a 1-year guarantee when the WALES gives you five times more protection? Ask about our 30-day free trial. Mail the coupon for descriptive literature.

An important decision was recently handed down by the Supreme Court sustaining the position of the Wilkes-Barre stockholders in protecting the WALES against "trust" acquisition.

MONADNOCK BLOCK

MID CITY BANK IS OPEN

The Mid-City Trust and Savings Bank has opened for business in its new six-story building at Madison and Halsted streets. The bank is capitalized at $500,000, and a sufficient surplus has been raised to pay for the building, which will be carried on the books at a nominal figure of $50,000. The officers are: President, William J. Rathje; cashier, Robert Forgan; assistant cashiers, D. B. Kennedy and Herman Schwerdtfeger.

MINNESOTA NOTES

The State Bank of Kilkenny, Minn., has been incorporated at $10,000. Officers are: President, Jacob Lampert; cashier, J. E. Stanby.

Again the Interstate Protective Association has had an inning with yeggmen, who were found guilty at Hudson, Wis., by name as follows: Frank Daniels, alias Francisco Danny; George Williams, John Howe, Frank Mulvaney, John Webb and Frank Smith. John M. Bernhagen, special attorney for the association, attended the trial.

The state bank superintendent has put banking hours into effect at his office. The department force goes to work at 10 A. M. and at 4 P. M. the doors are closed. Kelsey S. Chase, the new incumbent, put the rule into effect.

An entire second floor in the annex to the Security Bank Building erected by William Deering of Chicago has been leased by the bank. This is a mazzanine floor when compared with the bank's regular quarters on the ground floor of the building. It will be utilized for departments that will be moved to make more room for the transit department of the bank. Some heavy cutting will be done to get through the bank wall into the annex and then a stairway will be built. Work will begin Monday. This space will be in addition to that recently gained by moving the Minneapolis Clearing House Association from a room in the bank to the basement of the building.

NEW IOWA SENATOR HERE

United States Senator-Elect W. S. Kenyon of Iowa, upon whom a toga was bestowed Wednesday, arrived in Chicago Thursday and led the government legal forces in resisting the efforts of counsel for the beef packers to overthrow the charges of violating the anti-trust law.

"I'm very happy," said the newly elected senator. "The boys stood by me in this long-drawn-out fight. Just now, however, I am intensely interested in the arguments before Judge Carpenter."

MR. REYNOLDS IN NEW YORK

Geo. M. Reynolds is spending a few days in New York City.

ONE OF THE NEW BOOKS

Bobbs-Merrill Company can always be relied upon to produce something interesting. Their latest output, "The Prodigal Judge" by Vaughan Kester, promises to have all the popularity that is accorded their other books. Unlike most stories from the very variety of interests, the author nevertheless contrives to steer his numerous characters into the desired haven. Taken to North Carolina and Tennessee in the days when Jackson was president, the reader soon finds himself in the midst of all sorts of mystery, adventure, and villainy, and his interest is not allowed to pall for one instant until he has reached the end of the four hundred fifty pages. The cause of all these happenings is an orphan lad called Hannibal, who, left on the doorstep of old General Quintard's home, The Barony, one night, was subsequently adopted by Bob Yancy, a backwoodsman of the rough, big-hearted type who was thoroughly contented with things as they were, as his "nevy," and whose mysterious connection with a large estate led to many attempts at kidnapping him by a gang of nefarious men headed by Murrell, than whom a more able person for evil doing, whether it be horse or slave stealing, counterfeiting, or murder, can scarcely be conceived. As may be ascertained from the title of the book, Judge Slocum Price is the hero, and although there is at first a question as to the fitness of the name to one so very dirty and shabbily clad, who conceived it as his especial duty to be in a state of intoxication whenever he could procure the wherewithal, his claim to this appellation is soon explained by the originality of his portrayal, his optimism and loyalty, and his eventual forswearing of intoxicants and the assumption of his rightful place among his fellowmen. Mr. Kester has not lost sight of romance in his story, and Betty and Carrington afford many a charming, sentimental scene with a happy outcome in spite of Murrell's designs on our heroine. For artistic commingling of humor and thrills with tragedy, and for the skillful working out of a very complex and intricate plot, the story would be hard to equal.

LAURIER PUSHES RECIPROCITY

Ottawa, Ont., April 13.—An unofficial but reliable announcement indicates that the ministry has determined to push the reciprocity debate to a conclusion at the earliest possible date. It is almost three months since the minister of finance brought down the reciprocity agreement in the house of commons. The debate has since then dragged on in the most tiresome way, the evident intention of the government being to allow the opposition the greatest latitude in discussion.

After the adoption of the present resolution the minister of customs will introduce a bill amending the Canadian customs act, and embodying the necessary changes in the act. This bill will have to pass three readings. There being no closure rule in the commons there is practically no limit to the time that may be spent in such discussions. But the government has many ways of forcing action, and it is thoroughly understood here that the program of the government leaders is to do so.

TAFT HONORS NEGRO BANKER

The position of register of the treasury has for a number of years been held by colored men from various sections of the country until it has been designated as one of the choice places that fall to the lot of the colored politician. The President, however, in selecting Hon. James C. Napier, of Nashville, Tenn., has ignored the clamor of the politician and his choice was a business man and one of the finest specimens of the colored race in America. Mr. Napier by profession is a lawyer, but has found time to devote to the business of banking in his home town. He organized the One Cent Savings Bank of Nashville, Tenn., and acted as its first cashier until the institution was fairly launched. He is chairman of the executive committee of both the Colored Bankers Association and the National Negro Business League and a member with President Taft of the Jeans' fund committee.

REDUCE CREDITS ABROAD

International bankers have considerably reduced their credits abroad through the sale of foreign exchange during the recent advance in quotations, but there has been no general calling of foreign loans, as rates abroad still compare favorably with those current here. London is virtually on a $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent basis. Berlin is a shade under 3 per cent and Paris $2\frac{1}{4}$ per cent, while New York call loans cannot be put out as a rule above $2\frac{1}{4}$ per cent. Only 3 per cent is bid in New York for six months' facilities and $3\frac{1}{4}$ for over-the-year accommodations.

BANKERS IN APRIL FIRST JOKE

Kansas City bankers had an experience with an April fool joker which hurt nobody and brought about a good deal of fun at the expense of the credulous financiers. On Saturday, April 1st, after the regular half day's business and finished at the New England National Bank, and President J. F. Downing was well on his way to the Country Club golf links, there began to gather at the bank, officers of other financial institutions who said that they had been invited to luncheon with Mr. Downing. The bankers dropped in by ones and twos and finally by groups. For more than an hour the mystified officers of the New England Bank wondered why Mr. Downing did not return to greet his guests but Mr. Downing himself was far out in the country working up an appetite for a dinner he was giving in the evening. Finally it dawned upon the assembled visitors at the New England National that they had been fooled by somebody and they laughingly dispersed. Later Mr. Downing said he knew absolutely nothing of the invitation.

OUR little bon mot on the Judson-Rickards and Company notification letter wasn't a big hit with either party. Something like the family peacemaker and other well intentioned individuals. To set you all right we give space to a short letter from Robert R. Forgan, secretary of the W. T. Rickards company. It reads:

"WE notice in your issue of Saturday a paragraph referring to a notice sent out by us relative to the retirement of Frank P. Judson from our company, and wish to correct an impression which we believe you have, and which possibly the readers of that paragraph might have, by stating that the notice to which you refer was sent only to the banks in Chicago with which we carry accounts. It is customary for concerns to notify their banks of deposit when an individual who has been authorized to sign checks, notes, etc., withdraws, and such a notice to our banks of deposit was the only notification of any kind sent out by us. Mr. Judson in withdrawing from our company did so of his own accord, and has our best wishes and respect, and we believe that the kindly feelings which we have towards him are reciprocated."

NOT long since Iowa had a love feast at which J. H. Ingwersen spoke on "What's the Matter with Iowa?" The loss of population was the nut which was to be cracked. This paper commented upon it at the time but now comes the Commercial West with its notion of the solution. That good journal says:

"WE think Mr. Ingwersen ducked, or at least 'begged the question,' when he came to the matter of state banking laws. The one great defect in Iowa's banking code is in permitting the existence of private banks; and this point was omitted entirely in Mr. Ingwersen's review. We should like to see the Iowa Bankers Association get behind the bill now before the Iowa legislature bringing private banks under the same supervision as state and savings banks. It is entitled to such support and of all right-minded bankers. Just what this kind of a law would do towards holding Iowa's population, we shall not presume to say, but this is one of the conspicuous things in which the great state of Iowa trails way in the rear."

OF course Iowa has lost "population" (and some deposits) through the tendency of her private bankers to seek more salubrious climates at times.

THIS isn't the main question, however, it appearing to the best minds that Iowa having reached the climax as an agricultural state with the accompanying high prices for lands must develop her manufacturing industries to attract immigration. Iowa leads in the number of banks and raises up young bankers who come to Chicago to astonish the world. A first-class banking law, putting all forms of banking under supervision and inspection would help some, even in Iowa.

WHILE bankers in Illinois are fighting the loan shark evil, bankers in Missouri are said to be petitioning the legislature against the bill to prohibit assignment of wages. Stores in Missouri do a large part of their credit business on such assignments. Thus what is an undoubted evil here is a convenience over there.

IT is understood that the New York Central is trying to bring the A. B. A. convention to Chicago this year. Possibly such things could be overdone, for the travel route isn't the only thing to be considered.

DIRECTORS of the LaGrange (Ill.) State Bank announce the resignation of C. L. Sackett as president. Mr. Sackett has been identified with the bank since its organization. He will retain his interest in the bank and will continue to act as a director. L. C. Bassford was elected president to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Sackett's resignation. H. B. Kilgour will be the active executive officer.

MR. AND MRS. GEO. E. FOREY, of Anderson, Indiana, spent several days in Chicago last week. Mr. Forey is the Indiana representative of the house of Breed and Harrison, Cincinnati, and reports business conditions in Indiana as being satisfactory.

JUDGE FRANK DALE, vice-president of the Guthrie (Okla.) National, called on his old friend, L. D. Skinner, assistant cashier of the Central Trust last Saturday. Judge Dale is a pioneer citizen of Oklahoma and presiding as chief justice of the supreme court of that state for a number of years. The Guthrie National is the oldest national bank in Oklahoma and the judge reports their business as being entirely satisfactory.

EDWARD MORRIS is given credit for the creation of the Mid-City Trust and Savings Bank, installed in a magnificent new home on the West Side on Monday last. The new building is a beauty and the cost is put down at $250,000.

THE new bank building is fireproof, six stories high, and is equipped with modern vaults. W. J. Rathje, for years at the head of the Peoples State Bank, owned by similar interests, Wm. A. Heath, John A. Spoor and other well known men are with Mr. Morris on the board. The first day netted a quarter of a million in deposits.

STATE BANK OF CHICAGO, National City, Fort Dearborn and others sent flowers. Opening day brough out thousands of West Siders to see the new bank in its new home. Hundreds of well known bankers and business men called in and truly it was a gala day for the neighborhood of Halsted and Madison.

JOHN W. GATES (and Charley), John Lambert and John Dupee were joined in conference in a little back room in the Rookery on Monday. Gates said Texas is on the boom but what's the matter with the stock market. Lambert and Dupee had had a fine time in California and liked the new Casaba melons but did not know who had chloroformed the ticker. All three agreed that while business has had a slow-down, times are safe and good.

ELIJAH W. SELLS, surviving member of the accounting firm of Haskins and Sells, which undertook to prepare a report of special assessment ordinances and accounts in 1901, when Carter H. Harrison was mayor, has filed suit against the city for $500,000 damages in the United States circuit court, alleging the city failed to keep its part of the contract. Lack of co-operation, he charges, caused extra expenses.

ONCE more! William J. Burns is the man who picked up the driver who killed Editor Bohm after months of hysteria and failure by the regulars. Lucky A. B. A.

I. H. NAKDIMEN, of Sallisaw, Okla., has written a long reply to the critics of deposit guaranty. Nakdimen is the owner of numerous banks and is thoroughly posted as to past shortcomings and abuses of the law. He makes many strong points and treats his opponents fairly and not abusively as many deposit disputants do.

"ONE MILLION CAPITAL" tells the story of the growth and prosperity of the Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Company since it came under the sway of Mr. Teter. It isn't any amateur's job to build up a big bank in Chicago either.

WE want to be careful in our back-to-the-soil march that it isn't the commercial fertilizer pathway we choose. It's too easy to let in greedy bonding house, safe makers and what-nots into state association circles, and too dad gasted hard to get them out.

S. B. CHAPIN AND COMPANY, Chicago, send out detail of the Chicago Stock Exchanges daily and the service ought to be valuable to the banks particularly.

CASHIER CORBETT, of the Commercial National, Chatsworth, Ill., is sending out some interesting printed matter telling of the bank's removal to new and enlarged quarters.

SOME burglars made a firecracker of a burglarproof safe, down state a few days ago. The banker viewed the wreck and then wrote a hot one to the man who guaranteed it burglar proof. "To be burglar proof," was the answer, "the burglar must be on the inside. If the safe is properly adjusted he cannot get out."

ILLINOIS MANUFACTURERS' ASSOCIATION will give an "Open Hearth" dinner in the Auditorium, April 21st. The charges will be ten dollars a plate and the fun at least a million. It is to be an entire novelty without vaudeville, speeches or stunts. The promise is that a new Chicago record will be set.

LEWIS E. PIERSON (always right) was the host at a dinner at the Waldorf to introduce Louis G. Kaufman to the New York bankers. Kaufman, as all know, did not ride into Wall Street on a broncho, but he came in from Marquette after a bank building career. Now he has amalgamated two old New York banks into one—The Chatham and Phenix National—and still is on his way. He was president of the Michigan bankers and represents that state on the A. B. A. executive council.

MR. PIERSON graced the chairs of the A. B. A., as few could have done, laying down the gavel at Los Angeles. He is kind and generous, even to a fault, as the poet says, and envy is unknown to him. He was the very man to think of what was due to Mr. Kaufman and we promise Mr. Kaufman will not forget.

AMONG the big lights present at the dinner were B. F. Schenck, president of the Liberty National, Edward Earl, president of the National Nassau Bank; Willis G. Nash, president of the Mercantile National; Edwin S. Schenck, president of the Citizens Central National; John T. Sproull, president of the Coal and Iron National; D. M. Morrison, president of the Washington Trust Company and many others, all distinguished in the banking world.

SECRETARY HENRY of the New York Association has beaten the rest of the program fillers to it. He has asked President Taft to speak at the Manhattan convention and may land him.

WE understand that those notes which Sir Anthony so kindly filled out for Robin (ovitch) were not intended by Sir Anthony to be bank notes but bunk notes. Sir Anthony was too easy. He should have a string of banks and trust companies all his very own.

SOCIETY NOTE: F. A. Vanderlip, secretary, valet and maid, were at the Anthracite on Chewsday.

Franklin MacVeagh

Summerville, S. C., April 19.—Franklin MacVeagh, secretary of the treasury, in an address before the South Carolina Bankers Association to-day, told the South that what it needed to increase its prosperity and happiness was a political division.

"There never was a people in a party-governed country that could well afford to be without the rivalries of parties, for the rivalries of parties are the very life of party government," said Mr. MacVeagh. He made a strong plea for independent voting, and held it up as the method by which the South could be released from the dominance of the single party. Mr. MacVeagh told the hearers that now he is a republican, (since he's in the cabinet) but that formerly (until he failed in a race for the U. S. senate from Illinois) he was a democrat.

IMPROVEMENT DOWN STATE

President Frank Trefzgen of Illinois National, Peoria, was among the down state bankers who visited LaSalle Street National, Chicago, Wednesday. He told of a gradual but sure expansion of business in the interior. Agricultural conditions are as fine as could be and a confident feeling pervades all classes.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

ONE of our good friends, down the state, evidently fears that some of us may be lured into supporting Judge Montgomery for chairman of the Illinois council, at the Springfield meeting. He writes thus: "The judge is a fine man but he is in spirit a private banker and rather set in his ideas, and opposed to the modern system along those lines. For that reason it would not be fair to the association to elect him chairman of the council in the guise of an organized banker. If our constitution is to wipe out all lines so that any man is eligible, that would be another thing."

ANOTHER patriot, quite as earnest for the uplift, writes in to suggest that Group Four could fix things to suit him by electing L. A. Goddard to the state council. He then proposes to "start a campaign for Goddard, as chairman of the council for election at the Springfield meeting, and thus be doing the association a real service in electing a representative man."

EVERY one likes these suggestions for they help to make this page interesting. Goddard was to have been "put over" at Cairo but the private bankers pleaded vested rights, as it were, and Mr. Goddard himself threw it to Phillips. Those who know all of this probably are surprised at the Montgomery filibuster. It is headed by Mr. Little who runs the Montgomery private bank at Rushville. The judge is an officer of E. J. Parker's big bank at Quincy. Well, every little helps and the Springfield meeting with Woodrow Wilson and the new constitution in a double bill ought to be a corker.

"JAMES McDONALD of the Hanover," says a daily paper, "is out West studying the clearing house examination problem." Looks queer to see it "McDonald" when everyone knows it only is "Donald." Another curio: "H. E. Otte, president of the Illinois Bankers Association," was quoted at the South Carolina bankers convention as being a strong advocate of deposit guaranty. The phraseology was eloquent, flowing and complimentary, as South Carolina oratory is and ought to be pleasing to Mr. Otte, right or wrong.

MR. DONALD, while here, conferred with James B. McDougal, in charge of local bank examinations under the direction of the Chicago clearing house committee. This system was adopted by Chicago banks at the suggestion of W. T. Fenton, vice-president of the National Bank of the Republic. Mr. Fenton's suggestion was made following the unfortunate experience of the local banks in 1907.

THE financial editor of a leading daily in commenting upon the situation finds that: "there is no doubt that the system of private examinations which thus originated here has done much to establish confidence in the banking methods of this center. Other western cities have since adopted the same system of examinations. New York has been slow to take up with the idea. Meanwhile, western banks have increased their balances and their exchange operations on Chicago. This has led to relatively decreasing importance of New York, as compared with Chicago."

ALLEN FARRELL AYERS, a scion of two of the best known banking families in Jacksonville (Illinois), since January first has been vice-president of the Continental Trust Company at Denver. He is the manager of their bond department. Before leaving Jacksonville he was cashier of the big Farrell Bank at that place. He has been paying a visit at his old home and stopped over a few days in Chicago this week on his way to Denver. Already he is an enthusiastic booster for that famous and growing city.

M. W. TOBEY, cashier of the Stockmen's National at Fort Benton (Montana), is distributing a neat little folder giving a complete history of Fort Benton, which is situated at the head of navigation on the Missouri River, around 5,000 miles from New Orleans. The elevation is nearly 3,000 feet, and from its start as a trading post in 1846 quite a city has developed.

THE site of the old fort is now being beautified and turned into a public park where many of the old fort buildings will be preserved as relics. Originally the settlement was known as Fort Lewis, but was changed in honor of Senator Benton of Missouri from whom it had many favors in the early days. Fort Benton is the county seat of Chouteau county, which alone is large enough for a principality. It contains over 15,000 square miles and is the center of what is known as the "Big Grass Country."

STOCKMEN'S NATIONAL, which fills a large place in the development of the Fort Benton district, was organized in 1880 as a private bank but converted to a national in 1890. It has a capital and surplus of nearly half a million and always has been managed by men who made their money and continued to have their interests in Montana. Chouteau county is so large that the Stockmen's National does a considerable part of its business by mail.

JOHN B. GARDIN, a vice-president of the National City Bank, New York, was one of the speakers at the South Carolina convention this week. Mr. Gardin matriculated from the First National of this city and then joined other young men from Chicago who are managing the biggest New York bank so profitably. His talk was upon "Banking and Commerce" and will be found in another column of this issue.

QUITE a large voice was raised at the Summerville, South Carolina, convention in favor of the guaranty of bank deposits. The speaker was a sort of "John the Baptist, walking in the wilderness," for he appeared to be quite alone.

JOHN D. WALKER was the special advocate and he hails from Sparta (Georgia), and is president of the First National at that place. He also is president of or controls about seventy other banks in Georgia, Alabama, South Carolina, and Florida. In short, he is known as a chain-of-banks man. His address is unusually good and a large part of it will appear in another part of this issue. It is well worth reading.

PRESIDENT WILSON G. HARVEY, of the South Carolina bankers, did not review the banking situation at the Summerville convention as most retiring officials do. He delivered, however, a heart to heart talk and his address, if circulated throughout the state, ought to be productive of great good. He is a great believer in South Carolina and in her citizenship. His ideas followed out would render the state practically ideal and probably put it back to its old time high position of leadership and supremacy.

GEORGE T. BUCKINGHAM, who probably has addressed more bankers' meetings than any other attorney in Illinois, recently delivered an address upon "The Basic Law" before the Illinois Bar Association. If you believe all that he said (and we do), the lawyer's profession is about the biggest thing there is. Col. Buckingham has the great faculty of making his hearers take hold of his arguments and enjoy what he says. He always has been a very strong card on a bankers' program, and probably will be heard from several times this year.

COLONEL BUCKINGHAM has an original article in "The Illinois Statesman," a prospective Illinois magazine, covering that much talked of question, "The Initiative and Referendum." The colonel evidently believes that this new departure in government is a public danger.

ROBERT E. WAIT, secretary of the Arkansas Bankers Association, was so busy with his program that he almost failed to come under the wire with his annual report at the Little Rock convention. The meeting was a great success, however, showing an enrollment of 385, the best ever held in the state.

SINCE the Fort Smith convention last year, Arkansas has had 41 new banks, one of which is a national bank. There have been four mergers and eight failures or liquidations, the failures being among the very smallest banks. The state association has 340 members, a net gain for the year of 21.

MR. WAIT called attention to the fact that the north and northwest districts of the state are very backward about joining the association. He expects the inauguration of the group system will even up matters somewhat. The past year Mr. Wait attended all group meetings and in his own phraseology was "permitted to tell each gathering something about the association and what it is trying to do."

TO get the banks interested in protective work Mr. Wait was fortunate enough to secure W. J. Burns, head of the A. B. A. pro-

Banking Conditions in South Carolina

Wilson G. Harvey, president, presents his annual review at the Summerville convention. A very strong paper

In conformity with a custom which has almost become a mandate, I submit herewith a report for the past year. From a banker's standpoint, the past year has been a gratifying one. In our section we have been signally free from trade disruptions, finances have been steady, profits have been satisfactory, and the money world as we know it, has pursued the even tenor of its way. Our association has prospered and its good work has been manifest in divers ways.

The report of the secretary and treasurer will deal particularly with the statistical and financial features and the report of the executive council will treat of our administrative work since our last convention. Inasmuch as the chairman of the legislative committee will make a report, I hesitate to treat on matters of legislation for fear of encroaching on his preserves. It will be seen that a report from the president is therefore almost a matter of supererogation. There are however a few general matters which I can consistently call to your attention. Permit me to take this opportunity to thank the members of the association, for the honor bestowed upon me in making me its executive officer. It has been a great pleasure to me, and I have felt a sense of pride and gratification at being the president of this fine body of South Carolinians. I shall always cherish the honor and feel deeply indebted to you one and all.

The minutes of our last convention did not clearly define just what was intended in the matter of the appointment of a legislative committee. My impression was that it was the purpose of the convention to have a committee of five members, to be appointed (the first year) for a period of 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5 years respectively, so that one vacancy would occur each year, thus making the committee in a measure a perpetual body and permitting it to continue from year to year the advocacy of measures which seemed to it wise and desirable. I therefore appointed as members of the committee the following, two being from national and three from the state banks.

One year, F. F. Capers, treasurer Piedmont Savings & Investment Company, Greenville, S. C.; two years, J. P. Matthews, cashier Palmetto National, Columbia, S. C.; three years, H. W. Fraser, cashier Peoples, Georgetown, S. C.; four years, D. A. Spivey, cashier First National, Conway, S. C., and five years, B. Hart Moss, president Edisto Savings, Orangeburg, S. C.

Giles L. Wilson, the state bank examiner, having been appointed a national bank examiner, resigned his office entailing on the executive council the recommendation of his successor, the choice falling upon B. J. Rhame, who has so ably discharged the duties of assistant examiner since the act creating the office was enacted. I feel assured that each of us rejoices in the selection of Mr. Wilson as national bank examiner, while we sincerely regret the severance of his official connection with the state banks. As a bank examiner Mr. Wilson has been most acceptable to the bankers of this state, being courteous and considerate in his dealings and broad and liberal in his construction of the powers with which he was invested. Mr. Wilson also tendered his resignation as secretary and treasurer of this association, but by resolution of the executive council the president communicated with the comptroller of the currency and secured permission for Mr. Wilson to retain his position until this convention, with the result that he has remained in harness discharging his duties as such in his usual most satisfactory manner. Permit me at this time to pay a tribute to his services to this association. We owe a lasting debt to him for the work he has done during the past years.

Finding the South Carolina Bankers Association a struggling weakling he supplied it with vigor, enthusiasm and energy and leaves it today one of the best organized and most flourishing of all the state associations in this country. He has been the means of bringing the banks of South Carolina into closer union, and brought the association and some of its members prominently before the country and has ranked the association among the very first of the associations in the United States. We shall miss his master hand and shall look back with pride and pleasure to the days when he was the moving spirit of the association work in this state.

It is my sad duty to officially announce the death of Col. D. D. McColl, our late president, which occurred at his home in Bennettsville, Mich. We all recall the many graces of heart and mind which so endeared him to each of us.

We felt a sense of real pride in having one so rich in honors and in years, the embodiment of South Carolina's best citizenship, as president of this association. We each sustained a personal loss in his passing away. Kindly and courteous, manly and honest, unswerving and unfaltering, he was a beacon light for our younger generation. He is the first of our past officers to cross the river and rest from his labors and leaves behind him a rich heritage in an honored and respected name. Upon being informed of his death a floral offering was forwarded to his family in the name of the association as an evidence of the sympathy which we felt for them in the great bereavement which was theirs.

Our association has done much for the banking interest of this state during its 11 years of existence, but although we are united in a general way the banks are as far apart in other ways as if there was no common purpose or union.

It seems to me that we could make our organization a more effective force if we adopted certain forms and each member was governed by certain general laws or policies. For instance, if we worked to the end of adopting a check of uniform size and style; I do not mean as regards type and color or design, but as far as practicable have the checks used by our several banks of uniform size and in the design let the numerals be located on the right hand side of the check. Then again a committee might be appointed to look into the advisability of recommending certain general rules and policies to be followed in the handling of drafts or items.

This association should be in a measure a clearing house association, not for the purpose of clearing checks but of making us act in concert in those matters, which will result in expediency or economy of either time, money or labor. It has also occurred to me that we should give some thought to the custom which is prevalent of intermixing distinct departments of our banks, with the result that the profit feature is more a matter of guess work than of actual knowledge. For instance the policy of eliminating exchange charges for A provided A eliminates exchange charges for you; of handling B's items without exchange in lieu of balances B leaves with you, etc. In these trades it is hardly likely that both parties are profiting thereby, somebody is getting the best of the bargain. Would it not be well to let every department stand on its own merit? As long as swapping sources of profit continues, so long will our books fail to show the actual profit from certain departments and likewise fail to show what other departments are really costing.

It has been said that the worst men often give the best advice and bearing this in mind I purpose briefly urging upon the banks to comply with the banking laws of the state. These laws are wholesome and for the best interest of the banks. Following a long period of state wide laxity, during which each bank was a law unto itself, it is difficult for some to get into the habit of strict compliance with laws which seem to be unnecessarily rigid, but it is due to ourselves that we from month to month demonstrate our purpose of more strictly complying with the laws. By so doing we will in a comparatively short while be within the legal requirements and thus break away from conditions or practices or policies, which embarrass the bank examiner and are not really justified under the law.

I am pleased that Mr. Williamson has accepted an assignment to speak on this topic. No one is better qualified than he and I believe that what he says will be of interest and benefit to us all.

Having thus treated briefly of our experiences of the past a word or two of the future may not be inappropriate. "Young man, go West" was a trite saying decades ago, but the slogan of the country to-day is "Look to the South." The trend of business is southward, the development of the country is southward, the eyes of the nation to-day are southward and the central figure in this attractive field is our beloved and richly blessed state. Rich in her agricultural resources, with her cotton fields, her truck farms, her rice plantations, her cotton mills, her manufacturing interests, the soil of our state offers a rich source of wealth to our people if the opportunities are grasped.

John E. Gardin of New York delivers an able talk at the Summerville convention on Banking and Commerce in close relationship

The bill of exchange, as we know it to-day, has changed but little in form or in its essentials for many centuries. Its origin may be traced to the persecution of a people.

The Jewish race, which was driven out of country after country, was forced by this circumstance to hold its property in a mobile form so that it might be easily transferred from place to place. This being generally understood, it became customary at an early period, when demand arose for the remittance of funds from one country to another, to apply to the Jews for an order in settlement of the amounts required.

International commerce owes its first genuine impetus to this medium of exchange.

The next impetus came through the Crusades. The religious enthusiasm of the middle ages, exemplified by this movement, opened the lanes of travel north and south, and, with the return of the valiant defenders of the Cross, who had been so deeply impressed by the splendors of the Orient, the eyes of Europe were opened to the possibilities of trade beyond the previously known limits and outside the beaten paths of centuries. There came a change, and with it there was created a higher standard of living, which called for fabrics and products found only in foreign lands. Thus originated the Hanseatic League, a combination of traders, who, in their dealings with the European countries and the Orient, followed the routes of the Crusaders to the point of embarkation in the south of Italy. This league waxed stronger and stronger in power until it assumed an autonomy which, for cohesion and strength rivaled that of the Holy Roman Empire itself. Their trade emporiums were found everywhere, and even to this day the free cities of Hamburg and Bremen mark the splendid achievements of that body of merchants. They were merchants in the real sense of the word, known, not alone for their aggressiveness and fearlessness in trade, but for their deeds of valor on land and sea in protecting their rights against the demands and tolls of robber barons, predatory rulers, and pirates.

In the city of London they had their principal trade center, known as the Steel Yard. Incidentally, it is interesting to know that one of the standard forms of scales in commercial use is known to-day by the name of that place—the steelyard. Shut off from the rest of the city, they had their own laws, trade customs and their own money. England also owes the denomination of its monetary system to this coterie of trades-people and their fair dealing methods. Their money unit was the pound of silver and was known the world over actually to contain one full pound of pure silver as distinguished from the adulterated coinage of practically every country in the civilized world. Hence, when contracts were made, the consideration was the pound of Esterlings or Strangers, and the English coinage has since been known as the pound sterling—the "Pound of the Strangers."

A steelyard is the counterpart of the ancient Roman scale, called by them a trutina. The symbol for the pound sterling is the initial letter of the Latin livra, which meant a balance or a pair of scales. The equivalent of livra was in Greek talanton, whence we have the ancient Greek unit of value, the talent.

Among the Greeks it was an early practice to weigh out the sums of money to be paid, so the talent came to signify a definite weight of money, which varied however in different states of Greece and at different times, but the term became fixed in the language and in commerce. It meant the same, or implied the same idea, that livra did in Latin, a balance or scales of measure recognized as standard and used in trade.

We thus see not only whence originated the symbol which represents the pound sterling, but also why that particular mark should denote a pound and why that pound should be called "sterling." We see also why the instrument for measuring the weight of a pound accurately and reliably should be called a "steelyard"; because it was the scale used and accepted as standard by the "strangers" and merchants at the Steel Yard. All these familiar trade terms are honorably and firmly grounded in our language and are in common usage to-day because of the high standard of honesty and fair dealing practiced by the Hanseatic "strangers."

London, as I have said, was the central emporium of the enormous trade carried on by these merchants. London to-day owes much of its commercial supremacy to the foundation thus laid. London is not only the center of the financial world, but is also the center for clearing the world's commercial transactions. It is an interesting thing to scan the commercial advertisements of the London papers where sales of commodities are announced. Every known commodity is mentioned, among them many which the majority of us have never heard of before. The London banker is the most powerful banker on earth, and his influence is felt throughout the world of trade.

The banking system whereunder this power is exercised is now the subject of more or less criticism on the part of Englishmen themselves. The system may not be perfect, and may need revision, still it has stood the test of time. The strength of London as the financial center does not lie alone in the magic name of "The Bank of England," but is to be found in that wonderful group of joint stock banks surrounding it, and which gives it great strength and support. In the mere matter of figures there are several institutions which far exceed in size the Bank of England; but it must be borne in mind that this institution merely acts as a clearing house and as a reserve depository for the banks supporting it and of which it is merely the instrument by which the movement of money is effected, and the mouthpiece by which the financial policy of the aggregation of banks finds expression. A peculiar circumstance is to be found in the organization of its directorate. None of the directors are connected directly with a joint stock bank, but they are drawn from the merchant class, thus assuring a commercial aspect to the governing body. The power of the bank as a controlling agency in the movement of gold would not be nearly so great were it not for the establishment of a fundamental principle in economics through the efforts of a celebrated English lawyer, Jeremy Bentham, in the abolition of usury laws. This was a hard struggle, but Mr. Bentham finally accomplished it by the use of an epigrammatic argument to the effect that if, legally, a maximum rate of interest could only be charged, then surely a minimum should be established below which no one would be allowed to borrow. The abrogation of the usury laws gave the financial institutions of England at once controlling power over the money markets of the world, inasmuch as it enabled them, or the bank, as their instrument, to raise the rate of interest to any rate or to lower it at convenience in order to control the flow of money back and forth. With usury laws in effect, it can be readily seen that this control could be exercised up to a certain point only; but with these out of the way, it has been no unusual thing in the past to see the Bank of England rate raised to 10 per cent in times of stress, in order to bring in gold.

The interest rate is the one thing which controls the destinies of the monetary centers. At one time it was considered by religious enthusiasts that to exact interest was sinful, and to quote the words of St. Augustine, "for an inanimate object to produce fruit was abhorrent in the eyes of the Creator." We may be thankful that views in this respect have changed, but we ought to go further and work towards an absolute abolishment of our usury laws, inasmuch as they operate against the true interests of the commercial community and leave our country often at the mercy of those enjoying more enlightened financial laws.

The Charter of the Bank of England which expires in 1912, at which time some revision may be found necessary or desirable, inasmuch as conditions have changed in England since the charter was granted, and coming at a time when we ourselves are engaged in a struggle for reform, it will be instructive to compare the result of these efforts at reformation.

Various reforms in connection with the Bank of England have been advocated and among them it is recommended that a larger supply of gold be held in its reserve. During the last ten years the stock of gold held against liabilities has increased only 10 per cent, while the increase in other countries has been in quite a different ratio. Thus France shows an increase of 40 per cent; Italy, 217 per cent; Japan, 251 per cent; Russia, 72 per cent; and

By C. C. Burford

The old banking house of John Warner and Company of Clinton has left the ranks of the private banks and has become an incorporated institution. Established in 1867 the bank has had an enviable reputation as a conservative institution and the financial standing of John Warner and Company has never been doubted by the people of Clinton and DeWitt county for a moment. The bank is now a state bank having recently been granted a charter by the state auditor. The name of the new bank will be The John Warner Bank, Incorporated. The idea of the management of the bank was to preserve the name of the founder and first president.

The bank was established in 1867 by Dr. John Warner. He was a country doctor of the old school type who established himself as a settlement physician at Mount Pleasant, now Farmer City, near Clinton, in 1844. At that time central Illinois was indeed a wilderness and the country doctor was forced to ride horseback many weary miles to see his scattered patients. These rides must have impressed Dr. Warner with the value of land for he at length abandoned the medical profession and established a private bank in Clinton and began to buy all the cheap Illinois land which he could hold. He spent thirty-eight years in this bank and died in 1905. The bank was uppermost in his mind at all times and he was there until a few hours before his death. His son, Vespasian Warner, former congressman and commissioner of pensions, is president of the bank and the latter's son, John Warner, is assistant cashier. John Q. Lewis is the cashier. The bank will occupy the newly remodeled room of the old bank where every convenience is provided.

Bankers, Secure This Pamphlet

Bankers of Illinois who are interested in the greatest problem before the farmers and bankers of the state should secure the address of William C. Brown, president of the New York Central lines, on "What is the Future of Agriculture in Illinois." The address was delivered at the Founders' Day Exercises of Knox College at Galesburg and has since been issued in pamphlet form. The utterances of President Brown along the lines of the conservation of our natural resources have always aroused attention and in this address he makes a strong appeal to the farmers of the state to rally to the support of the college of agriculture of the University of Illinois. The address may be secured from the officers of the Illinois Bankers Association.

Butler Still in Jail

E. W. Butler has found it very difficult if not impossible to secure bail so as to get out of the county jail at Peoria. A surety company of Chicago has refused to aid him and individual bail must be furnished. If he fails to secure this assistance he will lie in the jail until the May term of court. He has been doing ordinary prisoner's duties about the jail since his confinement began.

Peoria Cashier Resigns

Elwood A. Cole, cashier of the Commercial-German National Bank of Peoria, has resigned that position to become treasurer of the Avery Company of the same city. Mr. Cole has been connected with Peoria banks since 1882. He began as a messenger in the private bank of Callender, Ayres and Company, and remained with this bank and its consolidations which later became the Commercial National as teller and cashier until the present time. In 1900 he was made cashier and retained this position after the union of the Commercial National with the German-American National. He will retain his position as a director of the institution. The change will become effective May 1st.

Illinois Notes

Edward Pallissard, a wealthy French resident of Kankakee county, and a director in the First National of St. Anne, took his life a few days ago by hanging himself in his barn. It is said that worry over the absence of his youngest daughter in Montana caused the deed. John P. Pallissard, state's attorney of Iroquois county, is a son.

A charter has been issued for the establishment of a new state bank at Saybrook, near Bloomington. The capital will be $25,000. This will be the third bank for a village of one thousand people. The two banks now in operation there are owned by one firm, Means, Schureman and Rowe. A merger of two of these banks is expected.

Illinois lodges of Modern Woodmen of America are working hard for the election of D. S. Myers of Pontiac for the position of head banker of the order. Mr. Myers is president of the Pontiac State Bank. J. V. Curran of Ottumwa, Iowa, is another candidate and the national convention which is to be held in May at Buffalo will witness a lively race for the office of head banker.

Frank E. Rupert, for twenty-five years president of the Farmers National of Pekin, died at his home in that city Sunday, April 16th. He was seventy-one years old.

The bank of Henry Denhart and Company, of Washington, Ill., will soon be enlarged by a large addition.

DEMOCRATIC BANKER'S VISIT

S. O. Fisher, of Bay City, Mich., a democratic leader and president of Lumberman's State Bank, was a visitor at Fort Dearborn National in Chicago a few days ago. Mr. Fisher is in the most peculiar position of any man in Michigan. He is a loyal party man and at the same time a believer in a protective tariff and a central banking power. So far as his influence can be used effectively he will urge democrats to shun free trade and to work out a currency plan in harmony with the views set forth by leading bankers in recent conferences. Mr. Fisher is a man of great energy and has made a fortune in business. He is recognized at Bay City as a leader on public questions.

TELLS OF PUBLIC CONFIDENCE

President Frank Y. Locke of Security Trust Company, St. Paul, was a visitor at Chicago banks Monday. He told of an improvement in business in his section and said there was general confidence among the people. There will be an increased flax acreage in Minnesota and the Dakotas this year. The wheat acreage will be normal.

CORRESPONDENCE INVITED

A. B. C. of Aldrich Plan

Charles H. Huttig, chairman of the big council and member of the currency commission, gives in simplified form the gist of the situation

The general stock of money in the United States consists approximately of $1,730,000,000 in gold and gold certificates; $721,000,000 in silver and silver certificates; $726,000,000 national bank notes and $346,000,000 United States notes or greenbacks, making the total volume about $3,500,000,000. There are several criticisms to be lodged against our present monetary system, the most important one being that our volume of money does not expand and contract to conform with the requirements of business and crop-moving demands. It is rigid and inflexible, and in times of great prosperity when the prices of securities and commodities are high and the turnover of goods is very active, there is an expansion of credits which is out of safe proportion to the volume of money, and this condition manifests itself in high interest rates, a scarcity of loanable funds, and a lack of investment capital. In Canada, for instance, an unusual demand for money and credits is met by an expansion in the volume of Canadian bank-note issues, and the fluctuations in the volume of money in that country for 12 months amount to about 35 per cent. In other words, in Canada as well as in other leading civilized nations of the world, the supply of money nicely adjusts itself to the requirements of business, whereas in the United States, because of the non-elasticity of our currency, business must conform to the volume of money.

It is now proposed by the 'Aldrich plan to create a reserve association with headquarters at Washington, D. C., with a capital of approximately $300,000,000, the shares of which are to be owned by national banks of the United States, limiting the interest of any bank in the central institution, however, to an amount equal to 20 per cent of the paid-in capital of the subscribing bank. It is further stipulated that the United States shall be divided into 15 districts and a branch of the reserve association located in each district. The board of directors of the association shall consist of 45 in number, of which six are to be ex officio members, namely, the governor of the reserve association, two deputy governors, the secretary of the treasury, the secretary of commerce and labor, and the comptroller of the currency. Fifteen of the board are to be elected by the board of directors of each branch of the reserve association, and 12 more to be elected by the banks embraced in those districts. The board as thus constituted shall select 12 additional members, who shall fairly represent the commercial, industrial and agricultural interests of the country, and shall not be officers of banks. It will be this body which will control the affairs and the destiny of this great central financial institution. It will be observed that the various sections of the United States will be represented on the board of directors, based on the banking capital of the different localities. In this way it is confidently believed that neither politics or the so-called Wall Street control can ever gain a foothold—in fact, the very functions of the bank and the limitations placed on its dividends to shareholders (which are 5 per cent) would preclude the incentive for control. There is a further safeguard in the fact that the holding of shares by any one interest is limited as above indicated to 20 per cent of a subscribing bank's capital. The privileges and advantages of the reserve association shall be equally extended to every national bank which becomes identified with the association in the above referred to manner.

This central association shall be the depository for the government of the United States and all disbursements by the government shall be made through it. Moneys deposited by national banks with it shall be treated as legal reserve for such depositing banks the same as the cash in the bank's vaults. The reserve association will rediscount notes and bills of exchange arising out of commercial transactions for its customers, and the proceeds of such discounts will be either passed to the credit of the borrower on its books or the reserve association's notes in denominations of $5 and upwards will be given in settlement at the option of the borrower. By this operation the desired elasticity in our money and credits is secured. The reserve association will be permitted to issue its notes under certain reasonable limitations and restrictions as to quantity, and based on security of one-third gold and two-thirds commercial notes.

The plan is a combination of the central bank of Europe and the clearing house association system of this country, and a careful study of it develops the fact that it is well adapted to meet the diversified demands of our people.

IMPORTANT RAILWAY ACT

The Minnesota house of representatives has passed the Cashman bill, which provides that railroad freight rates shall be based upon actual mileage. This bill, if enacted, will wipe out the laws which gave rise to litigation resulting in the decision of the United States Circuit Court last week that the state commodity and merchandise laws are unconstitutional.

Banking Opinion

Bankers now are free to admit that the proposed tariff revision is having a serious effect on the country's business. Neither currency legislation nor the supreme court's probable attitude on the trusts is having anything like the influence on trade that tariff uncertainty is. "The country has adopted a waiting policy," said Vice-President E. D. Hulburt of Merchants Loan and Trust to a CHICAGO BANKER representative the fore part of the week.

"It is partly a desire to learn the supreme court's attitude on corporation laws that affects business, but chiefly it is the uncertainty as to what congress will do. While manufacturers and jobbers may not be afraid of revision downward they will have to see how far congress will go before their business can be adjusted.

"Trade is retarded because people do not know what the next tariff revision will amount to nor when it will come. It is something that cannot be discounted because not even congress itself can tell at present what is going to be done. The house is supposed to lean toward a sweeping reduction of duties, but the senate is likely to stand firmly for the tariff. If anything is done in the next two years it will be compromise legislation.

"That leaves the business world in the dark and it accounts in large measure for the hesitation in the manufacturing of wares as well as in mercantile buying stocks are low both with wholesalers and retailers. Merchants are afraid to buy extensively and manufacturers are afraid to produce goods beyond absolutely certain requirements. There is no distress in the country but trade is likely to remain dull until crop moving approaches. Some relief might also be gained through a speedy adjournment of congress.

"Money remains idle and the rate of interest weak owing to the conditions mentioned. Agricultural activity is helping the country banks but it is not yet pronounced enough to help financial interests in the larger cities."

Seattle Men Here

R. V. Ankeny, cashier Seattle National; J. A. Swallow, cashier National Bank of Commerce, Seattle; D. H. Moss, vice-president First National of Seattle, and J. T. McVay, cashier Metropolitan Bank of Seattle, were visitors at Continental-Commercial here the fore part of the week. The arrival of four bankers from the far northern metropolis on one day led to much speculation as to the object of their visit. They were not here to buy a bank however, but largely to look into the new transit plan and to urge their friends to attend the Western conventions as largely as possible.

W. T. Kemper, president of the Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City has been on a tour of inspection in Kansas.

If you want to buy, sell or absorb a bank or insurance company, send for me. I will make preliminary negotiations secretly and diplomatically. Everything confidential in my office. All negotiations conducted personally. Nothing intrusted to the mail.

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER By Mortimer I. Stevens

WISCONSIN

There appears to have been some falling off in the general line of business during the past week though this is not indicated in the daily clearings of Milwaukee banks which holds well up to the levels established at this time one year ago. However, manufacturers in some of the smaller lines and retail merchants are commencing to complain that business is not what it should be at this period of the year. The larger manufacturers and notably those in the iron and steel trades say that there is every indication of increased business and that their orders for the present are sufficient to insure running full time.

The hue and cry raised several weeks ago by the daily papers inimical to the socialist rule of Milwaukee anent the thousands of men supposed to be unemployed in this city is refuted in the work of the free employment bureau established by the municipal government. During the first few days that this bureau was in force it was difficult to find positions for the men applying but as soon as manufacturers became conversant with the work the tables have been turned until there are now more jobs floating around than there are men to fill them. This would make it appear that Milwaukee is not experiencing any dullness in any particular line of trade and that there is a good year in store.

Oliver C. Fuller will Preside

Oliver C. Fuller, president of the Wisconsin Trust Company, will preside and act as toastmaster at the big trust company banquet to be given in the ball-room of the Waldorf-Astoria, New York City, on May 5th. Mr. Fuller is president of the trust company section of the American Bankers Association. This will be the largest and one of the most important gatherings of trust company representatives ever held. According to Mr. Fuller, acceptances already received indicate that there will be between 500 and 600 at the banquet. Invitations have been sent to President Taft, Vice-President Sherman and the governors of many states. The speakers will be among the most prominent men in financial circles in the country.

Convention and Group Meetings

The time for the annual state convention of the Wisconsin Bankers Association is drawing near and the plans for various parts of the program are being put into shape though as yet the various committees do not care to make public their plans. The convention in Milwaukee will cover two days, July 12th-13th, and it is now intended to hold but one long business session each day thus enabling Milwaukee hosts to entertain their many visitors. A lake trip and a closing ball are talked of as part of the features to be provided.

At least one prominent speaker will be brought to Milwaukee, and unless present plans miscarry he will be a man of national reputation whose presence will add much to the value of the convention and attract many bankers from Chicago and other near-by large cities.

Group No. two will hold its annual meeting at Madison, the date being set for May 13th and an interesting and instructive program is being prepared. Group No. Six will hold its meeting at Waupaca on June 26th and there is also a group meeting scheduled for some time in June at Green Bay. These Wisconsin group meetings are to some extent more instructive to the banker than the annual convention for only such subjects as may be of interest to that particular section of the state are touched upon and the majority of bankers are now commencing to look upon the attendance at these meetings as a part of their regular routine.

Bankers Active in Fond du Lac

The bankers of Fond du Lac are emulating the example set them recently by Milwaukee bankers and fresh reports of new purchases of property by some bank are of frequent occurrence. The Commercial Bank has purchased at a cost of $20,000 the Buss granite block which adjoins the present bank building on the north and it is said that this bank will have, when completed one of the finest buildings in the Northwest.

Bills Restricting Banks

The senate committee on corporations recently decided to recommend concurrence in three bills. One prohibits any state bank from loaning more than 50 per cent of its capital, surplus and deposits on real estate security except by reason of its directors, prohibiting any bank from lending money on more than

Check Forger is Sentenced

John Baccine, who many times in the past has successfully defrauded various hotels by passing forged checks, was recently sentenced to one year in the house of correction at Milwaukee for passing a forged check upon the proprietor of one of Milwaukee's leading hotels in payment for a week's board and lodging for himself and wife.

Among the Bankers of Wisconsin

At a meeting of the stockholders of the new Ferryville State Bank the following directors were elected: M. Barnham, John O. Nash, Robert Tweed, John Churness, John H. Sterling, E. C. Amann and Henry Schroeder. The following officers were later elected by the new board: president, M. Barnham, vice-president, John O. Nash; cashier, Fred Copsey. A modern bank building will be erected.

The Farmers State Bank of Bangor has recently installed a new steel burglar proof steel safe costing $1,200.

FIRST NATIONAL OF FLORENCE, SOUTH CAROLINA

Originally The Peoples Bank, but for a year past The First National, this institution now has $150,000 capital and nearly three hundred thousand dollars in deposits. The First National, and the Peoples Savings Bank and Trust Company, an allied institution, have resources of over $600,000. For a three years' growth from a start in October, 1898, this is going some. The officers are J. W. McCown, president, S. H. Saunders and B. G. Gregg, vice-presidents, Julien C. Rogers, cashier and B. W. Covington, assistant.

Charles E. McNeil, vice-president and manager of Eck, McNeil and Company, commission dealers, will give a talk on "Cold Storage" before the Chicago Chapter, A. I. B., Tuesday, April 25th. Mr. McNeil is secretary of the National Association of Eggs and Poultry Dealers.

Kansas Bankers

"Financial conditions have improved wonderfully in Kansas during the past ninety days. Crop conditions are fine, and the fellows are all feeling good. A few months ago bank doors were opened in the morning with danger of financial catastrophes during the day, but now every bank in Kansas is in a flourishing condition. The money market has changed, and money is coming out of its hiding place just as fast as it disappeared ninety days ago."

That was the message that J. N. Dolley, state bank commissioner of Kansas, carried to the 300 state bankers of Kansas who held their meeting in Kansas City, Kan., April 13th. He was only one of a dozen or more members of the Kansas State Bankers Association from all parts of the state who made informal but enthusiastic reports.

This convention was the most successful in the history of the association. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, M. B. Light, Winfield; first vice-president, E. S. Chapman, McCracken; second vice-president, H. D. Tucker, Eureka; secretary, W. E. Wilson, Washington, and treasurer, F. G. Bergen, Summerfield. These officers constitute the executive committee of the association and they will decide on the time and place for the next annual meeting.

TELLS OF EASTERN SITUATION

Joseph E. Otis, president of Western Trust and Savings Bank, returned Monday from New York. In speaking of the situation there he said:

"New York bankers generally are expecting easy money throughout the remainder of the year. There is a moderate demand, but the volume is such that large profits are not anticipated by the banks in 1912. There is, however, a feeling of confidence in the situation."

"The Eastern banks are impressed with the wide influence which the uncertainty over decisions in the Standard Oil and tobacco cases is having on the business of the country. More and more there is a disposition to hold off. This applies to conditions in general trade. The banks, too, are beginning to talk of congress and the probability that tariff discussion will be prolonged until late in the summer. This, of course, will make for dullness. The only real expectancy of activity is based upon the handing down of the supreme court decisions. Once those are out of the way it is thought by the bankers that there will follow improvement."

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

Little change worthy of mention was noted in the St. Louis monetary situation throughout the week. In certain quarters there were reports of improvement in the inquiry for credits, while elsewhere complaints were sent up of continued apathy on the part of borrowers. A certain thing, however, is that all the leading institutions are not pressed for funds, and reserves are nowhere alarmingly low. One peculiar feature in the situation is the way interior banking institutions are purchasing short time mercantile bills, this in face of the near approach of the time of agricultural need. As a rule country banks in this region are out of the market as lenders at this season, but on the contrary are borrowers. General commercial lines show decided signs of improvement, though this manifestation has not been sufficiently marked to affect the interest range. The brilliant crop prospect is doing more to restore confidence than anything else, and buying by mercantile concerns in the winter wheat section contributory to this city has been in heavy volume. In the extreme discount rates range between $4\frac{1}{4}$ and $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.

Promotion for L. E. Williams

The St. Louis Trust Company has promoted L. E. Williams to the position of assistant treasurer. Mr. Williams has been connected with the company for fifteen years, he having come to the Union Trust Company from the Commercial National of Detroit in 1896, and remained after the consolidation of the St. Louis and Union Trust companies. All told Mr. Williams had had about twenty-four years' banking experience, and is fully qualified to hold the important post of assistant treasurer in what is recognized as one of the strongest institutions of its kind in the country.

New National Bank Examiner

Walter H. Smith of St. Louis has been appointed national bank examiner for the state of Missouri. The commission was tendered to Mr. Smith by Lawrence O. Murray, comptroller of the currency, early last week. He will succeed Frederick O. Hicks, who resigned to become vice-president of the Mechanics-American National. Mr. Smith has been connected with the St. Louis Clearing House Association since its incorporation as assistant examiner. Before that time he was in the bond department of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company. The appointment has met general approval among the local banking fraternity.

Mississippi Valley Gets Estate

The Jemima Lindell estate, one of the wealthiest in St. Louis, changed managers last week when the Mississippi Valley Trust Company qualified as successor trustee in place of the late Judge Wilbur F. Boyle. The estate is estimated to be worth well over $2,000,000, represented by extensive real estate holdings, chiefly business property in the Washington Avenue wholesale district. Judge Boyle, who was a director of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company, managed the estate from the time of Mrs. Lindell's death, in 1896, until his demise.

Priest Elected Director

H. S. Priest, former United States district judge and one of the leading corporation lawyers of the country, has been elected a director of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company to succeed the late Wilbur F. Boyle, his law partner in the firm of Boyle and Priest. Frank C. Ball was elected safe deposit officer to succeed Charles W. Morath. Mr. Ball has been in the service of the company since 1906, when he resigned as assistant cashier of the Jefferson County Bank of DeSoto, Mo. He is secretary of the St. Louis Chapter of the American Institute of Banking and has been nominated for president of the chapter for 1911-12.

Chouteau Trust Company

The Chouteau Trust Company will formally open in its new building, at the wedge of Chouteau and Vandeventer avenues, on May 1st. The institution will do a regular trust company business. The officers are: W. S. Drozda, president; L. W. Hemp, vice-president; S. W. St. Jean, treasurer; J. W. Burian, secretary and H. R. Avis, real estate officer.

Bowman Talks on Cooke

The feature of the last meeting of St. Louis Chapter of the American Institute of Banking was an address by D. Arthur Bowman, the broker, on "Jay Cooke-Civil War Banker." The speaker drew an interesting contrast between bankers in the 60's and those of the present day.

Our correspondents are pleased with the care we take of their business at the St. Louis National Stock Yards, because it is thoughtful, not mechanical.

Pauley Succeeds Doerr

P. J. Pauley has been elected president of the Lafayette Bank to succeed P. J. Doerr, who died early this month. Mr. Pauley was vice-president, J. A. Goettler, a director, succeeds him to the vice-presidency. Other officers elected were: F. C. Hahn, cashier; B. J. Boemker, assistant cashier, and P. J. Pauley, Henry Ziegenhein, Jr., J. A. Goettler, F. C. Hahn and B. G. Brinkman, directors.

TWELVE BANK ROBBERS CAUGHT IN SINGLE HAUL

New York, April 17.—Twelve bank robbers who have been giving bank cashiers and postmasters of the Middle West many uneasy nights in the last two or three months, were rounded up in one haul to-day in Toledo.

Word of the arrests came by private telegrams to-night to the Burns Detective Agency, which is employed by the American Bankers Association, and whose men have been after this particular lot since the burglaries began.

The gang has been working under the leadership of Felix Brock, who came out of the Ohio state penitentiary in 1907 and whose traces have been found at intervals since then. He is an expert mechanic and the Burns agency believes that he is one of the most skillful among the safe blowers in this country.

ISSUE OF BASEBALL BONDS

The Cleveland Baseball Club has made a $300,000 mortgage to the State Banking & Trust Company, as trustee, for which bonds will shortly be issued. The bonds will be a 6 per cent issue, maturing $30,000 a year for ten years and will be secured by mortgage on the club's realty, buildings and franchise. It is understood that the bank will take the bulk of these bonds, but some of them will be offered to the public. The mortgage cleans up existing indebtedness and gives the ball club a tidy sum for whatever improvements it shall contemplate.

Electors of Baker City, Ore., by a decisive vote approved the issuing of bonds to the extent of $185,000 for the improvement of the water system, the establishing of a municipal lighting system and to pay for paving street intersections and other street improvements.

The Tacony Trust Company has declared a semiannual dividend at 5 per cent.

Howard B. French, president of Equitable Trust Company, is back at his desk after an absence of several weeks, owing to ill health.

Hampton L. Carson, Esq., addressed the local chapter of American Institute of Banking on Benjamin Franklin.

William A. Law, vice-president of the First National Bank, has been elected to the directorate of the merged Chatham-Phoenix National Bank of New York.

In the 108 years of its existence, the Philadelphia National Bank, whose capital is $1,500,000, has paid to stockholders no less than $15,416,000 in dividends and has $4,000,000 surplus and undivided profits. The bank in all this time has had but eight presidents.

It is expected that former State Treasurer John O. Sheatz will become president of the proposed Fifty-Second Street Bank. He is understood to have the endorsement of the chairman of the organization committee, Thomas F. Barrett. The bank is to be organized under state laws.

Thomas Gamon, Jr., has been elected assistant treasurer of First Mortgage Guarantee & Trust Company, of this place. This company has made a record of which its officers are justly proud, and in electing Mr. Gamon they are carrying out their policy of securing the best men they can find. Mr. Gamon has been associated with Corn Exchange National for nineteen years.

There is a movement on foot to make the small accounts carried by housekeepers in trust companies profitable, instead of having them show a loss as they do at present. Many of these accounts average less than $100 and the expense of check books, deposit slips, book-keeping and the proportion of the overhead expenses more than counterbalances the advantage of having these accounts. The proposition is to place a small charge against each one of the accounts showing an average balance of $100 or less, say of one dollar per month, to pay for the expense of carrying the account.

Pittsburgh

From the way the tickets are going, the prospects are that when the curtain goes up at the Nixon on April 27th for the "Bankers Minstrel" show, the house will be packed to the doors. As an added attraction for the lovers of good music, the executive committee announces the engagement of the popular soprano, Miss E. Lucille Miller, who will appear in a repertoire of new songs.

Two well-known banks of the city held their annual meetings Tuesday. The Anchor Savings Bank elected the following to the board of directors: John D. Brown, W. D. Henry, G. C. Dellenbach, Edward H. Straub, T. J. Keenan, L. P. Monahan, E. H. Myers, Jr., A. V. Holmes and Charles Delp. Three members were formally elected for the first time, being A. V. Holmes, W. D. Henry and Charles Delp, who take the places of members deceased during the year.

One change was made in the directorate of the City Deposit Bank, whose stockholders elected the following: James R. Mellon, David Blair, J. M. Lockhart, D. J. Kennedy, James A. Johnston, H. C. Frick, W. H. Goehring, Joseph R. Woodwell, E. S. Kuhn, Jacob Graff and William Frew, Mr. Graff being the new member.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

The financial skies of the Central West have cleared perceptibly during the past week. While at no time since the beginning of the year has there been any real cause for anxiety, it cannot be denied that general business did not show the strength that had been expected. It is true that most men of affairs talked hopefully of the outlook but there were many who did not share their optimism. But conditions have now improved and bankers are feeling the revival. Cattle feeding operations have begun in the Southwest bringing a steady demand for money and crops generally are in excellent condition. The outlook for wheat has improved with recent rains and other farming operations are progressing splendidly. Mercantile business is increasing, building operations have taken on new life and extensions are being made in all directions.

The financial revival was not reflected in the record of bank clearings for the week ending April 14th because conditions improved very suddenly following Easter. In that clearing house statement all of the larger towns of the Central West showed losses. Kansas City had dropped from sixth to seventh place while Omaha also lost ground with a decrease of 19.8 per cent. Even St. Joseph, Mo., which had been making almost sensational gains shared the common lot with a decrease of 7.5 per cent.

New Guaranty Complication

The Oklahoma state banking board has decided to bring test suits against some of the state banks which recently nationalized to avoid the payment of the special assessment of 1 per cent on their deposits for the benefit of the state deposit guaranty fund. The board claims that these banks are liable if the assessment was made before they surrendered their state charters. The banks will resist and in all probability the matter will go to the United States supreme court. About $150,000 is said to be involved in this issue.

Governor Cruce has issued a statement endorsing the state bank guaranty law, deploring the opposition of the national banks to the law, and warning its enemies that the sooner it ceases the better it will be for all concerned. The governor also threatens to withdraw state deposits from national banks.

"So far as my investigation goes," says Governor Cruce, "no banking law has met with as strong and determined opposition as the Oklahoma banking law, and especially that feature of it that provides for the guaranty of deposits placed in state banks. In their efforts to discredit and overthrow the law, its enemies have taken every unfair advantage, have purposely misrepresented and misstated facts, and are now circulating all sorts of false rumors concerning its practical operation. Had the same statements been made concerning national banks that have been made concerning state banks, during the past sixty days, many of the national banks of Oklahoma would now be in the hands of a receiver and a financial panic statewide would have swept over Oklahoma.

"After more than three years of trial, no depositor in any state bank in Oklahoma has ever lost one penny of his money, and though we have had several banks liquidate under the Oklahoma state banking law, no inconvenience has been felt by any man having his deposit in state banks, or has any depositor had to wait one day to receive his money. The supreme court of the United States has decided that our law is constitutional, and is founded upon just and equitable principles. This law is a fixture in Oklahoma, and the sooner the enemies of the same, especially the national bankers of the state, realize this fact and accommodate themselves to it, the better it will be for all banking institutions of the state."

State Banks and Aldrich Plan

Where do the state banks come in under the Aldrich plan? That is the question that is worrying J. N. Dolley, state bank commissioner of Kansas. In a statement issued last week Mr. Dolley declares that he is going to take this matter up with other state banking departments to see what action can be taken to include state banks in the general banking reform program. Mr. Dolley says:

"There are between 12,000 and 13,000 state institutions in the banking business in this country and about 7,000 national banks. The state institutions have on deposit and are doing more than 50 per cent of the entire banking business. The Aldrich plan makes no mention of what they expect to do with state banks. It seems they intend to entirely ignore them. I believe that the state institutions should organize nationally and help write the bill that will be presented to congress to relieve our ills. I am sure that the state institutions do not desire any advantages or favors over the national institutions, but will insist and demand that all opportunities under the bill must be equal

The Nebraska legislature just before its recent adjournment passed an amendment to the bank deposit guaranty law providing for three additional members of the state banking board to help carry out the provisions of the law. Almost immediately after approving this amendment Governor Aldrich announced these appointments to the board: Joseph Pigman of Broken Bow, R. Sprinter of Lincoln and L. P. Albright of Red Cloud. The salaries of the members of the banking board have been raised from $1,800 a year to $2,000 each.

The Citizens Bank of Mountain Park, Mo., closed its doors April 17th. The state bank examiner is in charge. R. H. Jones, vice-president; J. Will Jones, cashier and D. C. Eagan, bookkeeper, were arrested pending investigation. The bank had a capital stock of $10,000.

Nick Ellis, former cashier in the Planters and Mechanics Bank of Oklahoma City, Okla., who was arrested recently on a charge of forgery, has been released and the case is dismissed.

The Continental Trust Company of Oklahoma City has completed its organization and has started business. It has a capital of $500,000 and will do a general banking and loan business in quarters formerly occupied by the Oklahoma City National Bank, 132 West Main Street. The officers of the institution for the first year are: E. B. Cockrell, president; H. W. Pentecost, vice-president; D. A. Duncan, secretary and treasurer and E. E. Wittier, assistant secretary.

George Reed, the alleged bank robber who was arrested at Nelson, Neb., last week, is wanted in Monmouth, Ill., where he is charged with helping to rob the Swan Creek Bank. Reed is also believed to be one of the gang that committed thirty-two successful bank robberies in Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska last fall and winter.

Miss Agnes Jackson, 20 years old, an employee of the First National Bank of Kansas City, was run over by an automobile and killed last week. She was exceedingly popular in the bank and the other employees and officers sent several beautiful floral offerings to her home.

F. G. Varey, sixty years old, a clerk in the Corn Belt National Bank of Kansas City, died at his desk, April 16th, of heart disease.

REYNOLDS BACK FROM EAST

President George M. Reynolds of the Continental and Commercial National just back from New York, reports that business in New York is duller than it has been in years.

"The bankers I saw do not seem to be blue or discouraged, however," said Mr. Reynolds. "They are getting used to the dullness and seem to expect better things later on. Things are worse in New York than they are in Chicago. We talk of poor business here, but the bank clearings indicate that, in a quiet way, a good deal of business is being done.

"There is a feeling among bankers in New York, based on information from Washington, that before the trouble in Mexico is ended American troops will be over the border in an effort to put an end to the insurrection. In New York they do not consider that such a step would result seriously to this country and they do think it may be necessary in order to defend American interests."

Editorial Comment

ARGUMENTS FOR ELASTICITY

Practical arguments in favor of an elastic currency are furnished in business conditions that have been experienced within the last six months. During the crop moving period of 1910 there was not money enough in the country for the legitimate demands of trade, but since the first of February there has been such a plethora of capital that bankers have found it impossible to keep their funds profitably employed.

It is the hope of financiers that a plan will be evolved from the present discussion which will give to the nation's currency that element of elasticity which obtains in other countries. Charles H. Huttig, chairman of the currency commission, puts the case in these words:

"In Canada as well as in other leading civilized nations of the world the supply of money nicely adjusts itself to the requirements of business, whereas in the United States, because of the non-elasticity of our currency, business must conform to the volume of money."

It is pretty generally admitted that the country at times needs a larger volume of currency. This need has long been felt in the business world. Financial theorists have advanced all sorts of plans to meet the demand. Around this idea for more than a century battles have been fought. One element has stood for responsible banking and a central authority, believing that the federal government should in a large measure direct and control banking methods and the issuance of currency. This view prevails in all other leading nations and is the aim of the Aldrich plan in the United States.

Theorists with other views have seen experiments of all kinds tried and to-day we have a monetary system that is unsatisfactory to all. In the light of past failure and present dissatisfaction would it not be wise for this country to adopt a principle that is approved by the banking element as a whole and endorsed by all the successful nations of the world?

Speaker Clark and certain other leading democrats in congress are opposed to everything which savors of a central banking power, and their attitude brings an element of uncertainty into the legislative situation. The country at large seems to be strongly committed to the Aldrich plan and the case now rests with congress.

Commissioner J. N. Dolley of Kansas makes a strong protest against the enactment of any currency law which fails to embrace state banks. Mr. Dolley is making a record as a clear-minded and energetic bank commissioner and his views on currency legislation will attract attention. So far as his utterance goes toward a demand for uniformity his position will be almost universally endorsed. The nearer the country can come to unity in banking the better it will be for the whole people.

LIGHT EXPORTS AND LOW PRICES

As further evidence that we are in a period of declining prices it is only necessary to point to the lighter exports and the good crop prospects.

The government's figures of farm products exported during March show a decided decline in the total from February.

The figures of our foreign commerce during March, issued from Washington, show a downward trend in exports, due obviously to the falling off in shipments of cotton and grain to Europe.

From the reported condition of winter wheat on April 1st of 83.3, as applied to the 34,485,000 acres under cultivation in December last, the New York Produce Exchange statistician estimated that the harvest should be 541,415,000 bushels. This would be a record crop and could not fail to depress the price of foodstuffs. Spring wheat prospects could not be better than they are at present and a larger crop than that of last year is assured.

This situation indicates lower prices for the necessities of life and it also indicates that the looked-for trade revival is not far off. Industrial activity is bound to come when big crops of wheat, corn and cotton are in sight, notwithstanding that prices to farmers may be low.

Merchants and manufacturers generally are guided in their commitments for the last half of the year by conditions in the agricultural regions, which lay the foundation for business contraction or expansion in this and other producing nations. Fortunately, the prospects for a bountiful harvest were never more promising than they are this year.

DEATH OF A BANKER

Walter Vail, aged 64, former mayor of Michigan City, Ind., president of two banks and a director in the Haskell and Barker Car Company, who was given country-wide publicity several years ago as the first man who ever refused a pension from the United States, died recently of paralysis.

PROGRESS OF KANSAS

At the recent convention of Kansas bankers emphasis was given to the fact that that state is both progressive and prosperous. Bank failures are few and far between in Kansas these days. This is proof of general prosperity in the state and of the high character of its financial men. Kansas is outgrowing the old radical notions and taking its place with those states which believe in conservative and sound business principles. A feature of commercial life which has done much to establish the prosperity of Kansas is the wide diversity shown in city trade as well as in agriculture. The guaranty move is only an incident. All reports made at the bankers' convention tended to illustrate the stability and progress of the commonwealth.

Guaranty of Bank Deposits

Bankers at Summerville with paper advocating the Oklahoma plan in some form.

John D. Walker of Sparta, Ga., entertains the South Carolina

I bespeak the utmost stretch of your courtesy and fairmindedness in presenting my views on a subject, which, while tremendously important to the people at large and, I think, generally desired by them, is frowned upon, as a rule, by bankers, or at least is regarded with suspicion by many of our fraternity.

I come to you not as a Moses prepared to lead the bankers or the public out of the wilderness of wreck and ruin resulting from failed banks, nor to show you the promised land, but rather as an unassuming disciple of the best principles of banking, anxious to know what is best for us, as bankers, to do, and believing that this "exchange" of views will not go to protest—in the minds of all of you, anyway. If you differ with me, as I know some will, it will be an advantage rather than otherwise; for it is only through friction of minds, as well as matter, that action can be secured.

In favoring "The Guaranty of Bank Deposits," either by the United States government, the state, or a combination of bankers, I am doubtless proving to some in this assembly the truth of the old adage, "Fools rush in where angels fear to tread"; yet, I dare to believe that in a few years practically every state in the union, or the United States government, will provide for the people, whether we bankers favor it or not, this protection to the depositors and the business interests of the country. It may not be a law similar to the one in Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas or Nebraska, but it will be such a law as is founded on justice and common sense, and that will best conserve the welfare of the entire people. The fulfillment of this prophecy may work a hardship on some, but the good of the many is the basis of all sound laws, and not infrequently the few have to suffer that the many may be protected.

Every man, woman, child and institution in this state and the United States has a vital interest in the proposition I am bringing to your consideration; for out of every seven persons in the United States, one is a depositor. Banks are not only the depositories for the money of the people, the state, the government, but the chief cornerstone of our industrial organization. To make them as safe as the government, should be the aim and ambition of every banker.

Banks now, as always, occupy an exalted station in the minds of the people, and they can only retain this through the confidence of their depositors, whereby they are enabled to create credit to an amount many times greater than the actual cash deposits. Whenever confidence is shaken or destroyed, the depositors demand their money at once, the banks undertake to recall their loans and refuse to lend money or credit on the best security, and, as a natural result, business collapses and a panic ensues.

The unwarranted panic of 1907, falling upon us when the tidal wave of prosperity had reached the highest mark in history, was due to no other cause than the destruction of confidence in our banking system. This panic began, continued and ended, all in New York, practically, and yet, southern banks, with the gathered and partly sold bumper cotton crop, were forced to follow the lead of the New York banks and issue clearing house certificates, thus advertising their inability to cope with the situation and, as a result, they lost the respect of many and the confidence of thousands of farmers for years to come.

It has been stated by an authority on banking subjects, that taking the banks and trust companies of this country as a whole, their deposits average ten times their total cash, and if 5 per cent of their deposits should be suddenly withdrawn for hoarding, it would take from the banks one-half of their cash, thus precipitating one of the worst panics in history.

Our nation has passed through so many of these fearful calamities that we now look forward to a periodic panic.

Panics are so destructive to business and such disturbers of peace and checks to prosperity, that it is the part of wisdom to do everything possible to prevent them, even if it does require the changing of our fixed views and less profit to our stockholders. It should be our paramount concern, as it is the general demand of the people, that panics be made impossible.

and the guaranty of deposits will do this, since depositors will then keep their funds in banks knowing they are safe.

The president of a bank in a Virginia town, when a run started on his bank, appealed to the frenzied depositors to desist, stating that the bank was perfectly solvent and would pay every dollar, if given time, but his appeal was without avail. As a last resort, he announced from the steps of the bank that he would pledge his real and personal property as a guaranty of their deposits, and the "run" ceased. This is an illustration of the fact that people will act sensibly and leave their funds in the bank, when they know they are safe.

Banks are quasi-public institutions, and subject to such restraints and demands as the state or national government, acting as the guardian of the people and their representative, may impose upon them. For the government or the state to require, under some sane plan, the guaranty of deposits, is no more their duty than to require railroads to adopt safety appliances or bond companies and insurance companies to make deposits to protect policyholders.

The principle involved is one that has been tested and proven a success, not only in Germany, where for twenty years, there has been no bank failures, and in Mexico, but in the states of Oklahoma and Kansas for several years.

Massachusetts has had a law requiring the guaranty of deposits in savings banks for nearly forty years. Four other states, viz.: Nebraska, Texas, South Dakota and Kansas, have adopted the guaranty system of bank deposits.

Guarantee deposits, and it will bring our whole banking system into harmony with modern requirements and will place it upon a higher plane than ever in its history. Then and not till then will peace, prosperity and pass books abound and equity and justice be realized as a living principle in our banks. Continue our present policy of every depositor for himself and "the Devil take the hindmost," and confidence will be shy and fickle, ordinary scares will precipitate runs on banks, hoarding and hiding will go on, panics will come, and those who should be our customers will continue sending abroad hundreds of millions of dollars that should be deposited in the banks of this country.

In the last national campaign, the democratic party, in response to the demand from the people, favored the guaranty of bank deposits. The republican party, reading the handwriting on the wall, asked for the same thing in the only way left them, by adopting a plank favoring postal savings banks. These banks were opened in January, 1911, and Postmaster-General Hitchcock says he is very much pleased and gratified at their success, and that he is going to ask congress for an additional $500,000 in order to establish more of them. If it be true that they are a success, and I doubt it, based on figures in my possession, which show that after a trial of two months, in the forty-eight banks established, there have been opened 3,923 accounts and 6,861 separate deposits made for an average amount of $21.50. And during the same period, 259 accounts have been closed, leaving net accounts 3,664, with deposits of only $133,869, which, at the same ratio for the next ten months, would give the postal savings banks of the United States, at the end of the first year, about $800,000 on deposit (secured, mind you, without solicitation, as we have to get them) then it is all the more essential that we have a guaranty law to use with our people, so that the government banks will have no advantage to offer over state or national banks. Are we, the people, which is the government, going to guarantee deposits in postal savings banks without cost to Uncle Sam, thus giving it an advantage over the licensed and taxed banks of the country, and deny our own institutions this protection and means of getting business?

We must not lose sight of the fact that postal savings banks are very new competitors, and so far have only been located in small cities and towns of the various states. For instance, the one in this state was opened at Newberry, and be it said to the credit of South Carolina and Newberry citizens, it only has eighteen depositors, with $199.00 to their credit—the smallest sum secured by these government impositions in any state in the union. But should these banks be opened promiscuously in the large and important cities of the country, as it is likely will be done, unless we bankers can secure a law that will make our banks practically as safe as the government banks, how soon, think you, will it be before some of our deposits will be going where they do not belong, i. e., to the collecting agencies of the United States government?

And I'm opposed to the scheme of centralization of finances and political influence anyway, whether the party in power be democratic or republican, saint or sinner, white or black, Wm. H. Taft or Woodrow Wilson.

Such eminent bankers as Lyman J. Gage, ex-secretary of the treasury, Gen. A. B. Nettleton, ex-assistant secretary of the treasury, H. E. Otte, of Illinois, Senator Owen of Oklahoma, and the bank commissioner of Michigan, Mr. Zimmerman, all of whom are men of wide banking experience and sound financial views, favor a system of guaranty of deposits. With all this array of good witnesses, and others too numerous to mention, it cannot be said that this is a theory born in a political campaign, nor one that lacks reputable supporters.

A great deal is said and written of the Oklahoma law, and while I am aware of the fact that there are three kinds of liars—the ordinary liar, the d—liar, and statistician, you cannot contradict the correctness of the figures, which are taken from the sworn statement of the bank commissioner of Oklahoma, and they constitute such strong corroborative testimony in support of my argument, that I cannot refrain from referring to them.

* * * * *

The United States and state governments require the guarantee of their funds, and many of us seek their deposits, notwithstanding. Then why is it not just and right that they should care for their citizens the same way and protect the individual depositor, even if it does make it harder (apparently only) on the banks? The government can afford to stand the loss much better than the average individual.

Again, from 70 per cent to 80 per cent of the profit in our banks is the result of using the depositors' money; yet these depositors have no word in the management of the banks, neither can they know very well the actual condition of the banks.

Is it not also just to guarantee the individual deposits, since 95 per cent of the medium of exchange in this country is composed of funds belonging to the depositor? And under our present plan of giving security to the United States, the state, the city, we not only make of these preferred creditors, but we really lessen the security to the average depositor.

The government, by reason of its power to demand protection, gets it from us, while the depositor has perchance only left to him "the crumbs that fall from the rich man's table."

CHAPTER RECORD

(Department of Chicago Banker)

An Open Forum Dedicated to the American Institute of Banking in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Systematic Education and Universal Membership

Institute of Banking a Force for Country's Business Growth

GEORGE R. MARTIN, Seattle National Bank.

The American Bankers Association made the American Institute of Banking necessary when it arrived at the realization that the profession of banking had reached the highest standard in business ethics, which would have to be maintained. Banking had passed beyond the mere stage of trade and barter to a profession, equal in greatness of its power and influence with the professions of law, medicine and divinity, greater than either as an economic necessity and stronger than either as a guiding force back of the enterprise and development of the world.

The tremendous advances of commercial life during the last twenty-five years by means of mergers, consolidations and counter consolidations built up within the cities the present giant financial institutions. It is a story replete with the history of dollars, their issue, flow, exchange; the story of the sources of wealth, from whence it came and by what methods it is produced; the history of the ever-varying trade conditions, the markets and the expansions and contractions of credit.

Complex and intricate became the business of banking and specialization, and overspecialization was the result. The conditions created afforded little chance to the average bankman for gaining much information about banking outside of his own particular department. Not only was the bankman unable to acquire an adequate conception or any useful knowledge of the banking business, but he was dwarfed by monotony and routine to an indifference to bank work and to life, keenly felt by the large banks of the country.

At the 1900 convention of the American Bankers Association, held at Richmond, Va., the young, progressive, energetic bankers in attendance urged that some action be taken toward improving the bankman's conditions. It was an appeal made to one of the most powerful organizations in this country, representing 90 per cent of the banks of the United States. The response was the passage of a resolution authorizing the educational committee to organize the American Institute of Bank Clerks, which was afterwards changed to the American Institute of Banking. And the foundation was laid for a towering structure, which upon its inception caught the spirit of the men who prompted it—education, brotherhood and fraternity.

The American Institute of Banking is composed of seventy chapters in all the large cities of this country and Canada. Its membership includes over 10,000 men—the men behind the financial guns of an empire, with $11,432,000,000 for their ammunition, for these dollars are the aggregate deposits of all the banks represented in this remarkable organization; a membership representing the best and highest in American citizenship.

This means that honesty and efficiency must be the sentry word of the bankman and that determination and endurance must mark his way. These are the credentials which make good a citizen; credentials which keep him alive to every issue, civic, financial, moral, political—which keep him ready for every opportunity, every duty. This is the type which is to-day predominant in the chapters of the American Institute of Banking. Such must always be the type, if the institute is to continue to be active in the best movements for civic and moral as well as financial progress.

The underlying principle of the institute is education. The study courses cover not only practical banking, but political economy, commercial and banking law and negotiable instruments and other subjects of vital importance to the banking business. For the bankman to devote his leisure hours to study, he must be a man of will and industry. The hours of the bankman to-day are long—in most cases equal to those of men in any other line of endeavor, and are of a much more confining nature.

Most of the chapters have permanent club rooms and hold monthly or bimonthly meetings, at which some prominent banker, educator or professional man addresses the chapter. Debates and discussions are important features of the meetings, including parliamentary drills and practice in public speaking and dramatics. The whole field of banking education is brought to the bankman, practically without cost, by a system of correspondence and classroom instruction, lectures and personal research. Its one purpose is to broaden the bankman, to increase his efficiency, to enlarge his vision of life and to keep him interested in his bank work and world affairs, that he may bring to the administration of the banking affairs of to-morrow the same potent ability, completeness and energy which mark the administration of banking affairs of to-day.

The American Institute of Banking in the eleven years of its existence has met the expectations of the bankers who founded it, and was made a "section" of the American Bankers Association at the latter's Denver convention—an integral part of that great organization. The chairman of the executive committee of the institute is now a member of the executive committee of the parent organization and the official publication of each has been merged into one comprehensive banking journal, The American Bankers Journal and the Bulletin of the American Institute of Banking, the spokesman for the whole banking fraternity, but especially addressed to the junior members. Statistics show that 80 per cent of the promotions to official positions in the banks of the chapter cities have come from the ranks of the active chapter men. One of the first questions asked to-day of a bankman, seeking a position in an Eastern bank is, "Are you a member of the American Institute of Banking?" It stamps him a progressive—indicates the extent of his acquaintance among bankers and bankmen, and announces his willingness to make the most of his opportunities.

The signs of the times point to large things. The world demands of the men who would measure their success in life above the average that they contribute part of themselves to solving the entangling social and economic problems which confront it; that they take a broader view of life and interest themselves, not merely in their own business or profession, but in the big, wide questions of the day. There will always be the passive man, the pessimist and the recluse to bemoan every situation and cry out against progress, but the American Institute of Banking is breeding active, live men, and the banking interests of the nation and the people at large will feel the beneficent influence as its work continues.

Seattle chapter of the American Institute of Banking is one of the youngest chapters in the organization but has had an eventful career. With no traditions to guide it, distant from the great chapters of the East and South by 2,000 miles, and outside the pale of the strong national spirit of fraternity which has been fostered by those chapters, it is commendably expressive of the spirit and enthusiasm abounding in Seattle Chapter that it has grown from an experiment to an aggressive organization of real usefulness and power in this community.

For four months prior to the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition and while the exposition was in progress, the local chapter published a monthly magazine in the interests of the exposition, Seattle, the Puget Sound country and the banking fraternity. It was a comprehensive little booklet and, sent to many banks and bankers of the country, effectively advertised the limitless resources and wonderful growth of the whole Pacific Northwest.

During the exposition period, Seattle Chapter was successful in bringing to Seattle the national convention of the American Institute of Banking, which possibly brought to this city more visiting bankers and bankmen from the East and South than had ever been here up to that time. Seattle Chapter helped to demonstrate that Seattle is a great convention city and the city has received much publicity from its efforts. The Tri-State Bankers convention found the chapter again active—assisting the bankers of Seattle and the Washington State Bankers Association in entertaining their guests.

Many bankers and professional men of prominence have addressed the chapter at the regular monthly meetings held in the Elks' Club rooms in the Alaska building. Inter-banking debates and debates with Tacoma's enterprising chapter have been held and classes in banking and commercial law have been successfully organized and well attended. It is a glowing tribute to the chapter that many of the bankmen who have been promoted to official positions in Seattle banks during the last few years owe their promotions in a large measure to their activity in chapter affairs.

Recently, at the Hotel Washington, Seattle Chapter held its first annual banquet. Two hundred and eighty-five bankers and bankmen were in attendance, the largest gathering of its kind ever attempted in Seattle. At the speaker's table sat the heads of most of the city's big financial institutions, the speakers and the officers of the chapter.

Plans are now under way for a permanent home for the chapter. It now seems imminent that before many months permanent club rooms—Seattle Chapter's greatest need—will at last be successfully accomplished. With permanent club rooms, the chapter will be secure. New and broader fields of activity and opportunity will widen before it. With a permanent home, the chapter will continue to grow in strength and usefulness, giving to Seattle and

The Sense of Fitness in Financial Advertising

By Francis R. Morison

If bankers would pay more attention to the sense of fitness in the publicity which they issue, whether it be in the form of newspaper advertisements or direct follow-up matter, there would be many fewer sins committed against good taste in the name of financial advertising.

Many bankers seem to believe that they can disregard the carefully thought out, proved and established principles of advertising and by following out their own personal theories build up their institutions almost over night.

It has been demonstrated beyond all question in commercial advertising, and the same holds true for all kinds of publicity, that the advertiser must study the public taste and give the public what it wants as well as what it needs. In other words, the public will pay for what appeals to it and not for what appeals to the advertiser.

Of course, public taste is one of the most difficult things in the world to gauge. But there is a safe and sane middle path to follow which avoids offensive radicalism yet is not so stilted as to fail to reach the everyday person.

In order for bank advertising to be successful it must be planned and outlined as the result of the most careful consideration and must follow a definitely worked out method. It is hardly necessary at this day to emphasize the fact that advertising is not a hit-or-miss proposition and that it is a great deal more than the mere writing of copy. Modern advertising means the building up of business by the employing of every legitimate method of suitable publicity.

The banker makes a direct appeal for the money of the community, he asks the men and women and the boys and girls to place in his control the money they have earned, very often by arduous and painful physical toil or by long and tiresome hours at an office desk, or even through self-denial almost criminal in its sternness. It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that those who save a portion of their hard-earned money should exercise great care in selecting a bank in which to place it. Consequently, it is necessary for the public to be educated regarding the safeguards and facilities provided by a bank for its customers. Just as a banker demands the most complete and unequivocal knowledge of the security offered by those who wish to borrow, so he in his turn should be thoroughly frank and open in his statements regarding the details of his business to the public whom he wishes to secure as customers.

There is perhaps no branch of advertising that is so intricate and that calls for so much expert knowledge as financial publicity. While as a study from the psychological standpoint it is fascinating, as a matter of routine it soon threatens to become very tedious as well as extremely difficult. There is the same old ground to be gone over in a different way week after week, month after month, year after year. The additions which a bank makes to its equipment and to its service are infrequent and thus it soon proves a very real task for the average banker to originate changes of advertising copy. The result, practically without exception, is that he soon finds he cannot spare the time to give the matter the attention it deserves and so he ends by charging his advertising experiment to profit and loss, practically abandons the entire matter or buys some syn-dicare atrocities at bargain-counter prices and then allows the whole question to take care of itself as best it can.

It is almost unnecessary to add that in order for advertising to be successful it must be established at the beginning on a foundation of not only good quality but of systematic persistence.

The advertising of a bank must begin at home. Before a financial institution can be in a position properly to ask the people to patronize it, it must be in order both literally and figuratively. All details suggesting carelessness or lack of system should not be tolerated for a moment. This may appear somewhat elementary but it must be remembered that the average person instinctively forms an opinion of a bank and its methods by the general character of its appearance and of the service rendered by its officers and employees. Furthermore, every employee of the bank should be made to feel that he is a factor in the success of the institution. A bank is a most excellent example of the old saying that a chain is no stronger than its weakest link. A discourteous employee may, in a few minutes, counteract the good work of months of accumulative effort of the best advertising.

Having inaugurated a campaign of advertising upon a dignified yet actively progressive basis, in order to bring the fullest measure of prosperity to the bank the publicity should be supplemented by intelligent personal effort. Recently a successful banker in a Middle West town stated that he attributed a very large measure of the success of his bank to the fact that in order to supplement his newspaper and other advertising, he made it a point, whenever he could possibly spare a few moments, to go to the main banking room and greet the people who came into the bank whether or not they were regular patrons. This was done briefly yet courteously and that this policy has succeeded is evidenced by the fact that his bank, while a young institution, has during the four years of its existence built up its business in a remarkable way, outdistancing several older banks which have persisted in conducting their affairs along the old traditional banking policy of too much conservatism.

Bankers, therefore, should see that their advertising is well balanced; they should make sure that it applies properly to the people from whom deposits are drawn and that it is supplemented with courtesy on the part of every employee and personal cordiality from officers. With a careful definite plan of publicity, systematically carried out and intelligently cooperated with by the entire banking force, it is a matter of absolute certainty that any reliable well-managed bank can increase its business steadily year after year. Things may go a little slowly at first but just so sure as day follows night the advertising pull will be felt stronger and stronger until it exerts an irresistible force that will result in splendid growth on a permanent foundation of success.

WHEN THE GAME IS BREAKING LOOSE

BY HEK.

'Tis impossible to hold it in the confines of the Pink.

Behold, you see it spreading every which way from the jack.

It penetrates the noodles of the gentlemen who think,

And it flavors e'en the wording of the deep forensic crack.

Its spirit has some bearing on the argument abstruse.

For everyone writes baseball when the game is breaking loose.

We have baseball and the tariff, we have baseball and the trusts,

We have baseball actuating all the forces that uplift.

We've analogies on baseball so's to penetrate our crusts

With dope on sociology and predatory thrift. It supplies to every impulse the electrifying juice,

For everyone writes baseball when the game is breaking loose.

The corrugated foreheads specializing in the deep,

Who have the weighty problems of the nation by the haunch,

Who can gallop up the mountains of the mind, however steep,

Pull a soupçon of the pastime when their theories they launch.

No loss of dignity they feel while putting it to use,

For everyone writes baseball when the game is breaking loose.

GUARANTY OF DEPOSITS

Such a law would keep the money made in any section of the state or country in the banks of that section, and this is assuredly to the best interests of the entire country and just to small banks. It would also leave the hoarders and hiders of a billion dollars no excuse for keeping this enormous sum of actual cash out of circulation and practically useless for business purposes.

Another objection raised to the guaranty law is, that it would take too much money out of circulation, or, if it were not taken out of circulation, that it would not be available when a large bank failed. I think it would be found otherwise, for, like the fellow who heard the bank was "shaky" and went for his money and to his surprise found that the bank had it, said he didn't want it. If the people know that their money is safe, they will not run to get it, as was the case in Oklahoma. Even when the funds are withdrawn from a failed bank—the withdrawal being made possible under the guaranty law—the majority would re-deposit with some other similarly protected bank.

During the panic of 1907, the clearing house banks of Chicago guaranteed the deposits of the Walsh banks, more to protect their own banks than to take care of Walsh, but, when they did this, they immediately selected a special bank inspector, whose duty it was to look closely into the affairs of every bank in Chicago and keep strict watch over them. As a result, Chicago went through the panic better than any large city of the country. What Chicago banks did, the government or the state can do.

The idea that a proper guaranty law would encourage unsound, "wildcat" banking is not justified by the facts. My judgment is that it would promote sound banking. First, by making those in charge of the banks more careful in investigating those who sought charters, just as is now being done by Comptroller Murray, when a national bank charter is applied for. Second, by a more rigid oversight on the part of the "bankers paying the freight" through the department, and otherwise, in order that no unnecessary cost accrue. And third, by raising the standard, since none but a sound bank could get the benefit of such a law, and so soon as a bank becomes unsound, or was being improperly or recklessly managed, closing it to protect the well-managed banks.

For, every law that has been enacted or proposed in late years, providing for the guaranty of deposits, required closer inspection of banks, and stronger safeguards, such as forbidding banks to offer more than a safe rate of interest for deposits and all banks the same rate; not permitting a bank to accept deposits to an amount exceeding six to ten times its paid up capital; making it unlawful for banks to lend their funds to their own officials, etc.

A large Chicago delegation is touring Texas for the association of commerce.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

The Germania and Metropolitan National banks have united and will continue business at the Metropolitan Life Building. The enlarged Metropolitan National will be capitalized at $300,000, and will start with $1,500,000 deposits and $60,000 surplus. The bank was formerly capitalized at $200,000 and the Germania at $100,000. Under the new regime V. H. Van Slyke will be president, as heretofore; O. E. Naegele, president of the Germania, will be vice-president; C. F. Wyant will continue as cashier and George Vollmer is transferred as assistant cashier from one bank to the other. The Germania's president acted also as cashier.

Eventually the Metropolitan National will erect a banking building. For the present, fifty feet will be added to the banking quarters which it now occupies. By the change the safety deposit vaults of the Metropolitan National are made accessible to the Germania depositors and the customers of the latter bank will find former officers in the new institution.

Bank Clerks Hold an Election

St. Paul bank clerks have had an election at the Merchants Hotel. Robert W. Lindeke of the National German American was elected president. E. O. Nordstrom of the Merchants National defeated E. J. Gifford of the Capital National for vice-president by four votes. Walter Honebrink of the First National received the gift of the treasurership for another term. He defeated N. Paul Delander of the Merchants National by seven votes. Owen Thomas and Lawrence Drew contended for the glory of being secretary and Thomas was one vote to the good. The election in this case was not contested and no recount was asked. S. R. Harris got a sentence of three years on the executive board, putting R. B. Tudor in the defeated list. Delegates chosen to the national meeting at Rochester, N. Y., are: M. Ernst, Merchants National Bank; F. M. Bloomquist, Merchants National Bank; George C. Power, Jr., Second National Bank;

H. C. Kronke, First National Bank; J. A. Holman, State Savings Bank, and George R. Miner, National German-American Bank.

Banker Sent to Prison

Sam A. Hall, a former banker and real estate broker of Butte and well known in Montana, recently found guilty of grand larceny for embezzling money given him to invest, has been sentenced to fourteen years in the penitentiary. This is the maximum punishment.

Rumored Bank Deal

Reports have come from various parts of the Northwest that Aaron Kuhn, chairman of the directorate of the Traders National Bank of Spokane, is forming a $1,000,000 banking organization at Portland, Ore., though his associates say they know nothing about the plan. The reports say that Mr. Kuhn will organize the new bank under the supervision of the Rockefeller interests and that the Exchange and Traders National banks of Spokane will be consolidated in the building now occupied by the first named. These reports, no doubt, found their origin in the recent visit of Frank A. Vanderlip, who was met on the coast by Mr. Kuhn. Several years ago it was reported that the Rockefeller interests had acquired large blocks of stock in the Exchange and the Traders banks. There has been periodical talk of consolidation of the two institutions. When Charles Sweeney left the Exchange and Edwin T. Coman stepped in, it was understood that the latter went in as a representative of the Rockefellers.

General Notes

Shortly after May 1st the second postal savings department in Minnesota is to be opened at St. Cloud. The First National and Security State banks have been designated depositories. E. C. Blanchard of the First National, Hood River, Ore., in the Twin Cities on the way East says banking conditions are healthy in the Portland district. While it is early to talk of crops he says the apple trees are in full blossom and prospects are bright for the strawberry yield, ripe in May and June. This product comes to the Twin City market.

Ellis D. Robb of Eldora, Iowa, has been appointed national bank examiner for more than one hundred national banks in Northern Iowa. He is one of the best known men in his part of the state, having grown up in the banking business.

BANKS AID BUILDING PROJECT

Banks of Cleveland have practically agreed to take the $2,500,000 of 5 per cent bonds which will be issued by the company erecting the new traction terminal building and hotel on the square to occupy the site of the Forest City House and the old Higbee building. The banks of Cleveland have always been known for their patriotism, have always been credited with the desire to aid any worthy Cleveland enterprise when they can do so, and act conservatively, and it is a matter of congratulation that Cleveland is able to finance this big undertaking without the aid of outside money. The new bond will be a splendid one and the negotiation of this loan assures the construction of this magnificent building.

COLORADO BANKER IN TOWN

IOWA BANKER A VISITOR

Cashier J. B. Stair, of Farmers National Bank, Red Oak, Ia., was a visitor at National City Bank, Chicago, Tuesday. Mr. Stair reported general activity in agricultural affairs, with a consequent improvement in other lines of business.

the United States, 129 per cent. This, however, need not be alarming nor will the Bank's power for usefulness be lessened thereby when it is borne in mind that the great joint stock banks have been fully alive to the situation and that, instead of keeping their entire reserves in the Bank of England as formerly, they have accumulated gold reserves of their own and have thereby placed themselves relatively in an independent position. This comparatively unimportant increase in its gold reserves is not a discredit to the Bank. The London money market has been subject to the demands of practically every responsible merchant, wherever located. A draft drawn on a London banker can be negotiated in any part of the world at its actual value, inasmuch as a quotation for a 90 days' sight bill on London, be it in South America, the Straits Settlements, Australia, New York or the Fiji Islands, can be had at a moment's notice, and its true counter value determined in the money of the country where the transaction originates.

I have spoken of the power of the English banker over the regulation of the money markets which is conducted along purely scientific lines. When money is scarce, the London banker attracts it by offering a higher return, and when there is a plethora, he repels it by offering a lower rate of interest. This is the sound and really scientific method of banking, and any system which does not recognize and cannot employ the principle is weak and ineffectual. It is customary in the United States to pay on a certain class of deposits a straight 2 per cent interest, regardless whether money is worth 1 per cent or whether it is worth 6 per cent. The result is that when money is high it goes away from the banks and seeks other methods of employment, sometimes with disastrous and always with unsatisfactory results. The course of money in Europe is regulated absolutely by the rates of interest. Thus, if there is a dearth in Paris, rates are raised and immediately the rates of exchange on London, and, perhaps elsewhere, fall to a point requiring the shipment of actual gold in settlement of balances between the respective countries. This at once relieves the tension at Paris and the end is accomplished.

Another important feature and one which has produced progressive development in the Banking System of England, particularly, is the absence of legislative interference. Other than in fundamental enactments, the banks are not hampered by legal restrictions as to the manner in which they may conduct their business. The result has been the attainment in the fullest measure of the objects most desirable in a nation's banking institutions.

The Bank of France is in reality a bank for the people. It caters to the small merchant and to the tradespeople. It is required by law to make loans to approved borrowers in sums as low as $10.00. In fact, it exercises a paternal tutelage over the French commercial world. It owes its origin to the notorious John Law, the arch visionary promoter and speculator of the eighteenth century. The Mississippi Company, the most outrageous fraud ever perpetrated, was the progenitor of the Bank of France, which is now certainly one of the most carefully managed and most conservative banking institutions in the world. In many ways, if not in all, it is the world's greatest bank. It is to this great bank that even the Bank of England comes as a borrower. Its capital is only $36,000,000, but it has the monopoly of note issue, amounting at the present time to a maximum of $1,160,000,000. These notes, strange to say, are not legal tender and are redeemable either in gold or silver, and this fact has in the past enabled the Bank of France to build up and maintain its gold holdings which to-day are the largest of any single institution in the world. The Bank's metallic reserve, gold and silver, is nearly 80 per cent of its outstanding circulation and this enormous reserve gives the Bank an absolute control over the French discount market, besides placing it in such a strong position that a crisis in financial matters is practically out of the question; even a serious disturbance is nearly impossible. The chief function of the bank is that of a rediscounting institution and the most eminent of French economists has succinctly declared that in times of crisis the role of the Bank of France was to liquidate all other banks.

The Imperial Bank of Germany is the latest evolution of scientific bank organization and, in conjunction with the quasi-private banks, has done wonders for the Fatherland. Forty years ago Germany was preponderantly an agricultural country; now it is the second greatest manufacturing country in Europe. Its commerce and manufactures are fostered by the Bank.

In the foregoing remarks, I have of necessity merely sketched the outlines of the groundwork upon which the European Bank system is built. An analysis of the system itself in detail and the effects of its work would fill volumes. Suffice it to say that the development of Europe during the last half century is entirely due to the scientific principles underlying this groundwork and it is to be hoped that the arduous labors of the National Monetary Commission will not be in vain and that some day in the not too distant future, we will be able to point to our own system with pride as being one that is serving the interests of the country in fullest measure.

In order to attain this result, though, the Monetary Commission will need the cordial support and co-operation of every banker and business man in the United States. I think we are all agreed that it is no longer feasible to work under the old order of things. We are continuously preparing for crises that are bound to come within stated periods, only to find when it comes to the test, that we have adopted the wrong measures for protection. This is bound to be the result when the foundation of our fabric is built upon wrong principles or rather upon no principles at all.

However, the corner stone of a new order of things has been set and upon it there has been indelibly engraved the name of our Honorable Secretary of the Treasury Franklin MacVeagh. Through his initiative, legislation has been enacted that marks the dawn of a new era. I refer not only to the law recently passed by congress authorizing the United States Treasury to hold foreign gold coins as reserve against note issues, but also to the law whereunder the government now accepts certified checks instead of legal tender notes, and to the economies effected by him in his great department and the inauguration of the same sound business methods which characterized his efficiency as a great merchant. These laws are most important and practical measures in banking reform. The first named is in accordance with the practice of the European banks of issue and will effect the saving of vast sums of money to the country; but more important than the material issue is the circumstances that it marks time in the enlightened march of progress in matters financial. We also owe a debt of gratitude to our worthy congressman, E. B. Vreeland, whose mind has been on the subject of currency reform years before the Monetary Commission was created. While the proposed measure is honored with the name of the chairman of the commission, the commission itself is certainly honored in being able to count this worthy gentleman as one of its most important members. Mr. Vreeland's untiring labors, and his mastery of the subject, afford sufficient assurance of the successful outcome of this first serious attempt at sound and comprehensive reform. It is indeed a great honor to have these gentlemen with us on this occasion. They command the deepest respect and admiration of the banking community for their achievements and public spirit.

The foreign commerce of the United States during the year 1910, both ways, amounted to $3,427,218,892. These figures represent actual trade transactions and the importance of the movement is not properly understood by American bankers. Very few of the 23,000 banks in the United States have any direct foreign relations whatever, and the result is that dealings in the debits and credits of this enormous annual turnover is a sealed book to most of them. An astonishing and instructive fact in connection with financing this business is that it is all done on paper and only an occasional balance must be settled in actual money, not money as commonly understood, but in the only money recognized in international transactions, that is, in gold.

The foreigner purchases our staples but his banker does not make him a loan to pay for them in the sense that we understand it. He merely permits him to use his good name through the medium of acceptances for a period of 60 or 90 days. In the interim the merchandise is disposed of and the proceeds utilized to provide protection for the banker's acceptance, which, meanwhile, may have passed from hand to hand, or have been used as a remittance to cover a debt, or sold to meet an investment demand, or pledged against an issue of banknotes on the part of some European banking institution. Contrast the beneficent advantages of such a system with the rigid one in use in the United States. The European banker is thus enabled to capitalize to a certain extent the good will inherent to his institution and by this method has built up a system to the like of which all nations, the United States not excepted, must turn in cases of necessity. Never was this more strongly emphasized than during the panic of 1907, when, through the medium of these bankers' acceptances we were able to import millions of gold and thus relieve a condition of panic which threatened ruin.

The South alone contributed last year $557,000,000 to the cash resources of the country through its cotton shipments to Europe and, had the American bankers been called upon, as at one time seemed probable, to finance the whole of this important movement themselves at a time when the country, east, west, north and south, was engaged in handling one of the most bountiful crops that has ever been given us, we should have been hard pressed indeed. I think we could have done it, but it would have been a heavy strain and would have taxed the ingenuity of bankers and the resources of their institutions to the utmost.

To a large extent we have been obliged to rely upon our European friends in financing our cotton crop, which is now practically the only raw material that we are exporting in large quantities. Our position as the world's food producer has been nearly lost owing to the fact that our population has increased to such an extent that what we produce is all needed here at home, and it is within reason to expect that as the proportion of urban population increases, we shall have to import some of our requirements in this respect.

The cotton manufacturing industry of the North is rapidly increasing and the South is keeping apace with this movement. Within the last ten years, the consumption of cotton in the United States has increased 46 per cent, and if this ratio is maintained, Europe will have to rely eventually upon Asia and Africa for its supply of the staple and such a condition will place the United States in a most favorable position, but we must have better banking facilities to meet these new conditions. The cotton goods now supplied to the world in the quality produced by American cotton can only be obtained from us and we will be exporting our manufactured goods instead of furnishing the material to other nations for manufacture.

What will be of more interest to you at the present time is the relation of the American banker to the European banker in the valuable assistance which the latter furnishes this country in financing our crop. These relations within the last year or so have received rather a severe jolt by reason of the frauds perpetrated in connection with bills of lading. However, the American Bankers Association has taken up the matter, and, as a satisfactory settlement with the European interests seems probable, the feeling of distrust towards the American shipper is now gradually being dissipated. It is to be hoped that the measures finally effected will give complete assurance not alone to the spinner abroad but to his banker, and also to the exchange buyers on this side who are handling the cotton until it is paid for. The European banker who is so valuable an ally is certainly entitled to fair consideration; and, in accepting documents which purport to represent actual merchandise that his client is purchasing in good faith, should have every reasonable assurance that what he is paying for will ultimately be delivered.

When purchasing cotton in American markets, the European spinner first of all must provide for himself credit accommodation at his local banker's; given such, he is then able to make his purchases. However, the accommodation must be of such a nature that the American agent or firm selling the cotton, is placed in position immediately to finance his sales and thus be able to repeat the transaction.

This is done by means of 60 or 90 day sight drafts, drawn under the credits already arranged, on the European banker whose name is given. Attached to these drafts are the documents evidencing the shipments of cotton either in the form of port bills of lading or in the form of through export railway bills of lading. As a general rule, the latter form of document is employed as it would cause too much delay and consequent cost to await the arrival of the goods at port of embarkation in order to obtain the ship's bills of lading. An additional document is the insurance certificate which protects the shipment from the time it is loaded on the steamer and for some time after the vessel has arrived on the other side. Quite frequently, however, cotton is sold on this side of the water on the condition that the buyers shall provide the insurance. This is due to several reasons. It may be either that the buyer is interested in some insurance company on the other side or he is able to place the insurance at a better rate. However, this is an unsafe practice and should be discountenanced.

It is always better and safer to have the goods insured in reliable companies on this side of the water.

Pacific Northwest

Spokane, April 18.—A $500,000 school bond issue was sold in Spokane to the N. W. Halsey Company of Chicago on April 10th for a premium of $8,000, or $1,250 more than the nearest competitor. The bonds run for 20 years and draw 4½ per cent interest, payable semi-annually. The Union Trust and Savings Bank of Spokane represented the successful bidders. Other bids were: E. H. Rollins and Company, Boston, premium $6,750; Exchange National Bank, Spokane, premium, $100; Harris Trust and Savings Bank, Chicago, premium, $2,158; W. R. Compton Bond and Mortgage Company, St. Louis, premium, $1,923; M. and J. D. Finley, premium, $103. The city received a premium of $23,000 on an issue of $400,000 two years ago. However, Z. Stewart, treasurer of Spokane county and member of the school board, says the premium on the new issue is higher than paid anywhere in the Northwest this year.

Bankers are Indicted

"True bills" were returned by the federal grand jury of the eastern Washington district, sitting in Spokane, on April 8th, against six officials of the Idaho Hardwood Company on charges of using the United States mails to defraud. Those indicted are: Ex-Governor A. B. Moss, president of the First National Bank of Payette, Idaho; D. W. Stanred, president of the First National Bank of Pocatello, Idaho; I. B. Perrinne, hotel owner and landholder of Twin Falls, Idaho; Paul S. A. Bickel of Jerome, Idaho; James A. Murray, banker and capitalist of Butte, and Donnell Davenport of Spokane. Bail was fixed at $2,500. The cases will be tried at Boise, Idaho, next September, the defendants having secured changes of venue. It is alleged they sold $132,000 worth of stock on eucalyptus timber land in California, where only a small portion of a large acreage was planted, also that they claimed connection with the American Hardwood Association.

Woman Treasurer Reports

Kathryn O'Rourke, treasurer of Shoshone county, Idaho, says in her quarterly report that the county's deposits amount to more than $69,000. The receipts totaled $47,856 and the disbursements $244,412. The largest single item of the receipts is the contribution of the national forest reserve, $10,826. The county's deposits are in seven banks, as follows: First National Bank of Wallace, $13,311.11; State Bank of Commerce, $20,484.64; Wallace National Bank, $10,706.04; First National Bank of Kellogg, $5,593.16; First State Bank of Kellogg, $8,990.30; First National Bank of Mullan, $4,021.14; Weber Bank of Wardner, $3,554.56.

Show Prosperity

Big Bend country banks are prosperous, according to reports of deposits, as follows: Banks of Davenport, $719,587.17; Wilbur, $446,802.72; Waterville, $350,236.54; Sprague, $275,081.51; Reardan, $232,669.32; Odessa, $230,172.10; Harrington, $174,742.23; Almira, $137,830.17; Coulee City, $110,955.14; Hartline, $87,521.83; Quincy, $77,010.03; Creston, $66,401.05; Mansfield, $63,013.50; Edwall, $57,499.81; Krupp, $51,641.17; Govan, $12,530.00.

Banking Miscellany

Robert Fairley, commissioner of finance, has advised the banks of Spokane that any financial institution receiving city deposits must protect the city's payroll warrants by cashing them at par. The equalizing of the city's deposits was decided as follows: The interest will be 2 per cent, figured on the average daily cash balance. The state law provides that the city must receive not less than 1½ per cent. The amount on hand is between $600,000 and $650,000.

F. A. Duncan, for nine years the cashier of the Creston State Bank at Creston, Wash., has resigned. His brother, G. L. Duncan, has been elected to fill the vacancy, and F. W. Moe was promoted to assistant cashier. Mr. Duncan has become cashier of the Lewiston National Bank at Lewiston, Idaho.

Seattle

All government checks drawn on Seattle are hereafter to be collected free by Seattle banks. The Seattle Clearing House Association has amended the rules governing the collection of checks so that hereafter all checks and drafts drawn on Seattle by government disbursing officers, military or other officials, will be exempt from the usual fee.

Heretofore Seattle banks, which are members of the Clearing House Association, have charged collection fees on all items, including government checks. In some localities in the Northwest, where there were no charges, such cities have been able to secure business that otherwise would have come to Seattle. In order that Seattle may no longer be discriminated against in this respect, the members of the clearing house have voted to exempt government checks from collection fees.

One of the largest real estate loans made in Seattle in some time has just been closed up. The New York Life Insurance Company loaned $85,000 at 6 per cent, on a corner in the business section of the city. The New York Life now has real estate loans in Seattle aggregating close to $2,500,000.

Central Bank of Toppenish, Wash., has moved to its new three-story structure, erected at a cost of $35,000. H. M. Gilbert is president of the bank and one of its heaviest stockholders, E. O. Keck is vice-president and L. A. Nichols is cashier, with E. P. Hinman as assistant cashier.

A. W. Bowen has been elected cashier of the First National Bank at Sandpoint, Idaho. G. W. France was elected assistant cashier.

Bonds and mortgages representing $550,000, were found secreted about the home of William H. Badeau, a bachelor who died at Fishkill, N. Y., after a life of marked frugality.

WASHINGTON BANKS MERGE

The National City Bank of Washington, with a capital of $300,000, and the Commercial National Bank, with a capital of $550,000, have been merged. The total deposits of these two banks amount to $5,000,000.

Des Moines, April 19.—After all, bankers have little cause to complain at the thirty-fourth session of the Iowa legislature which adjourned at midnight, April 12th. The only measure to which bankers generally take exception is that assessing bank stock at 80 per cent of its value at the usual rate in the county in which the institution is located. But to offset that, the legislature repealed the iniquitous tax ferret law and enacted a law which taxes moneys and credits at a 5 mill flat rate instead of under the old scheme which was instrumental in driving capital out of the state.

A temporary tax commission was decided upon to report to the next legislature upon needed revision of the Iowa statutes. This may enable the bankers to get a more equitable basis for taxation than that proposed under the new law.

The bill to provide an additional bank examiner got past one house but lost in the other in the final wind up. Another bill that was killed was that permitting Iowa state and savings banks to invest in real estate outside of Iowa. A bill providing for uniform bills of lading in which bankers were interested became a law. It provides that all bills of lading shall contain the date, name of consignee, place where the goods are received, destination of the goods, signature of the carrier and a description of the goods. The measure also outlines the general provisions of bills of lading. Officials of trust companies are disappointed that the measure permitting them to act in a fiduciary capacity lost in the shuffle. Just what happened to this bill is not known but it appears to have fallen by the wayside in one of the sifting committees.

Wells Succeeds Watt

Jesse O. Wells, one of the vice-presidents of German Savings, Des Moines, has been elected president of the institution to succeed the late James Watt. No one was elected to succeed Mr. Wells and J. C. O'Donnell will continue as the only vice-president. C. Huttenlocher was chosen on the directory to succeed Mr. Watt. The directors adopted suitable resolutions on the death of Mr. Watt.

The will of the late Mr. Watt when filed in probate court, disclosed a bequest of $20,000 to the Iowa Humane Society and the Home for the Aged. Each will receive $10,000 upon the death of Mrs. Watt, who will hold the funds in trust.

Banker Hurt in Accident

George F. Walker, vice-president of the Iowa Loan and Trust Company of Des Moines was thrown from a buggy in a runaway near Colfax and seriously injured. At Mercy hospital, where he was taken, it is reported at this writing that Walker is improving. The man was badly bruised about the face and it was feared there were internal injuries. Mr. Walker is 72 years of age and on that account there have been some fears expressed as to his complete recovery.

Dayton Bank Robbery

Bank robbers have been rather infrequent in Iowa of late. Consequently news of a robbery of the First National at Dayton came as a shock. The Dayton robbery was a harmless sort of an affair as the robbers got only $350 in silver. The explosive failed to secure an entrance into the inner vault in which Cashier C. D. Waterbury had placed a goodly amount of money. Later, farmers found a kit of burglar's tools and $300 in silver in a hay loft near Fort Dodge. Cashier Waterbury put up a reward of $100 each for the men but at this time no one has claimed the reward. It is thought that the job was that of Tom Hatch and Peter Johl, two escaped convicts from the Stillwater penitentiary who are believed by the Des Moines police to have led the attempt to dynamite and rob the Polk County Treasury of $100,000 a fortnight ago.

Test of Taxing Power

The courts at Waterloo have an interesting case involving the constitutionality of the law taxing the stock of national banks and not those of state and other banks. The Commercial National of that city started the suit, an action to enjoin County Treasurer Bentley from collecting the tax. Later the Leavitt and Johnson National started a similar suit asking an injunction against the levying or assessing of such a tax or its attempted collection. The bill also asks an injunction against the sale of any of the bank's property or its individual stockholders for the purpose of satisfying such tax.

Evidence of Prosperity

Just as an evidence of prosperity the banks of Davenport are declaring semiannual dividends. The Union Savings on April 1st declared a quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent and added $5,000 to its surplus making the latter $100,000. The Scott County Savings declared a semiannual dividend of 7 per cent, the Iowa National and Farmers and Mechanics Savings declared semiannual dividends of 4 per cent and the German Savings voted a quarterly dividend of 4 per cent.

Private Alarm Goes Wrong

Rufus Chase, assistant of the Iowa National, Des Moines, was aroused one night last week by the private bank alarm. One of the wires had gone bad and the Western Union summoned Mr. Chase who thought the wire had been cut by burglars. He rushed excitedly to the scene but found that only a battery had run out.

Remarkable Tribute

A remarkable tribute was paid to Adam Emig, janitor of the First National at Spencer, who died recently. Business was suspended throughout the city and the business men attended his funeral. While occupying a lowly station in life, Emig had made thousands of friends. He lived in Spencer since 1882.

Hall Captures D. Carson

D. Carson, alias "Kip" Carson, who rambled about Des Moines scattering bad checks here and there has been arrested in St. Louis and is now in Des Moines awaiting trial for forgery. Carson was arrested some weeks ago but feigned illness and was taken to a local hospital. Here he recovered so rapidly that he managed to escape within a few hours. Secretary P. W. Hall of the Iowa Bankers Association was instrumental in effecting his capture.

HARVEY ON BANK CONDITIONS

What is needed at this juncture is the pulling together of our citizenship, the working not only for ourselves, but for our neighbors. Let the people along the coast rejoice in the manufacturing development of the Piedmont and Pedee, let the mills which dot our up country be a source of pride to our tide water people and let the man from the interior rejoice in the possession of the blue waters which wash the shores of Beaufort, Charleston and Georgetown. Let each work together for the upbuilding of South Carolina.

The fact that the chamber of commerce of Charleston with its high salaried official makes public announcement that he is employed to work for the state as well as for Charleston is being matched by efforts on the part of inland sections in furthering the railroad connections and rates in the interest of the Charleston people. When such a spirit animates all of our people, when each and every one lays aside personal or hereditary prejudices and with heart and soul going hand in hand for making our state, our capital, our metropolis, our smaller towns, our seaports, the very best state, the very best capital, the very best metropolis, the very best small towns and the very best seaports to be found on the North American map, when I say this spirit dominates our people, then will come a return of the prestige which this state enjoyed in the long ago.

We can never be a great state however, until we become a great people and we cannot be a great people if we are stiff-necked and narrow-minded, or perhaps a better way to phrase it is to say, if we are intolerant of the views and actions of others.

The cycle of years works revolutions, revolutions in methods, in policies, and in ideas. What was good for our state and her people a century ago or a decade ago may not be best to-day under changed and changing conditions, and what was most undesirable then may be most devoutly to be wished at this time. Are we willing to accept new methods, new policies? That is the question. Are we intolerant in our views? That is the question. Who is man enough to proclaim his independent thoughts? Woe be to the man who dares assail the customs of past generations. We theoretically clamor for the man of independent thought, independent speech, independent action, but do we give him our moral support, or do we with bated breath commend him in private and publicly proceed to crucify him? Do we welcome discussion on the part of those holding contrary opinion and manfully endorse such views if we concur in them? If we do not concur in such views do we accord to the holder of such views, the right to such opinions, or do we proceed to attribute the holdings of such views to base purposes and to selfish ends?

A difference of opinion is not always a difference of principle and the right to differ is the first great essential to a great people. With that right taken away the "freedom" so much vaunted is a mere bauble and merely a name. Are we, as a people, intolerant in our views? Let those who have essayed an independent spirit, answer; let those who, persuaded of the justice of their cause, have essayed to run counter to a long established prejudice, answer.

Happily the development of our state and the infusion of new ideas is bringing about a spirit of broad minded liberality which is making itself manifest in every section and corner of South Carolina. Our people are doing their own thinking, they are formulating their own ideas, they are accepting no set dogmas to be lived up to blindly or to be forever ostracized.

In this broadening of our mental vision the bankers of this state, the members of the association, have had much to do. As leaders in their several communities, as men of affairs, as public spirited and patriotic citizens endowed with large responsibilities and enjoying the confidence and respect to a marked degree of their fellow citizens, they have paved the way to a more liberal and progressive spirit among our people. In standing for independence in thought and action, for the breaking away of hide bound customs, for a spirit of tolerance and for a policy of hearing the other side before reaching a conclusion, the bankers of South Carolina have done a service to their fellow citizens which is bearing a good harvest.

It is this as much as the richness of our soil, the hum of our machinery, the deep waters in our harbors, the energy of our people, which is making the outside world center its eyes on South Carolina as it "looks to the South" and which makes our people,

"Join me in my song of praise,
 And say to all the world,
 That since the world began
 No fairer land has fired a poet's lays,
 Or given a home to man."

Uniform Banking Regulations

William Ingle of the Merchants National, Baltimore, before the South Carolina bankers at Summerville, April 19th

When the people of the thirteen original states agreed that for their mutual protection against aggression, real or fancied, it was desirable to establish a central government in the control of which each should have a voice, it could hardly have been thought that after the lapse of little more than a century the knowledge and application of science to practical every-day affairs should have so rapidly developed as almost to annihilate distance. One hundred years ago thirty days were required to communicate between Georgia and Massachusetts; to-day only as many far more comfortable hours must be so employed, while the electric spark makes a common country of its most widely separated parts. Under older conditions it was both natural and proper that each state in legislating for its particular population more or less homogeneous within its own boundaries and in order to best meet its own economic and social necessities should have had relatively small regard for legal preferences and business practice in a commonwealth distant from two to twenty days in travel. While the fundamental rules of both law and business must always be true no matter when or where applied, difference in environment and many other causes are responsible for an enormous mass of statute and judicial law, greatly differing throughout the country even between states closely related geographically. When our states were sparsely inhabited and when communication between them was slow and difficult, variableness in law and practice was of comparatively small consequence, but with time and distance negligible quantities and with a large population owning many interests in common, legal, business and moral, the desirability of ordering and controlling many of the larger questions by regulations which shall be country wide in their application when referring to the same subject and as uniformly interpreted must be apparent.

With the idea of gradually bringing some order out of very mixed situations, a body in which is equally represented practically every state and which goes by the name of the commissioners of uniform state laws was formed some years ago and has to show as the result of its work the negotiable instruments act, which in all of its essential particulars is now the law in 38 states, and the sales act dealing with a subject of the greatest importance to merchants and to banks from which they obtain their credits.

Second only in importance to the negotiable instruments act from the view point of those loaning money upon the pledge of merchandise or securities are the three measures known as the warehouse law, bill of lading law, and the law of stock transfer. Upon the passage by all of the states of the five general laws mentioned, a great advance will have been made, but there yet remain many unsolved problems, the simplifying of which would make for the safety and comfort of almost all business people, excepting possibly the lawyers, who are in their profession benefited more by diversity than uniformity in the law. Certainly one subject which could profitably engage the attention of thoughtful people might be that of uniform bank regulation. Many people may feel that one connected with a national bank could hardly be competent to fairly discuss such a subject by reason of limitations set upon his conduct if not opinions by the revised statutes of the United States, and such an one should therefore endeavor to avoid overstatement.

While the national banking law is, or should be, uniformly enforced throughout the country, few thoughtful people now look upon it as a whole otherwise than as a piece of worn out machinery, which by reason of changed and changing conditions has long outlived its usefulness. At the same time it should be remembered that the law recognizes the two fundamental principles upon which sound banking must ever be based, namely the maintenance of cash reserves and a limitation upon loans in any single direction and it is probable that a desire to be released from allegiance to these features of the law and thus permit greater if not safer competition, has been responsible for the presence with us of laws more or less at conflict with each other in our several states. As a result the national banks as a class and the statutes uniformly controlling them are at times greatly misjudged. The national bank act was a war measure enacted to tempt investment in United States bonds at a time when it was by no means certain that their purchasers, largely the banks incorporated under the act, would eventually reap any profit from the risk they were undertaking. The result of the war and the subsequent development of the resources of the country made of a 6 per cent bond bought at a discount a rather attractive proposition from the view point of its owner, altogether aside from the circulation privilege attaching to the bonds when owned by banks, and many institutions for years practically lived off of their capital, bond and circulation accounts; deposits in relation to capital having been very small indeed in comparison with present day ratios.

All of this was forty years ago, since which time profits to national banks on circulation have been gradually decreasing until at the moment, and for some time past, such profits in practice will not be found to equal the profit in theory as figured by brokers, whose principal and most natural interest is to earn a commission on sales and purchases. As a matter of fact so little profit now attaches to circulation and its collateral ownership of United States 2 per cent bonds bought at par or over and worth as an investment probably about 80, that very many banks would gladly sell most of their bonds if the transaction could be made without realizing an immediate loss; and that too in the face of the fact that the congress has further added to their fictitious value in requiring that banks entering a national currency association shall hold in United States bonds an amount equal to 40 per cent of their respective capital liabilities.

It possibly is not too much to say that notwithstanding the presence of conflicting state laws, many of which, and it might be added their practical absence in some cases, promise greater profit than do the provisions of the national act, a strong reason is found for the continued life and multiplication of national banks in the thought that uniformity of treatment of such a large subject as banking even under imperfect law is better in furnishing a larger degree of protection to the public and consequently to the banks, than could be given by the varying laws of the several states. It is only fair to say that without amendment the present national law would not permit many banks to properly minister to the wants of rural communities where land and crops, or liens upon them, furnish the safest if otherwise not altogether satisfactory security. Many think that national banks in such situations could, with propriety, be permitted to invest a certain share of their funds in such relatively fixed directions, but such permission should not relieve any bank from its obligation to maintain a proper reserve but rather make more imperative its duty in such respect.

Again such a privilege would furnish a stronger argument for the rigid enforcement of the law disallowing excessive loans, as assuming the presence of a generous percentage of non-liquid assets, the more important would it be that the balance of a loan line should be readily convertible into cash.

Excepting in instances where gross fraud is in evidence more bank failures are caused by excess loans in single or allied directions than possibly from all other causes combined. A law permitting the hazard in any single direction of an amount equaling one-tenth of the capital and surplus fund proper of any bank is surely most liberal, and it should be no excuse for the violation of a sound principle to suggest that such a limitation would impose hardship. A merchant needing more money in his business than could properly be loaned him by his local bank should, in order to be able to borrow beyond such limit, enjoy such credit as to permit him to arrange for his loans at some relatively nearby and larger banking center. If his conditions will not permit such action a perfectly proper inference would be that the risk would be an improper one for the smaller bank. Again, the smaller interior banks can readily obtain on smaller loans higher rates of interest than a safe man doing a business too large for his local bank to properly and safely care for can afford to pay, and an acquiescence in such high rates by people who from the nature or volume of their business should command credit at lower figures at larger towns, should be one of the strongest reasons for denying such excess loans at home.

In these days of comparatively narrow profits it only rarely happens that sentiment is strong enough to induce a merchant to pay his local bank seven or eight per cent for money when he knows that for a two cent stamp he could borrow it at from 5 to 6 per cent at some point fifty miles away. It is probable that conditions resulting from the war were responsible for the very free extension of credit of which we are speaking, but with the extravagantly large influx of capital to the South which the last few years have witnessed, both from investors outside of its borders and also and more especially from its own products of land, mines and factories, your most greatly blest section of our country should increasingly feel the importance of recognizing the soundness of business rules of world wide acceptance.

Again it would be most helpful if all bankers would assent to the soundness in principle and practice of the very modest requirements of the national bank act in the matter of reserve against deposits. Excepting only the central reserve cities, where national banks are required to keep on hand in actual cash a sum equaling 25 per cent of deposits, other banks maintain a cash reserve of only from 6 to 12½ per cent, while an additional 9 to 12½ per cent takes the form of a credit, 50 per cent of which at a given moment is apt to be made up of business to be finally liquidated at from one to ten days from its dispatch. In pointing with pride to the rapid development of deposits the country over, the statisticians apparently do not for a moment consider the fact that a great and increasingly large share of such deposits as reported in figures reflect the enormous amount represented by checks on their travels about the country in process of collection in avoidance of an exchange charge which their direct handling would entail. It may be an overstatement but it is quite likely that if it were possible to reduce to liquidated amounts the gross deposits of the country their total would show a shrinkage from accepted gross figures of 25 per cent. As under existing conditions full debit balances are figured as reserve, the actual cash requirement of the law would certainly seem to be so reasonable as to appeal to all except those who in deliberately loaning their funds beyond the limit of prudence, depend upon their borrowing power or their indulgent and more careful neighbors for help in times of panic or trouble, which all bank men have in mind as a possibility at least.

The pace in competition in any community is almost always set by the bank having the least appreciation of the necessity for restraining law, and other things being equal the law, national or state, which imposes the fewest restraints or in other words, which really has not primarily in view the protection of the depositing public, is apt to be the more popular with many banks for reasons which are obvious if not altogether sound. As a consequence banks which too intently watch their profit and loss account in its daily growth and lightly regard the presence or absence of an adequate cash reserve have a distinct advantage over institutions which keep strong at the expense of some possible profit, but the owners and depositors of the latter feel better in tight or squally times.

It might not be amiss to refer to another phase of our business in connection with which common or uniform control would be most beneficial, and that is the use or misuse by banks of their borrowing power. Here again the national law is most generous in its provisions in permitting but limiting the exercise of such discretion to an amount equaling capital stock. The capital stock of any bank is the margin of safety offered the public for the protection of its deposits. Its surplus may be depleted by losses or at pleasure distributed in dividends, but its capital or at least its reported responsibility in such respect may not be impinged upon without serious consequences. It is true that in addition to paid-in capital the laws usually provide for an added responsibility to stockholders in banks, but in very many instances and especially where, as so often is the case, the controlling holders of record own only a more or less nominal equity in their stock, the added protection suggested in the laws is more useful for advertising purposes than in dollars.

Many think that the maximum limit to which every bank should be permitted to go in accepting deposits should bear some definite relation to their respective capital responsibility. Every bank in making its loans will insist certainly upon a margin in security of at least 10 per cent, in connection either with high class securities pledged or in liquid stock in trade, and any customer could with reason exact that his deposit be given the same measure of protection that his bank demands of its borrowers.

Other things equal, the greater the percentage of capital to deposits the greater protection afforded depositors. To supplement insufficient deposits to meet normal demands, in the form of artificial deposits reported as bills payable or rediscounts, lessens by just their amount the protection afforded by capital stock to depositors proper. It is well recognized in any section of the country in which a single business interest is of dominant importance, as is cotton in the South, no bank could profitably and safely employ throughout the year such maximum amount of its own capital as would make borrowing unnecessary during the season of heaviest drain, but loans altogether proper and in order even to the generous limit of amount of capital should be looked upon as a handicap and not as a source of profit and retired with the utmost dispatch at the season of neighborhood realization upon its products. Any bank which borrows continuously throughout the year, or which so uses its credit except at a time of rare emergency, in excess of its capital, simply confesses in so doing that it is short of that proper protection which its depositors have a right to demand, under penalty of a withdrawal of their interest.

It is fair to say that banks, both lenders and borrowers, are now fast beginning to appreciate the dangers of overtrading, with the result that it is becoming increasingly difficult to continuously negotiate excess loans. Examiners, both national and state, agree as to the wisdom of strictly enforcing statutes setting a limit upon the direct borrowing power of banks and where no statute of adequate character is in force all concur in the opinion that such restraining law should be passed.

The banking departments of the several states and of the nation have, largely upon the initiative of the present able administration of the office of the comptroller of the currency, begun to realize the importance of securing not only the enactment of uniform laws to control and regulate banking in its several departments, but co-operation in all work or thought having in view the conduct of the business on a high and safe plane to the benefit first, of the depositor whose money is the basis of the credit of the country, and then the stockholders, whose interests must be left in the hands of others, their representatives, who without controlling law and intelligent examinations and correction might be prone to undertake avoidable risk, to the loss of all concerned.

Money Steady

Money is steady but inactive in the Chicago market. Trade developments are not up to expectations and the demand for funds is less urgent than it was two weeks ago. Commercial loans are $4\frac{1}{2}$ to 5 per cent. Real estate loans remain on a 5 per cent basis, although the range of quotations is 5 to 6.

Foreign Exchange is as follows: Demand London, $4.86\frac{1}{2}$; 60 days sterling, $4.84\frac{3}{8}$; demand Germany, $95\frac{1}{8}$ less 1-32; 60 days Germany, 94-16; demand Paris, 5.20; 60 days francs, $5.21\frac{7}{8}$.

Books on Banking, Finance and Economics

Credit. By J. LAWRENCE LAUGHLIN, of the Department of Political Economy, University of Chicago. Postpaid, 53c.

The nature of credit and its effect on prices have long been a subject of disagreement among economists. Its basis is commonly assumed to be money or bank reserves.

Essentials of Business Law. By FRANCIS M. BURDICK, LL. D., Professor of Law in Columbia University. 12mo. Postpaid, $1.50.

This book shows how the rules of law governing the commonest business transactions have been developed, and it tells what they are to-day. Technical law terms have been discarded as far as possible, and when they are used they are so explained and illustrated as to be easily understood. The principles of law are simplified and expressed in clear, lucid everyday speech.

THE CHICAGO BANKER,

407 Monadnock Block, Chicago.

BIG STATION NEARLY FINISHED

Officials of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway say that the new $20,000,000 passenger terminal may be opened for traffic some time during May. It is said that practically all of the work has been completed, with the exception of details, but the management of the road has decided that the opening shall not take place until every part of the work shall have been absolutely finished and that no opening date shall be set until it is certain there will be no postponement required. The chief work to be done is the installation of electrical apparatus connected with the operation of the block signal system.

San Francisco

The Bankers Investment Company, headed by President I. W. Hellman of the Wells Fargo Nevada National, has decided to erect a $500,000 Class A building on the north side of Market Street between Geary Street and Grant Avenue. The lot runs through to Geary Street and is one of the most desirable holdings in the city. The building will be four stories in height, with foundation capable of supporting several additional stories.

W. H. Coffinberry has been elected president of the Bank of South Francisco to succeed Jesse W. Lillenthal, resigned.

The exposure following the collapse of the Bank of Shasta County threatens a scandal of widespread proportions. W. R. Williams, state superintendent of banks, returned to San Francisco from Redding, leaving affairs there in charge of his personal representative, George M. Mitchell, and District Attorney Chenoweth. It is stated that there is at hand ample evidence to warrant the prosecution of the bank's responsible directors for gross violations of the state banking law. Criminal proceedings can be maintained against the big borrowers only in case it is established that they obtained the money under false pretenses. In an interview, Supt. Williams says:

"I have not been able to familiarize myself completely with the bank's affairs, but the conditions are such that leave no room for argument as to the necessity of liquidating. It is a peculiar condition that I found there. There has been criminal negligence in the management of the institution. The violation of the banking laws is revealed by the size of unsecured loans. It is difficult to tell in a matter of this kind just how much can be realized. Where a bank is dependent for the repayment of its loans, as this one will be, upon the fate of industrial concerns, it is guesswork at best. It will all depend on what can be done with the two lumber companies—the Terry company and the Castle Lake. I do not know yet how deeply these lumber concerns are involved outside the bank, and until all these things are clear, nothing definite can be announced."

Gould is victor in Missouri Pacific, electing Bush president instead of Francis.

Los Angeles

Stockholders of the Citizens National of Los Angeles have voted to increase the capital stock from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000, making its capitalization equal to that of its big rivals, the First National and Farmers & Merchants National. Progress of the latest negotiations looking to the acquisition of more banks by the Citizens is slow, but there is every reason to believe the plans for further consolidation will materialize soon. It is the ambition of the Citizens to become the largest instead of the third largest national bank in Los Angeles.

The Los Angeles Trust and Savings Bank will move into its new quarters about July 1st. This new building, located on the northwest corner of Sixth and Spring streets, is one of the handsomest in any city in the West, costing approximately $600,000. It will be ten or twelve stories high, and the Los Angeles Trust and Savings Bank will occupy the entire first floor. Though not yet completed, all but ten of the 235 offices on its ten upper floors have been leased, and many are already occupied.

Los Angeles bank clearings, which this year have broken all records for a day, a month, and a quarter, continue to increase at an enormous rate. The total clearings for April 5th, $3,983,138, exceeded by $827,096 the amount for the corresponding date of last year, and by $1,378,089 the total for the corresponding date of 1900.

H. A. Estabrook, formerly cashier of the Consolidated National, of Tucson, Ariz., more recently assistant cashier of the Equitable Savings Bank of Los Angeles, has taken an official position with the Seaboard National at San Francisco.

Eliot Calender, founder and president of the Dime Savings Bank and Trust Company, and one of the chief stockholders of the Commercial National, of Peoria, Ill., has purchased a beautiful house and farm in Westmoreland district, and will make it his home in the near future.

Announcement has been made of the purchase of a majority of the stock of Carey R. Smith and C. E. French in the Orange County Savings Bank by W. A. Zimmerman, of Santa Ana. Mr. Zimmerman assumed active management of the bank on April 1st.

J. A. H. Kerr, national bank examiner, who a few months ago was transferred from the Los Angeles district to Portland is back again, having been re-transferred to his old field.

W. D. Woolwine, vice-president of the National Bank of California, who has been ill for several weeks at his home, is recovering.

John F. Andrews, cashier of German-American Savings Bank, of Los Angeles, has gone on a six months' trip to Europe.

$30,000 BANK HOME

Farmers Bank of Ellensburg, Wash., has started work on a $30,000 home. The building is to be of Tenino cut stone and will be the most modern bank structure in Central Washington. It has a 40-foot frontage on Pearl Street and a 90-foot frontage on Fifth Street. It will be two stories above the street level, with four huge round columns on the Pearl Street face, while ten square columns will ornament the Fifth Street side. The first floor will be devoted to banking purposes and vaults are arranged for the bank's money. The bank quarters are to be fitted in mahogany and marble. The second floor is to be used for offices.

Foreign exchange is steady at last week's quotations.

tective system, to go to the Little Rock convention. It is reported that Mr. Burns made his usual big hit with the bankers. Mr. Wait in turn called the attention of the delegates to the superior service which the American Bankers Association is having along protective lines under the Burns' supervision.

THE secretaries of the southwestern states are becoming quite as active as those of the northwestern states in favor of protective work. Recently the secretaries of Missouri, Nebraska, Arkansas, Oklahoma, and Kansas all met at Kansas City for a conference. Several of the burglary insurance companies were represented and great interest was aroused. As a result the five associations are joined in a $500 reward for each bank burglar. This is very practical work.

THE secretaries induced the insurance companies to offer a similar reward in each case and they have agreed to ask their respective legislatures to offer a standing reward for each bank burglar, robber, or hold-up man. This will make a combination offer of $1,500 reward for each individual burglar and ought to be an incentive to the sheriffs and police officers of the Southwest.

HERETOFORE the Arkansas association has been offering a prize of $100 to the school boy who would produce the best single ear of corn in the state. This year the prize has been raised to $300 and all the boys in the state are expected to compete. This plan has attracted the attention of the United States agricultural department, which approves of the work.

MR. WAIT has found, like most other secretaries, that the conduct of an efficient group association costs money, and he reminded his members that annual dues probably will have to be increased. This has been done in most of the other states where the group system was adopted. The report closed with a strong appeal to the bankers to help make every bank in Arkansas a member of the association and to have them all united for safe and honest banking and for the development and up-building of the state.

BANKING papers in New York City, apparently under the tutelage of James G. Cannon, are united in advocating Washington City as the place for holding the 1911 A. B. A. convention. Certainly it is a strong movement and the arguments presented are good. Practically, the position does not look so strong, for no invitation has been received from Washington as yet. Much work has been done in favor of San Antonio, and quite a little for New Orleans. According to custom it would seem that one of these two places would be selected. Western members seem to favor San Antonio and Eastern members think it a "little too far away." Those who appear to be most closely connected with the situation seem to think there is a probability of New Orleans being selected on account of her splendid hotels and fairly central location. Time would be November 10th, or thereabouts.

THERE has been an attempt by one railroad company and a minor banking publication to bring the 1911 convention to Chicago. While Chicago banks are not averse to having the convention, they are not likely to be found antagonistic to other cities which never have had the convention or have not had it for many years. In A. B. A. circles one frequently hears Minneapolis, Detroit, and Boston mentioned as eligibles. There is every probability that the next succeeding convention after 1911 will be held in one of these cities.

WASHINGTON CITY at the time congress is in session would have great difficulty in furnishing hotel accommodations for the members and delegates. This is getting to be quite a question when the meeting place is to be decided upon. Bankers like the creature comforts and insist upon "separate room with bath" for each person, which is a tax even on the very largest cities. Perhaps Atlantic City is as nearly ideal as any place could be in this respect. The location will be fixed for the 1911 meeting at the Nashville conference of the executive council, which will meet May 1st, 2d, and 3d.

THE Chicago-Nashville special train de luxe (all compartment cars) will leave Chicago at 6:20 p. m., April 29th, and will arrive in Nashville on Sunday morning. An elaborate dinner will be served on the train and the Nashville clearing house will give the visiting bankers a sight seeing and touring trip by automobiles on Sunday. Special arrangements are being made to entertain socially the ladies who will accompany the members. More than fifty per cent of those in attendance will be accompanied by ladies.

ALL banks in Cleveland will be examined regularly by Francis Coates, Jr., of Richmond, Va., who is now in the employ of the United States government as an examiner. Coates was appointed examiner last Wednesday by the Cleveland Clearing House Association, and he will enter upon his duties on May 1st.

THE second postal savings bank in Indiana, will, it is said, be located at Gary. The one at Princeton has been in successful operation since early in January. At Gary the conditions are ideal to test the workings of the postal bank system in a community where there are many foreigners or persons of foreign ancestry.

FREDERIC B. STEVENS, treasurer of the National Savings of Albany and secretary of the Savings Bank Association of the state of New York, has been appointed a member of the law committee of the savings bank section of the American Bankers Association.

AN interesting result of the system of examination of state banks, as pointed out by Secretary of State Ben L. Bruner in a letter which he has sent to THE CHICAGO BANKER, is that institutions which have been examined have had a marked increase in their deposits, the average being about 15 per cent.

THE inference is that the inspection system has tended to increase public confidence in the banks. Although some of the banks declined to accept the examination at first, scarcely any decline to have their books inspected by the state authorities now.

KENTUCKY bankers have been much pleased to learn that the opposition to the bill providing for a state system of bank inspection for Tennessee, which for a time seemed doomed to defeat, has been withdrawn, amendments having been made as concessions to the opposition. It is now understood that the bill, which provides for a state banking department, will go through easily. Bankers in that state are especially interested because of the fact that a similar bill will be offered in the Kentucky legislature next winter.

MISSISSIPPI bankers are beginning to move toward a state inspection clause in their banking law. Before long every state in the Union must do likewise. Yes, even Illinois!

STANDARD TRUST now is a full fledged member of the Chicago clearing house, having earned its spurs in eight months. The members now number five nationals and thirteen state banks. The U. S. subtreasury makes the total 19.

GILES S. WILSON retired as secretary of the S. C. bankers at the Summerville convention. He now is a U. S. bank examiner, same as Harry Yeager of Montana. Thus two secretaries have "gone up," with a long waiting list.

AT Summerville, Mr. Wilson reported a membership of 305, a gain (net) for the year of 30. The report concludes: "This includes each of the 41 national banks, each of the 4 private banks and every state bank that is as much as four months old, excepting only two that have not renewed and one that has never joined. This membership record is excelled, if at all, by the state of Missouri only, which, a year or two ago, reported every bank in the state a member. I had hoped to achieve a similar record for South Carolina before relinquishing the office of secretary, but will have to leave that honor for my successor to win."

MR. WILSON has been secretary for seven years, and began with 97 members only. "Good work" as they say over at the Sox park. Mr. Wilson reported 125 members of the A. B. A. for South Carolina, and says there should be twice that many.

FRANKLIN E. RUPERT, OF PEKIN, DEAD

On Saturday last, Franklin E. Rupert, president of the First National, Pekin, Ill., died after a lingering and painful illness. He was born in Pekin in 1840 and at his death had attained prominence and success in both business and banking. He was well known to Illinois banking as a substantial citizen and conservative in financial matters.

WILL SEE THE CORONATION

H. Irving Jones, mining engineer, Denver, Colo., who will be remembered by delegates that attended the National A. B. A. Convention two years ago, visited Chicago Saturday en route to London, where he will remain until after the coronation of King George. Mr. Jones is a native of England but feels pride in the thought that he is now carrying his first American papers and trusts soon to be a full fledged citizen.

A CHEERFUL NEW YORKER

Albert S. Cox, assistant cashier, who travels out of New York for the Great Merchants National Bank, 42 Wall Street, dropped into Chicago Saturday, shook hands with the banking crowd and departed that evening for St. Paul. Mr. Cox says that although some lines of business are rather quiet in New York the Merchants National is carrying a good line of deposits and the individual transactions are satisfactory.

NORTH DAKOTA HOPEFUL

H. D. Baillet, vice-president of First National Bank of New England, New England, North Dakota, called on Chicago banking acquaintances Saturday. In conversation with officials of the Central Trust Company Mr. Baillet expressed his belief that North Dakota would show up with a splendid wheat crop this season, and that business conditions were promising for the future in the entire Northwest.

CONSTITUTION IS REJUVENATED

George Woodruff, president of First National, Joliet, made a flying trip to Chicago Tuesday and tarried long enough to say that the rejuvenated constitution and by-laws of Illinois Bankers Association when finally adopted would be a thing of beauty and a joy forever.

Banking Opinion

President D. R. Forgan of National City Bank, Chicago, has returned from his Texas visit. He did not go beyond the northern section of the state but he saw enough to convince him that the resources and prospects of Texas have not been overestimated.

"My only regret in connection with Texas," said Mr. Forgan to a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER, "is that this city has not a larger trade there. One could hardly exaggerate the natural wealth of the new country that I saw.

"There is a safe outlet there for a great deal of Chicago capital and for five times the amount of merchandise that we now send. The development of the country is rapid and permanent. One can see fine villages of five hundred to a thousand inhabitants where there was nothing but bare prairie a year or two ago.

"A fact that impressed me is that farmers in many cases get enough from their first crop to pay for the land. The return from wheat, alfalfa, corn, cotton and other crops amounts to anywhere from $25 to $75 an acre and that is the range of prices for land. There are millions of acres of virgin soil in the northern and central parts of the state awaiting the work of settlers. The land is ready for the plow, there being little timber there."

With respect to general business and the use for capital Mr. Forgan said the settlers and investors were taking in a great deal of money but nevertheless the rapid development of all kinds of business called for money. Security as a rule is satisfactory. There are many municipal and railroad bond issues that afford a good opening for investment. After viewing the country an investor can have little fear. Settlers are going in fast and the development of wealth is going on at an amazing rate.

CHARLES N. VOSS IN CHICAGO

President Charles N. Voss of German Savings Bank, Davenport, has been a visitor at First National in Chicago this week. Mr. Voss is at the head of a concern with ten millions deposits and is in close touch with business interests in the Davenport district. He told Vice-President August Blum that the demand for money had greatly improved and that there was considerable trade activity throughout Iowa.

ENTERTAIN TEXAS BANKERS

Officials of National Bank of the Republic have been entertaining Vice-President J. T. Scott of Houston First National, and E. A. Peden, a bank director and manufacturer, also of Houston. These are two of the most influential men of their district.

GRAIN MARKETS STEADY

Wheat has been fairly steady this week around 90 cents for May and 87½ for July. Corn advanced to 52½ for May and 53 for July.

OAKDALE BANKER HERE

Cashier C. W. Lancaster of Oakdale Commercial Bank, Oakdale, Ill., has been in Chicago this week.

LAWTON JOINS FORT DEARBORN

Harry Lawton, formerly manager of the foreign exchange department of Continental-Commercial National, has accepted this position with Fort Dearborn National and will enter upon his new duties May 1st.

James McCurrach succeeds Mr. Lawton at Continental-Commercial. Mr. McCurrach has been with the Continental for a number of years, part of the time as assistant to Mr. Lawton and for a while as chief clerk. He was with the Northern Trust a number of years ago. Both of these gentlemen are experts in their line.

Gain in Business

Chicago bankers report a steady money market, with no advance from last week's quotations. Demand is improving in accordance with a gradual gain in the volume of commercial business. Loans are on a 5 per cent basis with the larger customers receiving accommodations at 4½ to 4¾. Real estate securities are taken at the usual range of 5 to 6 per cent. Bonds of all kinds are steady on a fair business.

PRIESTS QUIT BANK BOARDS

A recent order issued by Bishop James Davis of Davenport requires all Catholic priests in the Davenport diocese to resign from positions they may hold as officers or directors of any of the banks in that district. The order carries into effect a recent order of the Pope. It is not known how many bank officials will be affected by the order in Iowa but it is probable that there are many of them.

Chicago bankers say there is a general order to this effect. It was issued because in many cases priests have been imposed upon. It is a rare thing to find a priest on a directorate in this city.

Consecutive Dates

Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and Missouri have chosen consecutive dates for their state conventions. Texas comes first with the meeting at Dallas on May 17th-18th-19th. Oklahoma bankers will meet at Oklahoma City, May 22d-23d and Kansas and Missouri on May 24th-25th. Couldn't be better arranged to make it easy for the traveling evangelists who go out for the reserve banks.

ON THE NASHVILLE SPECIAL

Among the latest reservations on the big Chicago-Nashville Special are Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust, St. Louis; John Perrin of Indianapolis; J. C. Bassett, president Aberdeen (S. D.) National, and J. O. Wilson, Bloomington, Ill.

INDIANA BANKER HERE

President D. D. Jacobs of Farmers and Traders Bank, Lafayette, Ind., was a visitor at LaSalle Street National, Chicago, recently and gave an encouraging report of business conditions in Indiana.

Hits Aldrich Plan

"Banking Reform" was discussed at the annual dinner Saturday night of the Minneapolis chapter A. I. B. in the Commercial club by E. D. Hulbert, vice-president of Merchants Loan & Trust company of Chicago, who opposed the Aldrich plan. Governor Eberhart spoke on "The Young Man in Finance," in which he said that the expense of the last legislature was more than justified in the passing of one bill for the improvement of rural education passed under the leadership of Joseph Chapman, Jr., for the Minnesota Bankers Association.

The Aldrich plan will not work, Mr. Hulbert said, principally because it seems to have been based very largely on European conditions which are non-existent in this country. There are two main reasons, Mr. Hulbert said why the banking machinery of the United States occasionally breaks down. One is the crop-moving demand, the other the speculative activity of Wall Street. Mr. Hulbert said in part:

"It is proposed to organize a great corporation to be known as the Reserve Association of America with an authorized capital of $300,000,000. Its headquarters are to be in Washington and it is to have fifteen branches in various parts of the country. The stock is to be owned entirely by national banks, and its business in this country is to be confined entirely to national banks and the government. The stock is to be only half paid up, so if banks enough come in to subscribe for all the authorized capital, the association will start with a paid in capital of $150,000,000.

It is to have forty-five directors who are to be elected in a complicated manner and with extraordinary safeguards against control by any special interests.

"These safeguards, however, seem of rather small importance in view of the fact that about all this board of directors has power to do is to elect annually five members of an executive committee of nine. When once appointed, this committee has practically entire control of the corporation and is not subject to control by the board. The other four members of the committee are the governor, two deputy governors and the comptroller of the currency. One commentator says this will be the most powerful committee in the United States. Undoubtedly this is true, but it will be a serious subject for consideration whether or not it is desirable to have the financial welfare of this country largely dependent on the wisdom and fidelity of nine men, no matter how appointed.

"Let us suppose that they do succeed in what they call centralizing and mobilizing a considerable part of the cash reserves of the country. What are they going to do with them? We are told that this great fund will be held to protect the financial world from disaster if trouble breaks out in any part of the country. This great fund will be available to extinguish the conflagration at the start. Theoretically this plan is sound, but as a matter of experience we have found that there is only one place in the country where financial trouble causes general alarm, and that is in New York. The financial

WILLIAM HAZZARD has been elected cashier of the big Commercial-German at Peoria. He has been in the bank's employ for twenty years of acceptable service. Edward A. Cole has retired. W. B. Reed, teller, succeeds Mr. Hazzard as assistant cashier.

MR. HAZZARD has a large acquaintance in the state and among bankers is known as a student. In group work he has been a faithful co-worker from the earliest little band to the final triumph over entrenched opposition. He had wisdom enough to refuse several tempting offers to leave his native city.

B. F. HARRIS has put out his recent Chicago Commercial Association address on "What I Know About Farming," in booklet form. It was carefully prepared and deserves wider circulation. Mr. Harris is chairman of the agricultural committee of the Illinois Bankers Association. This committee, if it succeed in breaking the strangle hold of the meddlesome ex-presidents and can side step the commercial fertilizer octopus ought to be of great service to the state, and to banking.

EVERY banker should be wise to the cheap wide angle lens in use by the commercial photographer. When you have interior views of a bank taken stipulate "not greater than a medium angle lens to be used." Take no excuses but stick. Use two "views," instead of one if necessary, and have your place look in the photo as it does to the eye.

FURTHERMORE, don't get excited about "the death cup" nor "the death towel." This is only agitation favoring legislation to fasten a paper towel and a paper cup annuity on the railroads, hotels, etc. Just as the armor plate people hire men to get up war scares when an appropriation is in doubt.

BANKERS blame their downfall upon various things. Ten years ago "the races" was the thing. Then "gambling on Wall Street" was used as an excuse. Now it is the automobile with attached expenses. E. F. Burns got into the Tipton (Kan.) bank for over ten thousand on this lay. He was the cashier.

SAFE deposit vaults now are to be found in every city and town. Fifty years ago, this week, the first one was opened in New York. It was the Safety Deposit Company and had quite a time getting under way. It was a winning business venture from the very first.

JAMES J. TOWNSEND, a leading broker, has been named for the presidency of the Chicago Stock Exchange, to succeed Frederick D. Countiss. E. G. Foreman is the candidate for treasurer.

MORE than 525 tickets have been taken for the trust company banquet in New York on May 5th. A number of Western bankers, including Oliver C. Fuller, head of the trust company section, will go direct from Nashville, after the big council meeting.

HERE'S a suggestion from one of our ablest bankers. He read what J. N. Dol-ley, banking commissioner for Kansas, had to say on page 14 of last week's CHICAGO BANKER. This is what was suggested. "He (Mr. Dolley) should get a copy of the Aldrich plan and read it for himself. Whoever told him about it deceived him cruelly."

THAT the Chinese, "who invented everything," anticipated even President Taft's brilliant arbitration proposals to England, is shown in John Stuart Thomson's important new book, "The Chinese," which suggests the settlement of all far Eastern questions by "the patrol of the Pacific by the entire American navy, just as the Atlantic seas must be delegated to the entire British fleet." This is the practical application of the growing Anglo-American "entente cordiale."

"THE CHINESE" is published by the Bobbs-Merrill Company of Indianapolis, and tells how in return for Britain's policing of the Atlantic, America would police the Pacific, and hold Japan within bounds, which would be really welcomed by Japan's taxpayers, who now uselessly bow under proportionately the heaviest per capita tax of any nation. Since John Hay's proposals of 1899, the Chinese people, Mr. Thomson says, look to America as the savior of their territorial integrity, the maintainer of the "open door" for all, and the policeman of international peace, who aims to acquire no one's land.

JOHAN F. HAGEY, First National, Chicago, is touring the South with the Chicago Association of Commerce delegation, but will be at the Nashville conference of council and committeemen, and will return with the Chicago special train over the C. & E. I.

THOSE of you who want to get an accurate focus upon the "Possibilities of Senator Aldrich's suggestions for monetary legislation," are advised to read J. B. Forgan's address on that very subject before the council banquet at Nashville. It will be printed in full in next week's issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER.

HILLSBORO, TEXAS, has four rather evenly balanced banks. The First State and the Farmers National are about a tie at $320,000 in deposits and the Citizens and Sturgis nationals are close together around a quarter of a million. The Sturgis has $100,000 capital and each of the other three has $50,000 capital and a like amount in surplus. Thus the four probably come as near dividing things evenly as any four banks in the country. W. M. Williams, president of the Farmers, was in Chicago last week and spoke of this condition and its happy family effect.

"ON the firing line" isn't an article in the Daily News war series as one might suppose, but is the title of a fine talk made by P. W. Hall, secretary for Iowa, at the state group meetings. Visits from secretaries with ideas and a "line of shop talk" do lots of good for the cause at the smaller meetings which are more personal.

CHAIRMAN C. H. HUTTIG of the big council expects the members "to give the subject of 'currency reform' a good deal of attention" at the Nashville conference. The attendance promises to be larger and more representative than usual.

"I HAVE cut out," writes a reader, "your short article on the 'A. B. C. of the Aldrich plan' by Mr. Huttig of St. Louis. It's the shortest and the clearest thing I've seen on the subject. He gives a simple, clear statement of the financial conditions which require correction, the plan which has been devised and the manner in which it is expected to correct existing evils. It is so worded that the man on the street can understand."

IT really is fine to treat a subject of such vital importance in such a way that the reader needs neither guide book nor diagram. In this light Mr. Huttig's article ought to do a lot of good in disarming the uninitiated of distrust and suspicion. Furthermore his word goes a long way with the real western bankers.

"I DO not remember," said G. M. Reynolds, speaking to New York newspaper men, last week, "when the planting conditions in the agricultural districts have been better. In California and the Southwest they have had abundance of moisture and the prospects for large crops are excellent. Farmers at present are holding on to the products they now have in the expectation of higher prices and the banks are willing to finance this movement on account of the plethora of funds. We feel that this tendency on the part of the farmers is perfectly legitimate, as the conditions of the country banks is such as to stand all such demands made upon them."

ANOTHER good banker, seeing the name of Woodrow Wilson as a top liner for the Illinois convention at Peoria writes in to say a few lines for that distinguished gentleman. Part of the letter reads:

"WHAT does Woodrow Wilson's strength consist of? Why is he regarded with almost reverence by the honest citizenship of the state of New Jersey? Simply because he has the courage in these strenuous times to plant himself in uncompromising opposition to those characters who embody within themselves all the infamies that go to make up characterless political traders. That Woodrow Wilson is a splendid prospective candidate for the presidency need not be announced. Deep down in the hearts of every honest man there springs a hope, a longing and a yearning that 1912 will see a man of wisdom, a man of courage, a man of indomitable will, who will allow no obstacle, no political expediency, no howl of any pampered interest to sway him from the performance of his duty to a suffering people."

WE hope this little paragraph comes to the attention of all who are like minded with the writer. Governor Wilson is a national character and has the good will of all free of the Iowa Association, at Group 4 meeting at Elkader, April 27th

On The Firing Line

Short talk by Secretary P. W. Hall

My talk is really more of a secretary's report than an address and I ask your kind consideration for a few moments only.

The average banker listens with respectful interest to the cannonading of the big guns and the rattling of the musketry on the platform at a convention, and perhaps does not realize the research required in gathering the ammunition necessary for shots which clearly hit the mark, and I hope that my powder is wholly of the smokeless variety. I come to you from the very center of activities, the firing line, not that we are shooting at each other, but we are campaigning for a greater and better association.

I want to talk principally of thoughts that are near and dear to the hearts of the bankers of Iowa, and perhaps of this group in particular. I think a convention is not only a great educator, but also a successful promoter of business, through the gentle and potent influence of friendship. We interchange social greetings, thus materially aiding in breaking down the barriers and prejudices which are frequently caused by competition among those who are practically strangers. I am informed that the meetings of this group have been signally successful, your progress and development without interruption, the social side has not been neglected and the business side ever broadens.

You must have the respect and confidence of the public to get their banking business. You remember the old negro servant who came to her mistress the day before she was to be married and entrusted her savings to her. The mistress was much surprised and said, "Why should I keep it; I thought you were going to get married?" "So I is, Missus, but do you 'spose I'd keep all dis money in the house wid that strange niggah?"

There is no member of society, I speak of society in its broader meaning, more closely in touch with the people in their home life, social life, business life and public life, than the banker, so we must proceed in wisdom and integrity to dignify our profession by fidelity and devotion to duty. The true banker's honesty is not simply a convenience and his principles shifted here and there for monetary advantage. We take out of our business just what we put into it and it is worth a thousand dollars to have the habit of looking on the bright side of things. There is something the matter with the fellow who can't smile; his face needs fixing.

"Exacting work within the narrow confines of an office has a tendency to curtail one's range of vision and will be a bar to larger opportunities if one falls a victim to its influence." Our contact with other bankers, with whom we mix freely at a convention, is full of useful instruction as well as a source of pleasure.

A noted packer in Chicago, who is a director in one of our banks there, I say "our banks" because Iowa furnishes most of the officers for them, was asked what particular talent it was that made the president of that bank such a wonderfully successful man, and he replied in one word, "courtesy." We cannot put too much emphasis on the fact that the highest civility is the part of the code of every bank. The wearing duties of bank officers, the mental strain put upon them, the difficult character of the dealings they are constantly having with the outside public, and the idiosyncrasies and peculiarities of many customers, are each and all, causes which render it hard for these officers to maintain at all times this pleasant equanimity.

The bankers must be aroused to the fact that our mutuality of interests provides an unlimited chance for progress. For some years we have been undergoing visibly an economic transition of far reaching importance to us. This significant movement has caused the strengthening of our assets, the foundation on which we build, and the genuine Iowa asset is now of unquestioned stability. We don't have to feather our nest with borrowed plumes. We are very fortunate to live in a state where credits are of such a high established character, because the handling of credits is your real function and it is necessary to study earnestly and devise every reasonable method to safeguard our banks. Safe banking and lasting prosperity grow in the same soil.

If, in my talk, I appear to be bragging about the Iowa Bankers Association, you must understand that not any officer is taking credit individually, as men cannot partake too freely of that which might cause their heads to swell, lest the shrinkage might cause pain and humiliation. The peacock is a beautiful bird but the stork delivers the goods.

I have had the privilege as well as the burden of being an almost daily visitor at the state legislature, endeavoring to advance legislation advocated by bankers and to kill legislation detrimental to banks or other business as judged by the bank. On the firing line all the time. One of the hardest fights was to get the bill through the senate which repealed the vicious tax ferret law. The tax ferret, of course, recovers for the public treasury revenue which might otherwise be lost. The public does not consider the cost or source of the revenue but only considers gathering in the biggest possible revenue. The friend of the ferret system defended it in the name of Mary of the vine-clad cot, who pays on all the cot is worth while the rich man eludes the assessor. This was the argument used by county officers when the supervisors employed a ferret. They felt that his activity would mean more revenue and hence more salary and more deputies for them. They got more salaries and more deputies but Mary of the vine-clad cot never pulled down a dividend because the ferrets were out hustling to relieve her tax burden by making the rich man pay.

It was deplorable that those the least able to pay were the ones from whom the ferret exacted his tribute. The victims were the widows and orphans who have a few thousand dollars insurance money or those in declining years whom the ferret obliges to move to more congenial climes to protect the funds necessary for their comfort. Money owes allegiance to no locality and seeks the direction of least resistance.

The efforts of bankers all over the state have been concentrated through the secretary's office and thus focused on the senate and house, and the members of our association can justly claim much of the credit for the repeal of the tax ferret law, the enacting of the moneys and credits five mill levy, the bulk sales bill, the uniform bills of lading bill, the bill permitting state and savings banks to omit liability of directors and list of corresponding banks from their published statements and many other bills of minor importance.

The majority of bankers do not appear to favor the new bank tax law and we opposed it in the legislature, but, like Abe Martin's report after attending "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "the dogs were good but they had poor support." We assisted in having a number of bad bills killed in the committee or on the floor and caused to be introduced a number of desirable bills which did not pass, but I will venture the statement, without fear of successful contradiction, that the repeal of the tax ferret law and the enactment of the low moneys and credits law will both directly and indirectly reimburse Iowa bankers hundreds of times over for the small dues paid to the Iowa Bankers Association. The able tax and legislative committees of the association have been active in this work, devoted much time to it and are entitled to much credit.

I have mailed copies of Senate File No. 387 to all members of our association and from letters received the prevailing opinion is that the courts should be asked to interpret the new law. It seems that greater care should be taken by our legislature in drafting statutes. Each law should be so clear and precise that the number of questions of construction to be afterwards passed upon will be reduced to the minimum. In some cases judicial construction produces a result opposite the idea of the author of such statute, thus many a law admirably designed for the alleviation of some social or economic ill gives little, if any, of the relief desired. Our legislature comprises an intelligent body of lawyers, bankers and other business men, many of whom have been visitors at my office and it was only through their friendly co-operation that we have secured so much valuable legislation. We have gained many things and just because we lost one or two, we won't quit work any more than the judge did when the attorney informed him that the bull pup had chewed up the court bible. The judge said "let the witness kiss the bull pup then, we can't adjourn court a week just to hunt up a new Bible."

Our association has an insurance department which is patronized by six hundred banks now, where it formerly had three hundred, but it is entitled to nine hundred more. The association has caused sweeping reductions in burglary insurance rates in Iowa,—and, as our small profit goes into the protective fund exclusively, thus directly benefiting every single bank in the state, I feel justified in requesting that the Iowa Bankers Association be given the business which is its due. This subject will be more fully covered in my report at our annual convention.

I wish to ask everybody to boost for the Mason City convention, June 15th and 16th. A program that will deeply interest you is being prepared and Mason City has united with its beautiful Clear Lake suburb in providing the finest entertainment ever offered a bankers' convention.

PULLMAN PROFITS LARGE

The Pullman Palace Car Company has filed a report with the interstate commerce commission. It is the first ever submitted and, while not too comprehensive, considerable enlightenment is given.

For approximately half a century the Pullman company strenuously insisted that it was not a railroad, not a common carrier and not subject to federal regulation. It claimed to be a hotel company whose hotels were run on wheels, but it finally decided to tell about its business.

The company started nearly fifty years ago with $1,250,000 capital. It never had any new capital paid in except from earnings. Stock dividends have increased its capital until it is now $120,000,000. A man who owned $1,000 of its capital in the beginning would have drawn down an average of about 8 per cent a year ever since and incidentally had his capital increased to $100,000.

Last year the company gathered in $33,334,073 from the operation of 5,283 cars. It paid 8 per cent cash dividend and distributed $20,000,000 in stock. The only roads in whose sleeping cars this company has no interest are the St. Paul, the New Haven and the Great Northern. The company builds its own cars and many others; even exports cars to foreign countries.

A steel Pullman of the most modern type costs $24,124. Of the old wooden type the cost was $14,722. People don't get telescoped or burned up in the steel cars, but these come high and have less ornamentation about them. There are in operation many of the old-fashioned Pullmans with solid black walnut carved woodwork that could not be duplicated to-day except for small fortunes.

The average Pullman earns a profit per day of $7.62. The report fails to state anything as to the wages of porters, or the amount the public pays them for having its shoes shined.

HETTY GREEN'S BANKS

The plan to form a trust company to serve as the medium for handling Hetty Green's wealth has been abandoned by Mrs. Green and her son, Edward H. R. Green, and instead they are to organize a private banking house with branch offices in various parts of the country where Mrs. Green's holdings are heaviest. The change of plan was caused by the discovery that the laws of the various states did not give them the right to hold real estate in the name of one common corporation or trust company. The private banking house which is to be formed will have its main offices in New York under the name of "E. H. R. Green & Company." There will be branches in Boston, Chicago, Dallas and San Francisco. It is not the purpose of the plan to do general banking business for others. However, Colonel Green says it is possible that in a year or so the concern will be in a position to accept some outside business. The scheme does not affect Mrs. Green's present banking relations.

BANK TAKES HOUSTON BONDS

The South Texas National Bank of Houston, has taken over the entire issue of $500,000 bonds by the city of Houston, voted for the building of the Main Street viaduct. By the terms of the deal the bank pays the city a premium of $1,000 for the bonds, which bear interest at 4½ per cent per annum, payable in thirty years, with an option of ten years reserved by the city.

The bank has arranged to pay over immediately upon receipt of the bonds the entire sum of $500,000 together with the premium, making the money for the viaduct immediately available.

The viaduct bonds were voted at a special election in Houston January 10th last when the $500,000 bonds for the viaduct and $1,250,000 bonds for the deepening of the Houston Ship Channel were voted.

SEATTLE BANKER ARRESTED

James A. Murray, president of the American Savings Bank and Trust Company of Seattle, and who is reputed to be worth $20,000,000 was arrested recently on a complaint charging him with using the United States mails to further a scheme to defraud, and gave $2,500 bail for his appearance at Spokane to stand trial. Murray and five other men were indicted at Spokane recently.

BETTER BANK SUPERVISION

Legislation to give the Pennsylvania banking department complete control over insolvent and shaky financial institutions coming under its supervision and to wipe out the costly receiverships was presented in the senate on Tuesday by Senator E. L. Tustin of Philadelphia. The bill was prepared for Commissioner of Banking William H. Smith by the attorney-general's department and has the full approval of Governor John K. Tener.

Pennsylvania now has one of the best administered banking departments in the union and, with this additional legislation, Commissioner Smith will be fully equipped to protect the depositors in state banks, trust companies and building and loan associations, the three classes of institution coming under his supervision.

Commissioner Smith has long contended that the iniquitous system of receiverships should be wiped out. He found a ready and hearty supporter of the policy in Governor Tener. Great care has been given to the preparation of the legislation and it is considered even a stronger bill than the law now in force in New York.

The Smith bill provides that, whenever the commissioner of banking shall have "reason to conclude that any corporation subject to his supervision and examination is insolvent or is in an unsafe condition to do business, or that its business or manner of conducting the same is injurious and contrary to the interests of the public, or in case any such corporation shall suspend payment of its obligations," he shall take charge.

WILL SELL WALSH STOCK

Judge Kohlsaat, in the United States circuit court, has directed that $11,000,000 of common stock of the Southern Indiana Railway Company be sold after ten days unless defaulted bonds and interest amounting to $4,762,777.76 be paid. This is one of the lines promoted by John R. Walsh, but now included with the Chicago Southern in a reorganized company called the Chicago, Terre Haute and Southeastern, controlled in large part by local banks.

Max H. Whitney was appointed special receiver to sell the property. The decree of foreclosure was entered in the suit of the Girard Trust Company of Philadelphia, which loaned the railroad $4,000,000 in July, 1905, taking as security a lien on its $11,000,000 stock.

The present action is merely in the direction of learning the title to the property as reorganized, the stock to be sold having no value to anyone else.

CLEARING HOUSE ELECTION

The following officers have been selected to guide the destinies of the Houston Clearing House for the ensuing year, the change to take place May 1st. J. E. McAshan, president; H. R. Eldridge, vice-president; E. Raphael, active manager. The newly elected president, Mr. McAshan, takes the place of H. S. Fox, who has resigned on account of ill health. Mr. McAshan, the new president, is vice-president of the South Texas National Bank and is prominently identified with the business interests of the city.

DENVER BANKER IN TOWN

Vice-President Allen Farrell Ayers of Continental Trust Company, Denver, was a visitor at Fort Dearborn National the fore part of the week. Denver has passed almost entirely through its dull period, according to Mr. Ayers, and is enjoying the usual spring activity. Colorado continues to absorb a large immigration and finds this a source of prosperity.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

Fishermen have found the body of the late Robert Newton of Ottawa in the Illinois River at Depue. Newton was a former banker of Ottawa and Aurora and had also been in the banking business at Billings, Montana. Financial troubles caused him to leap into the Illinois River at Ottawa on the night of January 31st after several days of brooding over his losses. The body had been in the water for about ten weeks. Newton was in life an enthusiastic horseman and for a number of years was presiding judge of the grand circuit of the American Trotting Association.

Farmers Pool their Interests

Farmers of Cumberland and Coles counties have signed an agreement pledging themselves not to raise broom corn for five years unless the dealers will guarantee them a price to exceed $120 a ton in advance of planting. For twenty years the two counties have been the broom corn center of the country. The crop of broom corn in the vicinity of Areola and Charleston is the staple crop, and the bankers in that region watch the fluctuations of the crop with the greatest interest.

Millikin Estate will Build

A large addition will be built this season to the Millikin National Bank building in Decatur this season. The trustees of the Millikin estate are now working with the architect and a first-class structure in every particular will be erected. The new building will be seven stories high—the same height as the original building. Above the second floor the tenants will have the privilege of planning their own rooms and it is needless to say that the new building will be desirable to those who will occupy it.

School Savings Plan Abandoned

The board of education of Canton has decided to discontinue the school savings bank system. One of the school principals of that city absconded with over $100 of the savings fund and the school directors have decided to make good the shortage out of their own pockets and to abandon the plan. An attorney was consulted who told them that the district school funds could not be used to reimburse the children and rather than see them lose, the members of the school board have made good the loss.

The school savings bank system was started in Canton during the school year of 1909-1910 and the funds were divided among the First National, the First State, and the Canton National Banks. All savings accounts held by school children in these banks have been ordered withdrawn. Other cities, especially Rock Island and Kankakee, have tried the plan and the latter especially has found it very successful.

Illinois Notes

A new state bank has been organized at Argenta, a few miles northeast of Decatur. It is known as the Gerha State Bank and the incorporators are S. Gerha, P. E. Gerha, and L. O. Hilbrant. The capital will be $25,000.

The date for the meeting of Group Six at Charleston has been set for Wednesday, May 10th. Secretary Glassco is anxious for a large representation of Group Six bankers to be present. The business session will be held from nine in the morning until noon, followed by luncheon and an automobile ride.

The Farmers Bank of Downs, near Bloomington, has been reorganized and the capital increased to $25,000. J. D. Downs is the president, J. R. Carlisle is vice-president and E. B. Lanier is the cashier. A new bank building will be erected this spring.

Schuette's Reply

By John Schuette of Manitowoc, Wis.

The Commercial West, of Minneapolis, says: "The scheme to guarantee bank deposits, which is said to have originated in the busy brain of John Schuette of Manitowoc, Wis., and was later taken up as a national political issue by the Nebraska rainbow chaser, seems to be a failure; at least it has failed in Oklahoma."

I deny the failure emphatically, as it has proven a success. What was the primary object of the guaranty law? It was to protect the depositors, prevent bank panics, and force bankers to do safer banking. This the law has accomplished. Under it not a dollar has been lost to a depositor. There has been no bank panic even when the largest bank failed, and the laws have been and are being perfected on a sounder basis by the aid of the bankers themselves. For instance, the Oklahoma law limits the number of banks, the loans, the deposits, the interest rate on deposits, and has other safeguards which are lacking in most states.

In Wisconsin new banks are springing up like mushrooms without limit, mostly with $10,000 capital. They may receive a million dollars deposits, and pay 6 per cent interest without hindrance. This could not happen in Oklahoma.

Although the banks were unfortunate by the failure of one of the largest banks, and had to be assessed to an abnormal amount to make good such loss, yet, if the banks will not retreat and will take courage after this first great loss, I feel assured that they will succeed. All insurance companies have their losses by spurts.

While I am more than ever convinced that the principle of deposit insurance is sound, and the only bank panic preventive, I admit that if adopted by a single state it has not the chance of such immediate success as were possible if adopted by the entire nation.

I had printed an article "State vs. National Bank Insurance," pointing out these advantages. It is about the same as if a fire insurance company would confine its risks to a single city, then, by an unusually heavy loss it might be disastrously affected, while, if it had its risks distributed over many cities, such loss would be but ordinary.

For these reasons I always discouraged state bank deposit insurance, except when the legislature of Wisconsin had a general deposit insurance bill under consideration. I advised to limit the insurance to any one depositor to $500. This would make the insurance safe without the least doubt and the cost to banks insignificant; eliminate the small depositors from bank runs, meet the postal bank's $500 guaranty, and would still leave to the large bankers the superior confidence they may believe they enjoy over their smaller competitors. From time to time this limit could be increased.

The Oklahoma law has completely disproved the assertion that guaranty of deposits will not prevent bank runs.

The special committee sent to Oklahoma to investigate (nearly all unfavorable to the guaranty law) reported that they were there just when the Columbia Bank and Trust Company failed and it caused no excitement nor ripple of any kind. It has also proven that the bankers, being directly interested in the safety of one another's banks, are more alert to see to it that the laws are the safest, are more rigidly administered, bank examinations more stringent, and wildcat banking eradicated.

That the insuring of bank deposits can be more easily accomplished than any other thing insurable, if largely distributed, is proven by our 47 years' history which show a loss of only 1-20 of 1 per cent or 5 cents per annum on each $100 deposits.

Can this experience be kept up under a deposit insurance plan? Would we not have more reckless banking? I answer no and claim that, because of the very reason that each banker would be the loser by wild banking, he will exert himself to have banking safe.

John J. Arnold

At the farewell banquet to Frank C. Enright, trade commissioner to South America for the Chicago Association of Commerce, J. J. Arnold made the principal address. Mr. Arnold, who is manager of the foreign exchange department of First National Bank, is taking an active interest in the commercial association's work. He said:

"As you no doubt know, foreign banks are organized on an entirely different system and operated on an entirely different basis from those in the United States. We here have an individual banking system under which banks are capitalized according to the size of the community in which the same are operated, while the European and Canadian banks are as a rule institutions of large capitalization located in the large financial centers, through which the smaller communities are taken care of by means of filiales or branches. This naturally gives them many advantages over us. By way of illustration I need only call your attention to the fact that before our war with Spain had been brought to a close some of the Canadian banking institutions had opened branches in Havana. While we at the same time were alive to the possibilities and opportunities opened up in the West Indies, we stood practically helpless and were compelled to allow foreign banks to enter a territory which by right belonged to us. Our committee at this time is especially interested in the developing of trade with South America, and I believe that you will agree with me that one of the greatest needs at this time is better or more satisfactory banking relations with that country. This, however, applies not only to the question of banking institutions but to the development of a more satisfactory exchange market. The question as to how the banks in foreign countries take care of our international banking transactions of course is of great interest to us.

"In the European nations, like England, Germany, France, Holland, etc., we find absolutely no difficulty. This, of course, is due to the fact that our transactions are taken care of by banking institutions friendly to and directly interested in both the exporter and importer. In South America, however, conditions are quite the opposite, the banking business being done largely by European institutions, the managers of which, of course, are more particularly interested in the development of trade relations with their homeland. There are some purely South American banks but the principal institutions as already stated are European. From this, of course, it can be readily understood that while we find it entirely satisfactory to operate with a foreign bank when we are doing business with the country in which that bank is situated and of which it is a product, we find it quite the reverse when we come to transact business with a foreign bank located in a country where our merchants and their commercial men are natural competitors.

"In addition to the disadvantages already pointed out, we find that there is as yet no satisfactory exchange market established between South and North America due to various causes. You, of course, understand how the exchange market is established and maintained. We buy, for instance from England and they buy from us. We apply the purchase against the sale, and if the transactions balance exchange is nominally at par. If, however, we buy more than we sell it means that we must settle the difference in gold or its equivalent, and inasmuch as the actual transactions vary from time to time exchange fluctuates accordingly. This does not apply merely to exports and imports of the natural products and manufactured articles of the countries in question but the purchase and sale of stocks and bonds from one country to the other as well as the money spent by travelers are conditions which affect the shifting of balances.

"While we of course have been doing some exporting to South America and on the other hand have been importing, we have not been in a position to apply the one against the other owing to the fact that most of our imports are effected under sterling or London commercial letters of credit and must consequently be adjusted in London exchange. One of the reasons for this method of financing the imports from South America is that the national bank act prohibits national banks in this country from accepting drawings upon them, and inasmuch as drafts under commercial letters of credit are usually drawn at 60 and 90 days' or four months' sight, acceptance of course becomes a necessity.

"In addition to this we have no established discount market such as exists in European countries. The South American banker therefore naturally finds it more advantageous to have his drawings accepted in a country where a discount market exists, which makes it possible for him to have such drafts as he may negotiate discounted at will.

"It will therefore, I think, be clear to you all that there is much room for improvement in our banking system, a fact which has long since been recognized by financial students the world over, and has resulted in considerable agitation and discussion, however, without material results until recently when the Aldrich plan for the establishment of a central reserve association with reserve agencies has been developed.

"Inasmuch as most of the members of this committee and many of the members of the Chicago Association of Commerce are interested more particularly in the financing of exports, I think it well to call your attention to the method employed in the discounting of drafts drawn against foreign shipments. This more particularly because of the fact that in this also the conditions in South America are quite the reverse to those existing in Europe. When an exporter presents his draft drawn say at 60 or 90 days' sight on a European reimbursement, the draft in question is discounted by the American banker not on the basis of the Chicago loaning rate but is based upon the bank or private discount rate as the case may be in the country or city on which the draft in question is drawn and since the latter is invariably lower than is the loaning rate here the Chicago exporter naturally benefits to that extent. In South America, however, interest or discount rates are higher than the loaning rates in North America. If therefore a Chicago merchant exports to South America and draws in reimbursement a time draft the same would of course of necessity be discounted by the Chicago banker on the basis of the South American rate. This is made necessary by the fact that the Chicago banker cannot afford to invest in an unlimited way in such drawings and hold the same for maturity but must be in a position at all times to rediscount should the demands here make such a course necessary.

"There is no question, however, but that a development of trade relations will naturally bring about some satisfactory financial conditions. Our committee is doing pioneer work in the development of trade with South America and in this Chicago banks should not only have a part but be leaders."

If you want to buy, sell or absorb a bank or insurance company, send for me. I will make preliminary negotiations secretly and diplomatically. Everything confidential in my office. All negotiations conducted personally. Nothing intrusted to the mail.

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER By Mortimer I. Stevens

WISCONSIN

Business conditions in Milwaukee apparently reflect to some extent the general conditions reported as prevailing throughout the entire country. Manufacturers and merchants report a marked falling off in the sales, but in retail lines this is largely attributed to the passing of a month of unusually inclement weather. Among the larger firms, notably the manufacturers of staple products, the falling off in business is attributed to a general business depression which as yet has not assumed any serious proportions and which the majority are prone to look upon without optimistic view.

Bank clearings during the week do not show any marked decline as compared with the same date for one year ago. However, many claim that bank clearings can no longer be taken as a true indication of the condition of local business. Demand for loans at the various banks shows only about normal conditions, while money is reported fairly easy with rates steady.

Wisconsin Bond Business

Bond salesmen who have been spending much of their time among the smaller bankers out in the state report a healthy inquiry for the better grade of securities, but at the same time they say, there is "little doing."

During the past few weeks four of the largest financial institutions of Milwaukee, notably First Savings and Trust Company, Wisconsin Trust Company, Marshall and Ilsley Bank and National Exchange Bank have been called upon to underwrite $1,500,000 worth of bonds for the Milwaukee Northern Railway Company. The mortgage provides that $1,500,000 shall be issued and $2,500,000 additional bonds (making a total of $4,000,000) may be issued at 75 per cent for the cost of extensions and additions to the property, but only when the net earnings for the preceding 12 months have been at least double the interest charges on the bonds issued and to be issued. The trustee under the mortgage is the First Savings and Trust Company. A number of smaller firms in Milwaukee immediately took up large blocks of these bonds and at the present writing, nearly all of these bonds have been taken by Wisconsin investors.

Among the financial institutions of Milwaukee this is looked upon as a favorable sign and an indication that in the future Wisconsin projects of merit will be underwritten by local companies instead of promoters seeking out side capital.

New Wisconsin Guaranty Bill

Senator Owen, the father of the Wisconsin State Bank guaranty bill, has sprung a surprise upon the bankers of this state by offering a substitute for his former bill. This substitute carries a joker at the end in the form of a clause providing for the submission to the people at the general election in November, 1912, of this bill under the referendum act.

This substitute bill also provides that "every state bank except trust company banks and mutual savings banks shall, on the second Monday of January, 1913, credit on its books to the 'Depositors' Insurance Fund,' an amount equal to one-half of 1 per cent of its average deposits during the preceding year." It further provides, that this fund shall be carried on the books of the bank as a liability and to draw interest at 3 per cent per annum. Among other provisions, banks shall credit to this fund one-half of 1 per cent annually until such fund shall equal 2 per cent of the bank's deposits, at which time further assessment shall be suspended until deposits increase or the fund is depleted by withdrawals on account of failures. Not more than one-half per cent is provided for in any one year. Banks starting after the commencement of these assessments shall pay 1 per cent of their capital, such payment to be equalized with deposits at the end of year so as to make same one-half per cent on average deposits. The capital of banks must be maintained equal to 10 per cent of its deposits. In case of failures the insurance fund shall be drawn upon for an amount sufficient to fully pay all deposits which do not bear interest at more than 3 per cent. No insurance, therefore, applying to deposits drawing a higher rate of interest.

Progress of Bank Legislation

The following is a brief summary of the condition of bank legislation in this state at the present time.

The segregation of deposit bill has been killed in the assembly.

Restricting real estate loans to Wisconsin and adjoining states has passed.

The prohibition of loose leaf books of original entry in banks has passed.

Rupp's guaranty bill has been killed in the assembly.

A bill requiring all directors to be residents of Wisconsin has passed the assembly and was amended in the senate to provide for meetings of directors at least every three months instead of monthly.

A new measure has been offered in the form of a bill giving the commissioner of banking power to refuse charter to applicants, if, after a hearing of all interested parties, he decides the refusal is for the public good. This bill also provides that the executive council of the Wisconsin Bankers Association shall be notified of hearings, but gives them absolutely no voice in the decisions. This bill is not looked upon with favor by the bankers of this state as it places a great deal of power in the hands of one man and compels him to assume an unusual degree of responsibility.

Another measure promoted by the association provides a penalty for issuing checks without funds and has passed the senate and will come up for early action in the assembly.

David H. Pollock Dies in Florida

David H. Pollock, president of Beloit Savings Bank, died recently at Orlando, Fla. Mr. Pollock was born in Hebron, Wisconsin, in 1860, and was widely known throughout the entire state. Mr. Pollock was a member of the Knights of Pythias; the Royal Arcanum, the Knights of the Glove and the Modern Woodmen of America.

FRANK COLLINS
Second Vice-President Monroe National, Chicago

NEW MONROE NATIONAL VICE-PRESIDENT

The announcement of the election of Frank Collins as second vice-president of the Monroe National, Chicago, is made by the management of that growing institution. Mr. Collins is a native of Greenville, Mich., coming to Chicago at the age of 14 with his father, who was a successful railroad contractor and had much to do with the building of portions of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. Upon coming to Chicago Mr. Collins entered the employ of John B. Sherman, then the president of the Union Stock Yards and Transit Company. He began as a freight collector and shortly afterward entered the employ of the National Live Stock Bank as exchange clerk and remained with that institution 7 years, leaving them to go with the Kenwood Trust and Savings at 47th Street and Drexel Boulevard. He was cashier of that institution until the organization of the National Produce Bank which opened in 1907, when Mr. Collins became assistant to President Wagner. When the organizers of the LaSalle Street National opened that institution, Mr. Collins was invited to become an assistant cashier and was assigned to the department of new business, traveling out from Chicago calling on the out-of-town bankers and attending bankers conventions. Mr. Collins has a large circle of banking acquaintances, both in and outside of Chicago, who will be pleased to hear of his new connection with the Monroe National.

PAUL BAYNE A VISITOR

Paul Bayne of Bayne, Ring and Company was here from New York Wednesday. He came primarily to study business conditions in the West and incidentally to inspect his company's new Chicago offices. This house has a high standing in financial circles and the local branch is developing a large business.

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

Some difference of opinion exists among St. Louis bankers as to the monetary situation. In certain quarters it is related that certain long dormant lines are waking up, and using more money. Elsewhere there are complaints that stagnation prevails, and that the entire month has developed practically no improvement for the inquiry for funds. Certain it is, however, that money is plentiful with all the leading institutions, and there is nothing in the immediate future which is expected to drain and reduce this accumulation.

A. O. Wilson, vice-president of the State National says that the inquiry now is better than for months, and is picking up right along. The country in which his institution does most of its business has been busy enough, and has reduced its balances considerably this month. He says local sources are broadening in their demands, as well, and that relatively speaking, the State National is fairly well loaned up. George W. Galbreath, cashier of the Third National, says all the persons who have spoken to him on the subject are unanimous in pronouncing the crop prospects the best in years. This is true of bankers from Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Kansas and Louisiana. Winter wheat is thriving, and in the extreme south of Texas cotton is well up. Soil conditions in the cotton belt of Texas is in better shape now than at any like period in years. "Still," says Mr. Galbreath, the tone of the money market continues quiet, and he does not look for any revival in the demand before crop needs begin to make themselves felt.

H. B. Hilliard, president of the Central National, says his institution is enjoying a fair amount of activity. The Southwest, in which that bank operates largely, is in the market for funds to some extent, and according to Mr. Hilliard, the local demand is as good as could be expected under the circumstances. Officials of the Boatmens Bank and the National Bank of Commerce say they are fairly well loaned up, but that the general inquiry, both in the city and country, continues quiet. Rates hold steady in the extreme range between $4\frac{1}{4}$ and $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.

Boom for B. S. Moser

Officials and employees of St. Louis financial institutions have inaugurated a campaign having as its object the election of B. S. Moser of the St. Louis Union Trust Company, and president of the St. Louis Chapter, as president of the American Institute of Banking. The national organization holds its annual convention in Rochester, N. Y., in September. Frank C. Ball of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company, is slated to succeed Mr. Moser as president of the St. Louis Chapter. Mr. Moser will represent the chapter at the annual convention of the Missouri Bankers Association in Kansas City next month. At present the local chapter has about 300 members.

Bankers' Methods Extolled

A high tribute to the methods and acumen of bankers was paid last week at the meeting of Missouri editors at Columbia by C. L. Hobart, a prominent journalist of Holden, Mo. The average of integrity, good sense, judgment and reliability is higher in bankers, according to Mr. Hobart, than in any other line of business or profession in the United States. And this did not make reservation, even, in favor of gentlemen of the cloth. If politicians and public officials did their share in the country's economy as well as do the bankers, this would be a fine land to live in, and taxes would be much lower.

Mercantile Gets Bond Issue

Bonds for the new electric municipal electric light plant of Monette, Mo., have been accepted by the Mercantile Trust Company of this city. The bonds were voted several months ago, but proceedings were delayed by injunction proceedings. The case was decided in favor of the city and the municipal plant will be in operation soon.

Tower Grove Bank Formed

The Tower Grove Bank, a new state institution, is being organized in the Tower Grove district. It will be located at Grand Avenue and Juniata Street, in a building which will be completed September 1st. The bank will have a capital of $100,000 and surplus of $10,000, the stock being offered to subscribers at $110 per share. John Schmoll, president of the Contracting and Supply Company, has been chosen by the organization committee for president. Directors will be elected from the organization committee, which includes the following names: J. L. Hornsby, C. G. Besch, Joseph Dickson, Jr., John T. Fitzsimmons, Dr. A. H. Hamel, J. J. Kleekamp, D. C. Kerckhoff, George A. Kerckhoff, C. A. Lemp, A. R. Schollmeyer, G. H. Schollmeyer, C. F. Stark and J. A. Urquhart.

Alzheimer Takes Hopeful View

Ben Alzheimer, president of the Alzheimer-Rawlings Investment Company, who has just returned from a six weeks' business trip to the large cities of the East, speaks enthusiastically of the business outlook. "Money is easy in the East," said Mr. Alzheimer, "and the financial institutions in that section are purchasing railroad and industrial securities freely. Stock speculation is at a low ebb and general business is on a sound basis. Operators, as a rule, are awaiting the disposition of the big cases in the United States supreme court. I find in each of the cities I visited—New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago—that Western bonds and securities, especially those of St. Louis, stand very high, and are in particular favor among investors."

St. Louisans in Big Deal

The Byrd-Matthews Investment Company was incorporated this week, with $2,000,000 capital stock fully paid in, to engage in lumbering in Georgia and irrigation enterprise in Texas. The stock is subscribed largely by St. Louis capitalists and financiers of the Southwest.

TRUST COMPANIES BEATING THE NATIONALS

Figures prepared by the Boston clearing house show that since 1897 the number of national banks in that city and the national bank capital have been reduced by more than half. In the same time there has been an increase in Boston trust companies. The year 1897 was taken as a period of comparison, inasmuch as it was just prior to the extensive liquidation of the national banks, which began in 1898.

There were in 1897, either in active or partial business activity, fifty-nine national banks and fourteen trust companies. The beginning of 1911 saw the national banks reduced to twenty-three, and the trust companies increased to nineteen.

MICHIGAN BANKERS CONVENTION

The preliminary program of the twenty-fifth annual convention of Michigan Bankers Association, which is to be held in Detroit, June 12th-17th, has been made public through Secretary H. M. Brown. The program includes a boat trip to Buffalo and Niagara Falls, which accounts for the rather unusual length of time that the bankers will be assembled.

The delegates will meet on Tuesday morning, June 13th, at headquarters, Hotel Pontchartrain, as the guests of the Detroit bankers. The convention will be called to order by President Emory W. Clark, and that evening a banquet will be given the bankers at the Pontchartrain, at which prominent speakers will be heard. The ladies will be entertained at the theater during the evening.

On Wednesday the regular sessions of the convention will continue to be held, and trips to Belle Isle and other places of interest will be features of the entertainment. An elaborate ball will be given at Hotel Pontchartrain in the evening.

Thursday, after luncheon, the bankers and their ladies will leave for Buffalo on the "Western States," which has been chartered exclusively for the two days' convention trip. On the way opportunity will be afforded to view the Rivingston Channel, and the boat will arrive at Buffalo Friday morning. At Buffalo the day will be spent in sight-seeing and visiting Niagara Falls. The return from Buffalo will be made Friday evening for a convenient arrival at Detroit on Saturday.

BURT IN NEW RAILROAD WORK

Horace Greeley Burt, an expert engineer, and former president of the Union Pacific, has been appointed chief engineer of the commission to consider the electrification of steam railroads in Chicago. Before going to the Harriman system Mr. Burt was third vice-president as well as chief engineer of the Chicago and Northwestern, and is familiar with the situation at Chicago.

LEWIS S. HILL RESIGNS

Lewis S. Hill, president of Deseret National Bank, Salt Lake City, has resigned, and is succeeded by former Governor John C. Cutler, who is succeeded as vice-president by W. W. Riter. Mr. Hill is 75 years old. He remains chairman of the board of directors of the bank.

A committee of Danville bankers headed by C. L. English, president of the First National, has been working hard on the factory fund of the Danville Industrial Club. With an abundant supply of cheap coal and the best of railroad facilities the city of Danville is working hard for the location of new enterprises. The bankers of Danville are live wires and are doing their full share of the boosting.

Adolph Wochner, cashier of the German-American Bank of Bloomington, will be married this fall to Miss Estella Schrierberg of Cincinnati. Mr. Wochner is a prominent citizen of Bloomington and he and his brothers own the controlling interest in the German-American Bank. He will erect a $10,000 brick veneer home during the summer months.

The First National of Blue Mound, which was held up and robbed a few weeks ago, has received a draft for $1,932 from a prominent casualty company reimbursing them for the loss sustained in their recent experience with yeggmen.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

H. L. Jarboe, Jr., president of the Drovers' National Bank of Kansas City is a very modest man. If not he would swell with pride at the record his bank has made since his connection with it as president January 10th, last. The business of this institution recently has been phenomenal having more than doubled since January 10th.

"Naturally I am quite optimistic," said Mr. Jarboe to a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER the other day. "I have not been in this banking territory long but I am more than pleased with the business done by the Drovers' National. The demand for money for the cattle trade is strong and we have no cause whatever to complain. I believe the outlook for crops is very bright and that spells prosperity for this part of the country."

High Living Ruins Cashier

E. F. Burns, former cashier of the Home State Bank of Tipton, Kan., has been arrested and is said to have confessed to forgeries amounting to more than $10,000. He used this money, it is alleged, in buying motor cars and high living. Burns comes of a wealthy family and the amount of the shortage was made up. Later Bank Commissioner Dolley insisted upon the prosecution of Burns and under threat of being ousted the local county attorney caused Burns' arrest and he is now at liberty under bond. The directors of the bank refused to prosecute.

Slander Bill Becomes Law

Governor Herbert S. Hadley of Missouri has signed the so-called "bank slander" bill passed by the legislature. The one section of this law reads:

"Any person who shall make, utter, circulate or transmit to another or others any statement, untrue in fact, derogatory to the financial condition of any bank, banking house, trust company, surety company, guaranty company, title insurance company or other financial institution in this commonwealth with intent to injure any such financial institution, or who shall counsel, aid, procure or induce another to originate, make, utter, transmit or circulate any such statement or rumor with like intent, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in a sum not to exceed $1,000 or imprisoned in the county jail for a period not exceeding one year or by both such fine and imprisonment."

This law is the result of agitation resulting from the common belief in Kansas City that the National Bank of Commerce of Kansas City, which closed its doors in 1907, was "talked to death."

After its failure the National Bank of Commerce was reorganized and within a very short time paid off every dollar of indebtedness and is to-day one of the soundest financial institutions in the Middle West.

Robbers are Punished

Those bank robbers who have been convicted in the Oklahoma and Kansas courts recently have been dealt with severely. Charles Koonts, who helped rob the Cotton Exchange Bank of Roger Mills county, Okla., last November has just been sentenced to forty years in the penitentiary at McAlester, Okla. R. F. Graham, who is charged with having been his accomplice and who was arrested later, will be tried in the same court next week.

Henry Bowers, arrested for robbing a box car in Ottawa, Kan., turned out to be one of the men who helped rob the bank at Hudson, Kan., several weeks ago. The bank robbers were interrupted and in flight they shot and killed Thomas Fowler, secretary of the Kansas Anti-Horsethief Association. Bowers has been convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment.

Ed Harrold, Thomas Redmond, Thomas Madden and Fred Boyd were found guilty last week of robbing the State Bank of Viola, Kan., March 7th last. These are the first convictions under the new Kansas law which provides a maximum penalty of thirty years in the penitentiary for bank robbery.

Bankers are Arrested

The closing of the Mountain Park Bank, of Mountain Park, Okla., by the Oklahoma bank commissioner, has led to the arrest of three of its officials charged with accepting deposits after they knew that the bank was insolvent. The accused officials are: R. H. Jones, vice-president; J. Will Jones, cashier, and D. C. Eagen, bookkeeper. They were released under bond. The capital of the bank was $10,000 and it is said that the losses will be between $15,000 and $20,000. This will have to be made good by the already embarrassed Oklahoma state guaranty fund.

Group Meeting

Group Two of the Nebraska Bankers Association held its annual meeting at Fremont, April 23d. There was an attendance of 120 members which is the record for this group.

ROOKERY BUILDING, La Salle Street, CHICAGO

In his annual address President Claridge spoke of legislative needs with special reference to the guaranty law of Nebraska. Luther Drake of the Merchants National Bank of Omaha read a paper on "The Aldrich Reserve Association." A paper on "Early Banking in Nebraska" written by J. H. Millard, was read by R. A. Wilcox. C. F. McGrew of South Omaha spoke on "currency and banking." In the evening the delegates were entertained at a banquet and many impromptu toasts enlivened the occasion.

Nebraska Bonds

Under the Potts' reinvestment law passed by the Nebraska legislature last winter, the $4,000,000 worth of state school bonds of other states held as an investment by the Nebraska permanent school fund, have been offered for sale in order that the proceeds may be reinvested in bonds of Nebraska school districts, municipalities, drainage districts, etc. On April 20th a portion of these foreign school bonds were offered for sale as the first installment, but all bids were rejected with the exception of Alabama and California school bonds. All members of the state board were present at Lincoln with the exception of Governor Aldrich, when the bids were opened. Of the ten firms that submitted bids only five had agents present. Six bids were received for $100,000 worth of Alabama bonds, two on $100,000 worth of Minnesota bonds, one each on $20,000 worth of Delaware bonds, $23,000 of Idaho and $50,000 of North Carolina bonds and two bids on $4,000 worth of Tennessee bonds.

Southwestern Notes

The National Reserve Bank of Kansas City is to have a new president after May 1st. G. M. Smith has tendered his resignation as the head of that institution and will devote himself to private investments. He has recently returned from South America where he has extensive interests. Mr. Smith's stock in the National Reserve Bank has been bought by J. T. M. Johnston, chairman of the board of directors and it is believed that Mr. Johnston will succeed Mr. Smith as president.

In the federal court of Tulsa, Okla., it was decided last week that there is no immunity under the law for those who seek to evade payment of brokerage charges in dealing in margins. The suit was brought by the General Brokerage Company of Houston, Fible and Company of Kansas City, against Ola Whilite of Bartlesville, Okla. The amount involved was $2,431 and the case is deemed important only because of the wide application of the principle involved.

After ten years of operation as a state bank, the Bank of Wellston, Okla., has become nationalized and will be known hereafter as the First National Bank of Wellston. It is one of the most reliable financial institutions of Northern Oklahoma and it is said that the change was made because of dissatisfaction with the Oklahoma bank deposit guaranty system.

The Bank of Commerce of Hominy, Okla., has increased its capital from $15,000 to $25,000. The directors are: E. C. Mullendore and S. A. Bryant, Jr., of Cleveland; C. Mullendore, L. D. Edginton, G. N. Lockhart and G. L. Edginton of Hominy and J. C. Lockhart of Eskridge, Kan.

The Citizens State Bank of Sentinel, Okla., will become the First National Bank of that place about May 1st, and will increase its capital from $20,000 to $25,000. Alva J. Niles, formerly adjutant general of Oklahoma, will be president; J. W. McNeal, of Guthrie, republican candidate for governor in the last campaign, and E. D. Foster of Thomas will be vice-presidents, and J. W. Lambright of Sentinel will be cashier.

Carl M. Spencer, formerly assistant in a Des Moines national bank, has just been released from the federal prison at Leavenworth, having served three years for alleged violation of the national banking law.

The Bank of Dover, Dover, Okla., has announced an increase of its capital stock from $10,000 to $20,000. Its directors are: M. A. Mitchell, C. B. Sherwood, C. D. Mauk and C. J. Sherwood of Dover; W. A. Mitchell of Kingfisher; S. Gilchrist of Kiel; L. F. Gilger of Fairview; J. R. Nanninga of Falls City, Neb.

Governor Cruce of Oklahoma has honored the requisition for Hugh A. Burrell, former president of the Peoples State Bank of Brownston, Ind., who is wanted in Jackson county, Ind., on a forgery charge. He is alleged to have forged the names of M. B. Singer and A. M. Singer to a note for $3,120 in favor of the Peoples State Bank on July 5, 1900.

Dr. J. T. M. Johnston of the Reserve National Bank of Kansas City, will go to Wichita this week to address the First Baptist Men's Bible Class. While in Wichita Dr. Johnston will be the guest of C. Q. Chandler, president of the Kansas National Bank of that city.

Thornton Cooke, treasurer of the Fidelity Trust Company of Kansas City, has been seriously ill for the past week but is much improved.

Kansas City school bonds to the extent of $350,000 were sold last week to O. P. Wright & Company at par. These bonds are the last of the issue of $750,000 authorized a year ago for additional school buildings.

Among the visitors in Kansas City's financial district last week were: Boone D. Hite, cashier of the Anadarko State Bank, Anadarko, Okla.; Burnett Hughes, cashier of the J. S. Hughes Banking Company, Richmond, Mo.; and J. A. Jones, president of the First National Bank of Bristol, Okla.

James Graham Cannon, president of the Fourth National Bank of New York, is scheduled to make a tour of the Central West about the middle of May as the guest of various local associations of credit men. He will come directly from New York to Omaha and will address the credit men there. President John Duff, of the Omaha Credit Association has appointed a committee to look after Mr. Cannon upon his arrival.

ANOTHER FEATHER IN BURNS' CAP

Again W. J. Burns has accomplished a capture of national importance. Bankers well remember the Los Angeles Times explosion which happened just on the eve of the American Bankers convention in that city. On motion of Mr. Huttig of St. Louis $5,000 were appropriated by the association for immediate relief of the sufferers. More than a score of persons had been killed and twice that number badly injured. W. J. Burns of the Burns' National Detective Association, was put on the job and rewards offered soon reached $100,000. Mr. Burns has said at all times, "I'll get them yet," and the papers tell how he kept his word. By evidence and confession it will appear that the real criminals, or some of them, guilty of more than sixty explosions by dynamite, have been captured. One of those arrested is said to have confessed that he and his associates have, as wreckers, destroyed property to the value of $3,500,000 and have taken the lives of 112 persons. The trial will be a test again of the American jury system, experience having shown that such convictions are hard to obtain. Burns has again demonstrated his ability and the honesty and efficiency of his association.

He already has more big cases to his credit than any living man and the American Bankers Association has been vindicated in its determination to have in charge of its protective features the best the world affords. There are a few bankers and one or two secretaries of state associations who still live in the past. Let this case be what the revivalist calls their "great awakening." Departed glories and present capacity are not able to cope with cunning, daring and desperate criminals. Keep your eye on Burns.

TRADE OUTLOOK FAVORABLE

A favorable agricultural and trade outlook animates the entire country. It would be hard to imagine better primary conditions than those prevailing. There is ample ground for optimism in all lines of trade as well as among owners and tillers of the soil. There is the same encouragement in all sections of the country.

Larger crops than those of last season seem to be assured. This is true of wheat, corn and cotton. It may be that prices for farm products will be forced to a lower level, but it is a fair presumption that there will be no great distress so long as the country has successful crops and an abundance of money. Averaging up reports from all the crop growing districts the conditions are favorable beyond the average, and this includes not only the condition of growth, but the acreage being devoted to the several principal crops.

The general curtailment of manufacturing suggests that the nation has been going too fast in the matter of production. Retrenchment along certain lines is natural and wholesome, especially in view of probable tariff changes.

GOVERNOR WILSON HAS MADE GOOD

In these days when promises of political reforms pass with other extravagances of the campaign it is refreshing to contemplate the fidelity with which Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey kept to his pre-election agreements. Much was expected of him and the docket of expectations has been satisfied. The Chicago Record-Herald, a profound republican and fair minded newspaper has reviewed editorially the fifteen weeks' session of the New Jersey legislature "with its extraordinary constructive and progressive record." It calls attention to the fact that Governor Wilson with his known modesty gives all the credit to the legislature taking no share of the glory for himself or for "the energy, directness, tact, fairness which he displayed in urging legislation, fighting tricky reactionaries and subordinating partisan and personal considerations to the question of keeping faith with the people."

The Record-Herald closes with this tribute:

Governor Wilson has redeemed his campaign promises. The major bills of the session have been enacted into law, in spite of machine obstruction and malicious misrepresentation. The good men in the legislature cordially worked with the governor; the others were generally forced to vote for progressive measures by his policy of "pitiless publicity" and candid dealing. The acts which will make the session memorable cover employers' liability, corrupt practices, primaries and elections, and control of public utilities. They are advanced and comprehensive, if to some extent experimental. New Jersey has been rehabilitated and freed, and her "academic" governor's contribution to that result has made him a national figure.

This, then, is the man whom the Illinois bankers have chosen for chief orator at the Springfield meeting in October. President Crabtree is being congratulated for his enterprise in going after the top notchers in the speaking line. Governor Wilson made an address to the delegates to the Denver A. B. A. convention, one of the best in the long line of able orations brought out by this association. The attendance and its chief orator will give the Springfield meeting national significance.

CONTROL OF UTILITIES

After a long and careful investigation W. J. Hagenah, the expert employed by the city of Chicago to make a valuation of the property of the Peoples Gas Light and Coke Company for rate-making purposes has made his report and has named 78 cents as a proper figure for the municipality to pay. The present rate is 85 cents and Mayor Harrison demands that 70 cents shall be the maximum figure. Protracted litigation is likely to follow this agitation.

This is the third effort in ten years to fix the price of gas in Chicago below 80 cents, the New York price. In Mayor Harrison's last previous term the council passed a 75-cent ordinance, which the company took into court. In the long litigation that followed the city was defeated.

A NEW JUVENILE FOR BOYS

A brand new book for boys, entitled "Those Smith Boys," has issued from the press of R. F. Fenno and Company, New York, to be added to their regular juvenile series. The author, Howard W. Garis, wrote the Dick Hamilton series, and a dozen other books which captured an army of youthful readers. It is nearly certain that "The Smith Boys" will make a hit as the stories relate gayly the fun, frolic and adventures of three very lively young Americans. Full page illustrations are in color. Price $1.25 at all book stores.

"THE CAMERA FIEND"

After Conan Doyle's thrilling detective stories, E. W. Hornung's come as a pleasing change, not that they will not keep the reader up into the wee small hours of the night with that delightful, creepy sensation that is so pleasant to experience, but because the characters are not mere, mechanical, thinking human beings, but are live, flesh and blood people with marked individualities and a power to feel. Mr. Hornung's previous detective stories are "The Amateur Cracksman," "Raffles," and "The Shadow of the Rope." In "The Camera Fiend" he presents to the reading public a rather new specimen of humanity. There are all sorts of eccentric people in the world but one soon discovers that a camera fiend, when riding his hobby, may be almost, equally, if not the most eccentric of them all. The plot is woven around Doctor Baumgartner, whose particular delusion in the limitless possibilities of his camera is spirit photography, and young Upton, whose mysterious disappearance causes the employment of almost every available detective by the distracted family. Between the doctor who is attributed with many happenings because of his obsession by this one idea and his attempts to realize it, the mysterious camera, and the efforts of Upton's friends at rescue, the tale is unflagging in interest, nor is the dread secret of the camera revealed until the every end. There is a slight romance connected with the story that will relieve the tension when the situation becomes very tense. For a splendid detective and mystery story, and good detective stories are scarce, read "The Camera Fiend" and you will like it. It is published by Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

PRESIDENT OF SIX BANKS

W. P. Holland of Clarksdale, Mississippi, has the distinction of being president of six banks, besides controlling a seventh. That these institutions are in a prosperous condition is shown by the following statistics:

Planters Bank, Clarksdale, Mississippi, capital $100,000, surplus $185,000, bid $500 per share, asked $600.

Clarksdale Savings Bank, Clarksdale, Mississippi, capital $10,000, bid $350 per share, asked $450.

Exchange Bank, Friars Point, Mississippi, capital, $25,000, bid $175 per share, asked $200.

Bank of Ruleville, Ruleville, Mississippi, capital $45,000, bid $100 per share, asked $110.

Bank of Shaw, Shaw, Mississippi, capital $30,000, surplus $5,000, bid $140, per share asked $150.

Bank of Hollandale, Hollandale, Mississippi, capital $12,500, bid $150 per share, asked $175.

Cotton Exchange Bank, Cleveland, Mississippi, capital $35,000, bid $125 per share, asked $175.

Mr. Holland heads all except the last named bank. He is willing to buy any of the above banks' stocks at prices bid, in case anybody offers them for sale.

FRANK T. RANSOM A VISITOR

Frank T. Ransom, president of Union Stock Yards National Bank, Wichita, Kan., who is well known in Chicago banking circles, was a visitor at National City Bank Monday. Wichita is one of the best little cities of the West and Mr. Ransom told of the improvement of business incident to spring and said prospects in the agricultural section could hardly be better.

Union Stock Yards National Bank is capitalized at $50,000, and Mr. Ransom reports a very satisfactory line of deposits covering the short time they have been in business. E. A. Cudahy of the Cudahy Packing Company is interested in this bank.

Mr. Ransom says that Northern Oklahoma, Southeastern Kansas and the Panhandle of Texas have had good rains this spring, and the present conditions are most favorable for a corn crop, which will result in the feeding of a big line of cattle for that section of the country.

Mr. Rankin began his banking career with the old Tootle-Lemon National Bank of St. Joseph, Missouri, and has had broad banking experience at both St. Louis and East St. Louis. He took a lively interest in the matter of developing the group system while traveling in Illinois for the Stock Yards National Bank of East St. Louis.

LIPPINCOTT'S FOR MAY

Another notable complete novel—"The Luharcin Case"—by Edith Macvane, is the headliner in Lippincott's for May. Miss Macvane wrote "The Duchess of Dreams," "The Adventures of Joujou" and other popular fiction. A dozen short stories by the best known authors complete the number.

CONTINENTAL AND COMMERCIAL ISSUES BOOKLET

The campaign for monetary reform was conspicuously opened this week in Chicago by the mailing out of 30,000 copies of a booklet on the Aldrich plan, by President George M. Reynolds of the Continental and Commercial National. In his introduction Mr. Reynolds says:

"No plan has been more carefully studied by intelligent business men nor more generally approved by currency experts, as a whole, than this wonderfully ingenious proposal, submitted to the national monetary commission by its chairman January 16th last."

The authorized capital of the Reserve Association of America of $300,000,000 is discussed as follows:

"If all the banks in the federal system should become affiliated with the Reserve Association of America they would subscribe for just about two-thirds of the Reserve Association's maximum capital stock, or $200,000,000. That sum would be 20 per cent of the total capitalization of all the national banks, which stands to-day at virtually $1,000,000,000. Such a subscription would still leave $100,000,000 to be taken by the new national banks or by those that exchange state for federal charters. Only half of the capitalization, whatever it was, would be paid in at the start."

In order to show that no one bank, or number of banks, can secure an undue influence in the direction of the central Reserve Association, the following paragraph appears:

"It is important to remember that no bank could ever subscribe for any other amount of the Reserve Association's capital stock than would be represented by a one-fifth interest in its own capital stock. It would be illegal for any single bank to become interested in the stock of the Reserve Association to any greater or lesser extent. This restriction absolutely precludes any one bank from gaining a dominating influence over the affairs of the Reserve Association of America."

BANKING AND SAFE DEPOSIT ADVERTISING

Many of the most progressive banks and nearly all of the safe deposit companies present their customers with some sort of a souvenir as a matter of clever advertising. A chain tag for carrying keys and bearing the owner's registered number probably is the most acceptable thing which can be handed to a customer. The tag is a blind registry and does not indicate whose doors or desks the keys will fit. They are returned to the bank or safe deposits company which at once notifies the owner. One of these chain tags is called "Itsoezie." This tag bears a special patented locking device different from and much better than any other which has been submitted to us for examination. It positively will not come open. A pull on the chain only locks it more tightly, yet keys can be removed almost instantly without the aid of any device. The tag is made of German silver and will never change its color. The chain is of the woven lock pattern and cannot be broken. Bankers have found that customers like a chain very much better than a key ring since it is flexible and conforms to any position which the keys may assume in the pocket.

The new chain tag to which we refer is being marketed by F. Lewald and Company, dealers in advertising novelties in this city. In quantities the price is so low that there should be no hesitation among those in search of something new and acceptable, which at the same time is a good and lasting advertisement.

CHAPTER RECORD

(Department of Chicago Banker)

An Open Forum Dedicated to the American Institute of Banking in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Systematic Education and Universal Membership

Financial Aspect of the Cold Storage Business

Charles E. McNeill, secretary of the National Poultry, Butter and Egg Association and vice-president of Eck, McNeill & Company, Chicago, delivered an address before Chicago Chapter American Institute of Banking Tuesday, April 25th in the course of which he said:

On behalf of the members of our trade I wish to say that we appreciate very much this opportunity of laying before such an intelligent and progressive body of men, the coming bankers of our great city and of the country at large, the facts as we know them regarding the cold storage business, a business that is being unwisely attacked by legislators and others in the various states mainly because of their ignorance of the subject in question.

Although something over fifty different articles of foods are subjected to cold storage, I shall confine myself to only those lines in which my colleagues and myself are directly interested viz.: butter, eggs and poultry.

In the first place, what is a public cold storage? Some people have an idea that it is a dark, dismal sort of a dungeon wherein are stored for indefinite periods running in some instances into many years, food products of uncertain age, condition and quality. Nothing could be further from the truth. A public cold storage is a large scientifically constructed warehouse mostly of fire-proof material and divided into rooms of various sizes, and cooled by refrigeration to varying temperatures. Each room is a box within a box and the space between is insulated with cork, mineral wool, etc., to help keep out heat or cold and to preserve an even temperature. These rooms are of necessity kept absolutely clean and sweet as a cold storage's patronage depends upon how well it carries its customers' goods. The temperature varies according to the goods carried. Poultry and butter for instance are held at 10 to 12 below zero, eggs just below freezing point, but there is practically no variation in the set temperature of the different rooms during the time one's goods are being carried.

The rate on butter for the season which ends January 1st, is one-half cent per pound, or 30 cents per tub of 60 pounds, while on eggs to the same expiring date the rate is 30 cents per case and on poultry a straight one-eighth of a cent per pound. After January 1st, butter pays one-eighth of a cent per pound per month and eggs 5 cents per case. You can readily understand that when you add to this charge of storage the additional insurance and the interest on the money invested in the goods there is no profit in carrying these products year after year as has been so often charged in the public press of the day even if it was possible to do so, which it is not. In the case of eggs, for instance, they must be sold inside of a year regardless of cost or market conditions because they will not carry any longer to advantage, as they have a very strong taste.

The principle of cold storage is to store in the season of greatest production the excess supply of butter, eggs, poultry, etc., over and above the consumptive wants of the trade in order to provide a reserve stock to draw on in the season of scarcity or lightest production. It is possible that at times speculators have taken more than the actual over-supply from the consumers but not to any very appreciable extent for the government figures show that of an egg crop totaling in the neighborhood of 60,000,000 cases a year not over 8 per cent goes into storage; of the crop of butter not over 6 per cent, while poultry runs about 4 to 5 per cent.

Chicago is the greatest cold storage center in the country, its location enabling shipments being made from here to any and every direction. Our storage capacity exclusive of the stock yards is larger than that of any two other cities. The amount invested in these plants exceeds $7,000,000.00 which gives you an idea of the extent of the industry in this city alone. Here annually are stored some 1,500,000 cases of eggs in the downtown district, about 30,000,000 pounds of butter and not all of these goods are held by the local dealers but because of our convenient location and the large outlet we have for storage products to all parts of the country and even to the old world, a great many outside people especially those East and South store butter, eggs and poultry in this city. A blow at the storage industry therefore would affect not only the local trade but our standing as a world market in these products.

The storing of eggs commences the latter part of March and continues up to October. The months of great production are April and May. Eggs as a rule are at their finest in the month of April, the weather then on an average being neither too cold nor too warm. Considerable storage is also done in May and June. Some July eggs go in for a short hold while September and October eggs stored are to take the place of fresh eggs which are hard to get during the last months of the year. It is not the city storage eggs so much as the country held egg, the one that is kept in a cellar, in salt, oats, lime, etc., and then shipped in after several months as fresh laid that prejudices the consumer against eggs. A good storage egg is far superior to any so-called fresh held on the farm or by the country storekeeper.

The finest quality butter is made in June and the largest production as a rule is that month. The weather conditions, the pastures, etc., all favor the making of the highest grade goods. Storing continues during the months of July, and August with some butter put away for short hold in September and October. After that we commence to withdraw our holdings to make up for the falling off in the reception of fresh goods and by April 1st following stocks in storage in any ordinary year are nearly cleaned up. It is seldom that any butter is carried over, but we enter on the new crop with bare rooms.

The same process holds good on poultry. We begin to store broilers in the summer months, the season of largest and best production and carry it along during the fall and winter months on the various kinds of poultry as they become properly matured. Turkeys are at their best in the month of December and in early January and therefore the heaviest storing is done at that time. You cannot get a marketable supply of fresh broilers the year round and you cannot get a fine turkey excepting during a short six weeks or so when they are at their best, therefore you must look to the storage house for them or else go without.

Now what has all of this to do with the banks? I want to show you gentlemen that the banks are very much interested in the cold storage business because at least 75 per cent of the goods stored are carried on margins, the balance of the cost being supplied as a loan by either the cold storage with which we are doing business or our bank. The cold storage houses in turn borrow from the banks, so that it all means the same thing, you are the people who either directly or indirectly supply us with the millions of dollars necessary to carry on this business.

Cold storage warehouse receipts on butter, eggs and poultry are generally considered to be good security and these loans a profitable investment, but in order for this business to continue on a sound business it is imperative that it shall not be hampered or restricted by unwise or ridiculous legislation such as the Lodge Bill Calendar No. 1189, Senate No. 7649 introduced at Washington by Senator Heyburn of Idaho which limits the holding of butter, eggs and poultry in storage to three months. Under the provision of this bill eggs stored the first of April would have to be out of storage July 1st, when the receipts are still so heavy that we have to put some eggs away to relieve the congestion. With such a law in force eggs would be cheap in the flush of the season that the producer would have no inducement to continue in the business while in the season of lightest production the price would drive them from the table of the average consumer. So with poultry and so with butter.

Furthermore no banker or bank would care to loan money on such uncertain security as warehouse receipts under these conditions and a source of profitable outlet for your idle capital would be cut off. In that connection the stability and prosperity of our business is a matter of more than passing interest to you.

If we must have storage regulation by legislation, and I do not concede the necessity of it at all, let that legislation be sane and practical. We are in favor of it for the sake of allaying the prejudice that now exists against cold storage products, but any such bill as that introduced by Senator Heyburn if allowed to go on the statute books would close every public cold storage house in the country.

Our sister country to the north shows its appreciation of the benefits of cold storage by subsidizing the erection of new warehouses to the extent of $30,000 on each $100,000. This is paid in annual installments of $3,000.

Let us take a lesson from Canada and instead of destroying a most necessary industry let us urge upon our senators and representatives to kill the bill in question and to enact only such laws as will foster and encourage the cold storage business along proper lines so that the producer may have a fair return for his output at all seasons of the year and the consumer be enabled to procure at an equitable price those necessities which would otherwise become luxuries.

The senate of Colorado has passed the state bank deposit guaranty bill.

PITTSBURGH CHAPTER

On Tuesday evening, April 25th, Pittsburgh Chapter American Institute of Banking held the first meeting in its new quarters on the fourth floor of the Jenkins Arcade Building. Befitting the occasion it was in the nature of a "housewarming" with special features of entertainment and instruction. Joseph G. Ralph, director of the bureau of engraving and printing at Washington, was the speaker of the evening and his subject was "Making Uncle Sam's Money." Luncheon was a feature of the occasion.

Pittsburgh Chapter has long felt the need of more centrally located quarters which will be at all times at the disposal of its members. In addition to the library and assembly hall, a room is to be fitted up with a billiard and pool table where members may enjoy these games and increase the sociability of the organization.

R. H. McMichael, of the Mellon National, has received a letter from Hon. Edward B. Vreeland, of New York, vice-president of the national currency commission, accepting the invitation of Pittsburgh Chapter to speak here on May 9th, on banking and currency matters and the Aldrich plan of currency revision.

SPOKANE CHAPTER

McCash, American Savings Bank; board of governors, R. C. Hazen, Dexter Horton and Company; Arthur Goodfellow, People's Savings Bank, and L. F. Hayes, National Bank of Commerce.

The proposed amendment to the constitution, permitting assistant cashiers to hold office was defeated. The election was held in the Elks' Club. Among those participating in the election were nearly all the bank presidents in Seattle.

Wallace West, of Seattle National, was elected alternate delegate to the national convention of the American Institute of Banking, to be held at Rochester, N. Y., from September 2d to 9th. RESOURCES OVER FIVE MILLION DOLLARS.

Money, Banking and Finance from Chicago Viewpoint

Vice-President J. M. Appel, of LaSalle Street National, after a tour among interior banks, believes that the turn in the money market is at hand.

"Bankers all through the agricultural sections are pretty well loaned up," said Mr. Appel. "Some of them already have reached a point where they must call on Chicago institutions to help finance the season's farming operations."

"Money has been too cheap here. Business conditions throughout the West have never justified the low rates which have prevailed this spring. Chicago money is wanted to-day all over the West and South, and borrowers are able and willing to pay more for it than we have been getting. I think that within thirty days our money market will take on an entirely different aspect and rates will improve."

Demand is Broadening

Without doubt the demand for money is broadening, although the improvement up to this time has not been sufficient to cause a change of quotations. Considerable mercantile activity has come with the opening of spring. Manufacturing remains below normal but in other lines business has materially improved.

One of the best signs of the day is the effort of far western bankers and brokers to dispose of commercial paper in this market. There is manifest a disposition to secure money here while it is cheap and an unusual amount of six months' paper has been offered in Chicago since the middle of April. The proportion of Pacific Coast paper is large and bankers are forced to the conclusion that the West needs money and tighter rates are coming into view.

A number of the smaller Chicago banks have been pretty well loaned up this week at 5 per cent on mercantile transactions and 5 to 6 per cent on real estate.

Great Interest in Bonds

Disappointment over the sluggish money market this spring has set Chicago bankers astir on western bond propositions. Bond offerings are large all over the country, but particularly in the Southwest, and cheap money has aided the flotation in a noticeable way. Securities which return from 5 to 6 per cent and which bear indisputable evidence of soundness appeal strongly to Chicago bankers and a good deal of idle capital will be worked off in this channel before the crop moving activity begins.

As a result of the heavy purchasing of short-term investment issues by savings banks, insurance companies and individuals during the last fortnight, the immediately available supply of notes has been almost depleted and investment demand has extended with the last week to the comparatively long-term bonds of public utilities corporations and railroads. There has also been an active call this week for good industrial as well as for government, state and municipal bonds and still greater activity is looked for in all branches of the bond market.

Real Estate Aids Money Market

A heavy real estate business in Chicago continues to aid the local money market. Transfers last week footed up $3,484,331, against $2,909,241 for the corresponding week last year. Building permits also are half a million higher.

Greenebaum Sons, bankers, are trustees for a loan of $100,000 at 6 per cent in the form of a serial bond issue to the Rogers and Hall Company, printers, secured by a new seven-story and basement brick and stone building, 98 by 100 feet, at the northeast corner of LaSalle and Polk streets. The security also includes the entire plant and equipment of the company.

Alexander A. McKay has obtained a renewal of the loan on the fee of the property on East Madison Street at the northeast corner of Wabash Avenue, north frontage, 171 by 97 feet, from the Northern Trust Company, as trustee. The amount is $400,000, slightly more than the original loan, and is at the rate of 4 3/4 per cent from January 18th to March 1, 1916. The site will be occupied by the building to be erected by John B. Mallers.

Frederick A. and Axel W. Anderson have given a trust deed to Oscar H. Haugan as trustee, securing $40,000 for five years at 5 1/2 per cent, on the property at 4951-53 Kenmore Avenue, at the southeast corner of Argyle Street, 90 by 150 feet, improved with a three-story apartment building.

Charles D. Evans has given a trust deed to John H. McCortney, securing $27,000 for five years at 6 per cent, on the property on Fiftieth Street, 160 feet east of Cottage Grove Avenue, north frontage, 49 by 200 feet.

Simon W. Strauss is trustee in a loan of $40,000 for five years at 5 1/2 per cent, made by Olaf Nelson on the apartment property on Drexel Avenue, 103 feet south of Sixty-second Street, west frontage, 150 by 173 feet.

Bertha and James Cockburn have given a trust deed to Simon W. Strauss, as trustee, on the property on Calumet Avenue at the northeast corner of Forty-sixth Street, west frontage, 100 by 128 feet, securing $33,000 for five years at 5 1/2 per cent.

LONDON'S BIG CLEARING BUSINESS

The tremendous number of checks handled by the Bankers' Clearing House, London, and enormous total of these separate items was the feature of a recent address delivered by E. H. Goddard, vice-president of the Nottingham Engineering Society, before the members of the organization.

"Over 800,000 different checks were recorded in one day in the London Bankers' Clearing House," declared Mr. Goddard and the year's total business for 1910 amounted to over 14,658,000,000. All of these amounts are handled entirely by Nottingham made adding machines which are the output of the English division of the Burroughs Adding Machine Company.

Mr. Goddard then explained how mechanical calculators began with the simple device of four fingers and a thumb, which with the multiples of five furnished by the other hand, forming the basis of the decimal system. Napier's rod was the first mechanical adder in England; then the later attempts of Babbage, the Cambridge mathematician, and finally the patents accorded to William Seward Burroughs in 1883, were taken up consecutively.

The lecture was illustrated by stereopticon slides and was followed by a demonstration of Burroughs machines. Those in attendance accorded Mr. Goddard a hearty vote of thanks.

A quarterly dividend of $1.25 per share has been declared upon the second preferred stock of the Finance Company of Pennsylvania, payable May 1st.

National Funds

Under a decision by the treasury department the collector of customs in Chicago may legally deposit the receipts of his office in designated national banks.

This is a victory for James C. Hallock of Brooklyn, who for several years has been endeavoring to induce the treasury department to authorize the use of national banks in sub-treasury cities for public payments and receipts. The treasury department held that collectors in subtreasury cities could not lawfully deposit customs revenue in designated national bank depositories. There are ten of these cities. Five decisions were made against the contention of Mr. Hallock that such deposits could be made and finally he has obtained a ruling that Chicago and Cincinnati are exempt from the prohibition.

"The importance of using banks in public payments," said Mr. Hallock, "is most easily seen in the case of Peoria, where the government collects annually about $30,000,000 of internal revenue and expends about $100,000. The difference is transferred by banks to other points for disbursement. Every Peoria bank with which the collector of internal revenue, collector of customs, or postmaster deposits has both Chicago and New York banks as reserve agents. A proper transfer of public money would be by draft sent to some assistant treasurer of the United States, who would deposit it for credit in a bank at his city. This is not done.

"The government uses the bank fully in Peoria, but only partly in Chicago or New York. In all subtreasury cities the assistant treasurer demands payment in currency for drafts to put the actual cash in his tills and vaults. In 1907 this imperfect system failed miserably.

"No collector of customs at Chicago has ever deposited his receipts in any bank.

"From 1846 to 1907 such deposits were forbidden by law. It was not until 1846 that Chicago became a port of entry at all. In that year of small beginnings a collector was appointed with the same amount of annual compensation as the 'collector of the district of Michillimackinac.' For the last four years, since congress authorized the deposits of customs receipts in banks by the act of March 4, 1907, Chicago has been one of ten cities discriminated against.

"Upon the passage of that act the treasury department directed the collectors of customs, for instance, at Peoria and Rock Island to deposit their entire collections in national bank depositories, but discriminated against Chicago, as well as the other principal ports, at all of which cities collectors of customs were required to deposit in the treasury or subtreasuries."

The Oil & Metals Bank & Trust Company of Los Angeles has reduced its directorate from fifteen to eight members. H. K. Scott is elected cashier, to succeed L. D. Williams, who remains as secretary, but has been placed in charge of the branch bank at Taft, in the oil fields.

E. D. Elliott, formerly assistant cashier of the German American Savings Bank, of Los Angeles, more recently cashier of the First National, at Bakersfield, has resigned his bank office to become an examiner on the staff of State Superintendent of Banks Williams. Mr. Elliott is a banker of varied experience.

Four banks in Pomona, an important city in Los Angeles county, have formed a Clearing House Association. One of the first acts of the new organization was to agree upon opening the banks at 9 A. M. and closing at 3:30 P. M. excepting Saturdays when the closing hour will be noon. The banks will be open every Saturday evening from 6:30 to 7 P. M. The members of the association are the First National, American National, State Bank, and the Savings Bank & Trust Company.

Considerable banking activity is becoming manifest in Arizona, much of the capital involved coming from Los Angeles and other Southern California cities. The Farmers & Merchants Bank, at Phoenix, is being organized, to occupy the room recently vacated by the National Bank of Arizona. The building was purchased by the Capitol Savings & Investment Company from F. I. Kendall, of San Diego, and the Cutting Packing Company, of California, for $20,000. The promoters of the new Farmers & Merchants are F. B. Westfall, W. Westfall and W. F. Boling, all recent arrivals from Oklahoma. The Buckeye Valley Bank, at Buckeye, is another new concern which will operate under a territorial charter, with $25,000 capital. H. M. Watson, now cashier of the First National at Yuma, will be cashier and manager. Dr. L. H. Thayer will be president.

Johnson, vice-president, will come to Spokane soon to look over the city and will probably make a further investment of not less than $50,000 in local securities. Previous investments have been made simply on my recommendations of local conditions. I expect Mr. Childs to recommend a program of continued expenditures which will bring a large sum of money into Spokane annually."

Fred Melchase, president of the American Bank and Trust Company of Klamath Falls, Ore., was at Chelan, Wash., recently, looking after property held by Thaddeus York, who is now serving 20 years in the penitentiary at Salem, Ore., for forgery. York was in Chelan several months ago and purchased property on which he made a payment and had the deed placed in escrow for the balance due. He gave a check for $7,000 and took $3,000 in cash. Becoming suspicious, those he had interested in the scheme, engaged a detective and investigation followed. The penitentiary sentence is a culmination of a series of crimes.

the firm's bankers. The house had sold considerable paper to institutions in this city and it may be necessary to extend the time on some of its notes soon to mature. The president of one of the banks said: "Certain conditions of a personal nature made it expedient for the bankers to form a protective committee. Through the efforts of this committee, Robert Wolstenholme was deposed as president and his brother, Frederick, elected in his place."

At a meeting of the board of directors of Third National Bank of Pittsburgh, Reuben Miller was elected a director. Third National has shown a considerable increase in business since the election to the presidency last January of William McKennan Reed. In that time deposits have increased from $838,000 to more than $1,000,000 at the present. The directors of the bank in addition to Mr. Miller, are: J. T. Hamilton, who is also vice-president; Alfred Hicks, William Loeffler, L. F. Demmler, F. E. Schenck, Robert Garland, Paul C. Wolff, Ogden Russell and William McK. Reed.

The Surpass Oil Company of Pittsburgh, in which are interested William M. Laird, Henry Wittmer and others, has brought in a 250 barrel well in new fields in Clinton county, Ill. Paul Naeve, who has been connected with the Bank of Unadilla, Neb., for the past seven years, has become cashier of the Farmers Bank of Cook, Neb., the position being vacated by James R. Tober, who has engaged in private banking.

Des Moines, April 27.—The annual meeting of Group Five was held at Council Bluffs, Wednesday. It was an interesting session and was well attended. The headquarters were at the Grand Hotel. At ten in the morning, the registration began and at 10:30, Chairman R. G. Penniston of Defiance called the meeting to order. The address of welcome was given by Hon. Emmett Tinley of Council Bluffs. A. L. Preston of Avoca was down on the program for the response. Arthur Reynolds of the Des Moines National gave an address on the Aldrich plan. L. T. Genung of Glenwood spoke on "The Ultimate Consumer." General discussion, reports of committees and election of officers concluded the program. Luncheon was at 1:30. It was followed by numerous toasts and short impromptu speeches.

Group Four at Elkader

Group Four met at Elkader, Thursday. Headquarters were at the Hotel Bayless but the meeting was held at the Elkader opera house. Mayor G. H. Shulte welcomed the bankers. B. W. Newberry of Strawberry Point opened the program with an address on taxation of moneys and credits. R. Algyr of Decorah gave a decidedly interesting talk on the postal savings bank as it has worked at Decorah. "Clearing System for Country Banks," was the subject of a paper by R. B. Jamison of Oelwein. Arthur Reynolds of Des Moines spoke on the Aldrich plan. F. A. Schuetz of Lawler discussed legislation particularly as regards the recent legislative session. Secretary P. W. Hall of the I. B. A. concluded the program with an address. Then came the business meeting. The banks of Elkader tendered the banquet, which was given at 7 o'clock at the Hotel Bayless. Chairman F. E. Crandall of Postville presided at the program and business meeting.

Group Nine Meets Next Week

Announcement has been made that Group Nine will meet at Osceola, May 2d. Grant McPherrin who recently returned from California to remain in Iowa will preside over the sessions as chairman of the group. Those on the program include Henry Wallace, president of the national conservation congress and W. T. Fenton of the National Bank of the Republic of Chicago. There will be a discussion of the new bank tax bill passed by the recent legislature. The discussion will be led by Homer Miller or James G. Berryhill of Des Moines.

New Banks Show Prosperity

Just as an evidence that Iowa is prosperous, Secretary of State Hayward calls attention to the remarkable number of new banks that are being organized in the state. There were three new state banks formed last week according to articles filed with Mr. Hayward.

The Farmers State at Volga filed articles, capital stock $25,000. E. W. White of Volga City, president; George Kube of Elkport, vice-president; H. W. White, Volga City, cashier.

Farmers Savings at Lytton, articles amended and capital stock increased from $15,000 to $25,000.

Exchange State of Walnut, capital stock $40,000. Jacob Hector of Walnut, president; C. A. Rossman of Walnut, vice-president; O. Mosher, of Walnut, cashier.

Austinville Savings of Austinville, capital stock $12,500. W. G. Austin of Austinville, president; R. C. Bode, Austinville, vice-president; S. L. Patterson, Austinville, cashier.

Sioux City's Enterprise

Sioux City made a wonderful showing in its campaign for an industrial development guaranty fund. The total amount secured totaled $825,000. The fund was organized to induce factories to locate in Sioux City and was dependent largely upon the co-operation of the bankers.

Trouble over Tax Law

Already the trouble has commenced regarding the new law taxing moneys and credits. Attorney-General Cosson has been asked to give an opinion upon the meaning of the title "moneyed capital" as it appears in the new statute. The law takes effect at once and many of the assessors over the state are puzzled as to just what the term means. Friends of the bill are admitting that there may be some ambiguities in the law which will need clearing up but assert that there is no question as to its constitutionality. Attorney-General Cosson has been called to Council Bluffs but will return, study the statute, then give a formal written opinion taking up the law in all its details.

Company Election

The Investors Securities Company of Des Moines held its annual meeting last week and elected the following officers: Carroll Wright, president; Oscar Strauss and F. M. Hopkins, vice-president; Thomas Flynn, treasurer; George F. Henry, George G. Wright and Thomas F. Flynn, executive committee. The company, which was organized in Des Moines a few months ago, has proved a remarkable success. It was successful in the bidding in of the $210,000 school bonds. Other bidders were the Harris Trust and Savings, A. B. Leach and Company and N. W. Halsey and Company, all of Chicago, and Bechtel and Company of Davenport.

Yeggman is Captured

One of the yeggmen, who it is claimed, robbed the Carlisle Bank several months ago, was arrested in Minnesota last week and returned to Warren county by Sheriff Grant Kimmer of Indianola. He gives his name as Harry Bowen. It is probable that he will be placed on trial at the May term of court. The robbery was a bold one. The robbers blew open the bank vault and looted it. It was not until morning that the robbery was discovered.

Predicts Better Times

J. D. Whisenand of the Central State, Des Moines, is quoted in a local newspaper as predicting much better financial conditions within thirty days or less. He bases this belief upon the tone of the money markets in New York, Boston and Chicago and in the fact that money is not being invested so much in speculative ventures but more in bonds, commercial paper and productive industries.

The directors of the First National concurred in the arrangement this evening and will to-morrow begin paying deposits of the closed bank amounting to $375,000.

Plead for "The Other Fellow"

Banking ethics and intrinsic value of farm security discussed by two South Carolina men at convention

Robert B. Scarborough, of Conway

I believe that banks should not be run altogether for the personal gain of their promoters. They are much needed public enterprises, and by virtue of their chartered rights they are charged with a large public duty. They seek, and as a rule, merit the confidence of the people, but too often forget that they owe their prosperity to the humbler, and poorer class of society. The average man that appears at the teller's window considers himself a supplicant; and, too often, the bank fails to accord him the courtesy that is his due. I believe that we are prone to consider ourselves the favoring instead of the favored. Yet, the man that crosses our threshold to do business in a legitimate way, makes us his debtor in the larger sense; for without him we would have to close our doors. The honest borrower, no less than the much welcomed depositor, is our real friend.

The bank whose officers recognize the principle of reciprocal rights and duties between it and its customers,—that tries most hard to give every one a square deal and due appreciation,—is the one that most deserves the public confidence, and will, in the end, make the largest dividends.

The bank or banks of every community, should set the pace for business integrity and civic righteousness. A uniform rule of discount, and a fair rate of interest and exchange is proper, and this only is the legitimate custom.

Opportunities for oppression on our part are often afforded, but the Golden Rule should be followed here as in every other line of business. It is a breach of law as well as of morals to include interest or discount on the legal three days of grace, but require payment on the exact day of maturity, and then, in case of renewal, repeat the wrong. One borrowing for thirty days, and renewing for another thirty, pays interest for 66 days. In that way some banks collect interest 13 1-5 months in a calendar year. This is predatory banking,—and, to my mind smacks of the "loan shark" and financial pirate.

The savings feature is a splendid argument too, to the people to start a bank account, and to lay by something for future use. Nothing so increases a poor man's self-respect as to feel that he has a little money in the bank. It makes him more careful in his dealings, enlarges his credit and improves his standing. It makes him a man of affairs and a better citizen. Every bank owes it to the community to swell the list of its customers. Bank depositors are more conservative in business and politics than those who hold aloof.

Now a word as to the duty of country banks: I believe that real estate security is the best security that can be offered, and every dollar lent for the judicious improvement of real property enlarges the field of banking operations, and increases the prosperity of the community.

There are many reasons why the conditions now existing should continue favorable and should improve as the years go on for the country is growing in population and in wealth.

So I believe the country banks should seek especially to promote the agricultural interest of the country, and secure farmers for their most favored customers.

H. H. Watkins, of Anderson

For some reason the banks of our country, justly recognized as ruling authorities on all matters financial, have always looked upon the real estate mortgage as undesirable paper, whether as collateral or as the basis for a direct loan. The national banking laws strictly prohibit loans upon the faith of such security, and the large insurance companies have been disposed to make strict classifications as to the territory within which they shall make real estate loans, and have been disposed to exclude the country lands of the South from the favored territory. The reason, usually asserted by both banks and insurance companies, is that mortgages of Southern country lands are not regarded as commercially negotiable. The explanation generally given is that these mortgages have no generally accepted value, and are not listed by trust companies, banking houses, and the great commercial exchanges.

I once heard it stated by a leading financier of New York that the difficulty about the real estate mortgage was that it required too long a time to foreclose and collect the money that might be due upon it. He was then comparing the negotiability of the real estate mortgage with that of corporation stocks, and he added that these stocks could at any time be sold. We venture the assertion that in this respect as between the two, the corporation stocks are so far beneath the real estate mortgage as to admit of no comparison. When properly taken, the real estate mortgage is always worth one hundred cents on the dollar, principal and interest. There is no fluctuation in price. It can be readily sold at all times at its full face value, including accrued interest. If perchance the mortgagor should be unable to pay and no purchaser should be found, it takes but a comparatively short time in which to foreclose, and realize the money due, by a sale of the property.

How about corporation stocks? Their value fluctuates daily. It is true that there are many corporations, the stocks of which show but slight fluctuation, and which can always be sold at some fair price in open market. On the other hand, the record of failures is not encouraging, and the record of depressions is no more so. Again, if there should be no market for the collateral, corporation stock stands at an infinite disadvantage as compared with the real estate mortgage. The holder of the stock, whether as owner or pledgee, can neither enforce the payment of dividends, nor institute suit against the corporation for its par value. The solvency of the corporation is not a guarantee of immediate realization as in case of the solvency of a mortgagor, and the holder of the stock is absolutely powerless, by a proceeding in court, to compel the payment by the corporation of his debt. So that it will be seen that while both may be sold in open market, it is only the mortgage upon which immediate payment can be enforced, either by proceeding personally against the mortgagor, or by proceeding in rem against his property.

In an experience of eighteen years in the practice of law, and embracing the preparation of many hundreds of mortgages, I cannot recall one instance in which the lender of money upon such security has suffered a loss, or has been subjected to any expense in the collection of his debt.

Guaranty Opinion

On account of the confusion resulting from the enforcement of the Oklahoma bank deposit guaranty law, J. B. Ferguson of Enid, president of the Oklahoma State Bankers Association, requested an opinion from Percy C. Simons, former attorney-general of Oklahoma, on several points of the law that have never been clear. The query was based upon the understanding that the recent emergency assessment of one per cent as made by the state banking board, would be based on the deposits of January 7th, the date of call for state banks. Mr. Ferguson asked Mr. Simons for answers to these questions:

Can emergency assessment be levied for any other purpose than to pay depositors of a failed bank?

Can the state banking board in making an emergency assessment for the guaranty fund base such assessment upon the deposits of a bank on a given day, or shall the levy be upon the average daily deposits for the preceding year?

Has the state banking board any legal authority to guarantee the paper of a failing bank, and make good such guaranty by the use of any portion of the guaranty fund?

In answering these questions Mr. Simons says: "This banking act in our opinion does not anywhere confer upon the banking board any right or power to guarantee paper of a failed bank except where it is done under court order. The object of the law creating the guaranty fund is to protect the depositors of a bank which has closed its doors for business, and is not to aid and strengthen a bank which while it may be weak has not by affirmative act gone out of business."

Mr. Simons holds that it was the obvious intention of the legislature that an emergency assessment must be for a given per cent, not exceeding 2 per cent per annum, upon the average daily deposits of the bank for the preceding year, which would necessarily preclude any emergency assessment upon the deposits in a bank upon any given day. Relating to the first question as to the uses of emergency assessment, Mr. Simons states this opinion: "The purpose of the emergency assessment is only to pay depositors of a failed bank, and in our judgment that is the only purpose for which an emergency assessment can be levied under the bank law as it now exists and we do not believe that an emergency assessment can under any circumstances be levied until after the bank has failed, the failure of which necessitates a reduction of the depositors' guaranty fund in paying off depositors."

In conclusion Mr. Simons says: "In rendering our opinion on the above proposition we have been obliged to resort almost entirely to an examination of the banking act itself, as the comparatively recent passage of the bank guaranty law in this and other states, has afforded no opportunity for the construction of the various provisions of our law or similar provisions of other laws to be given by the supreme courts of the several states passing such laws."

SEEK OUTLET FOR FUNDS

Several bankers from Western Pennsylvania were in Philadelphia during the week looking for places to get a good return on surplus funds. Many of the banks in that section of the state pay 4 per cent interest on deposits and ordinarily they expect to get at least 6 per cent on their loans to justify such a rate.

Germany's Trade

The final estimates of Germany's foreign trade make a considerably more imposing showing than the preliminary figures given out in January. The import figures especially had to be greatly enlarged.

The actual values of imports are now estimated at $2,127,000,000. This is about $77,000,000 greater than the preliminary estimates, and the gain over 1909 is now given at nearly $97,000,000. The final figures of exports are given at $1,780,000,000, which denotes an increase of $209,760,000 over 1909. Both imports and exports were considerably greater than even in 1907, which had hitherto been the record year. Last year's imports exceeded that of 1907 by nearly $47,000,000, while exports were even $150,000,000 greater. A still more imposing measure of the growth of Germany's foreign trade is obtained by comparing it with that of the year 1900. During the decade imports scored a gain of $754,000,000, or 55 per cent, while exports gained $682,000,000, or above 62 per cent. These totals do not include gold and silver.

In giving out the final trade figures the Statistical Bureau also publishes the volume of trade with each of the leading countries. These show some interesting results. Up to 1908 the United States was the country from which Germany drew its heaviest imports, but in 1909 Russia assumed the first place, and in 1910 imports from Russia registered a still further gain, while those from the United States dropped off nearly $18,000,000. Imports from the United States last year amounted to $282,700,000, which compares with $300,600,000 for 1909. Imports from Russia rose to $330,000,000, or some $5,300,000 more than in 1909.

In exports the United States continues to occupy the third place, as has been the case for some years, the movement to this country being exceeded by England and Austro-Hungary. Exports to the United States in 1910 rose to $150,400,000, as against $144,300,000 in 1909. Thus the balance against Germany in its trade with the United States dropped from $156,300,000 in 1909 to $144,200,000 in 1910. These figures recall the fact that the Germans are ever complaining that the United States buys so much less from them than they sell there. This has been the burden of dozens of speeches in the Reichstag.

Visible

THE WALES is the only completely visible adding and listing machine on the market. All the operator needs to see is right before his eyes; totals, printing—everything.

Users of the WALES say this complete visibility increases operator's speed and accuracy at least 25%. Combine this feature with light key touch and quick and easy operation of handle and you have the reason for WALES speediness.

5-Year Guarantee Against Repairs

The WALES is the only adding machine with a 5-year guarantee. Why buy an adding machine with a 1-year guarantee, when the WALES gives you five times more protection?

An important decision was recently handed down by the Supreme Court sustaining the position of the Wilkes-Barre stockholders in protecting the WALES against "trust" acquisition.

ATTACKS ALDRICH PLAN

operations carried on there are so vast that a careful banker would hesitate to go on record as saying that the concentrated reserves that would ever get into the reserve association would be sufficient under all circumstances to control any conflagration that might break out there. Clearings in New York run close to $2,000,000,000 a week, more than double the amount of cash reserves held by all the national banks outside of New York City. It would be dangerous to act on the theory that any specific sum would be sufficient to insure the country against any possibility of panic in New York.

"What it all simmers down to is the proposition that all the bank reserves of the country shall be used when necessary to protect the New York situation. That would be perfectly justifiable when it succeeded, and a very great disaster when it failed. We had an object lesson in 1907.

"As the situation in New York grew steadily worse in September and October, the government was appealed to on the plea that if the government would loan the banks money enough to meet the runs that were going on, the trouble could be controlled, and the whole country saved from possible panic. President Roosevelt and Secretary Cortelyou took that view of it. Mr. Cortelyou moved his headquarters to New York. It was ostentatiously announced that the government had come to the rescue of the banks, and that all the resources of the treasury would be used, if necessary, to meet the crisis. The government put in $10,000,000, then $20,000,000, then $30,000,000, then all it had.

"Mr. Vreeland now says if they had $100,000,000 more they could have stopped it. How does he know that?

"Looked at from a commercial standpoint, the plan provides for practically unlimited expansion of credit. I think every banker will agree that every panic we have had has been preceded by overexpansion of credit. The danger which comes from this overexpansion in times of universal prosperity and optimism is not caused by a time coming when banks are unable to extend further credit, but it is caused by the fact that the business concerns of the country have expanded their business beyond the limits of their capital to a dangerous degree, dangerous not because they can't get more credit, but because a small percentage of loss will impoverish their capital and make them insolvent. Is it going to help the condition any to introduce another element of expansion into the system?"

NOTABLE BANK RECORD

The First National Bank of Philadelphia enjoys the distinction of being the first bank chartered under the National Bank Act of 1863, being therefore No. 1 in the national banking system of the United States. This institution was also the first to issue national currency and was the first United States depository.

Originally the capital of the bank was $150,000, but expansion of business by November, 1863, or within four months of the opening, caused an increase of $500,000, and this was further augmented two months later, in January, 1864, to $1,000,000. The capital remained at this figure until July, 1910, when in connection with the merger with the Merchants National, it was enlarged to $1,500,000.

The roster of charter stockholders contained the names of men who became prominent not only in the financial affairs of Philadelphia, but of the nation as well. Among these were Jay Cooke, A. J. Drexel, C. H. Clarke and Stephen A. Caldwell.

In the forty-eight years of the bank's history there have been but four presidents—C. H. Clarke, served from 1863 to 1874; George Phillar, from 1874 to 1894; Morton McMichael, from January to March, 1894, and J. Tatnall Lea, from 1904 to date.

With the declaration of its quarterly dividend in January, the First National brought its dividend record up to 108, aggregating $5,405,000, or 540 per cent. Besides, a large sum was applied from profits to the building up of a surplus of $1,500,000, the latter account added to the undivided profits, totaling $1,595,017, in the last statement of March 7, 1911. Deposits at that time were $25,158,674; loans and investments, $18,493,346; cash, exchanges and due from banks, $10,760,344, and total resources, 29,253,691.

OHIO'S WOMAN BANK CASHIER

Columbus, Ohio, April 27.—For the first time in the history of the state a bank of which a woman is the cashier was certified as a depository of state funds by Treasurer Creamer to-day.

When the certificates of deposit were returned after the funds were awarded several days ago the one which came from the Hardin County Bank Company of Forest, Ohio, was signed by Ella N. Meyer as cashier. The incident aroused the interest of State Treasurer Creamer and he looked up the records, to find that no woman's name has ever appeared in that connection before. The bank was awarded $10,000 of state money at 3.60 per cent.

FRANK O. WATTS, president of the American Bankers Association, spoke at a banquet in Knoxville, Tenn., last week. The banquet was held by Knoxville bankers for the purpose of stimulating interest in organization work. Mr. Watts declared that the clearing house association are capable of doing great good, both for their members and for banking at large. He said that if there were such associations in all the large cities of Tennessee there would have been a state banking law passed along ago.

GREAT fleas have little fleas
Upon their backs to bite 'em

These in turn have lesser ones

And so on ad infinitum.

And so the A. B. A. Journal has a lot of little yellow fellows after it. When these little yellow fellows had things their own way at 11 Pine Street they were happy—and fat. But the association was then neither big nor happy. They have just as good a case as the ex-protective squad has. We hope they're out to stay.

THE JOURNAL is clean, bright, printed in good English, by Americans, and it stands for high things in high places. True it ended a lot of pretty graft and the yellows no longer print the proceedings book in Hungarian goulash, at their own price and their own count (Emphasis on "count"). The big council of the American Bankers Association knows what it wants, it isn't afraid of the clamor, and they are going ahead. So is the association. It is the little kicker who is standing still.

Currency Problem

By H. M. P. ECKARDT.

It is sometimes argued, in discussions of banking questions, that owing to the increase of the practice of transferring credits by check the usefulness of bank notes tends to decline. Bankers explain that a very large percentage of the deposits received by them consists of checks on drafts, or proceeds of loans and that the quantity of cash—bank and government notes and coin—paid in over the counter tends to decrease relatively year by year. This is largely the result of the spread of education as to the advantages of keeping a bank account and paying by check. Also the movement is helped along by the establishment of banking facilities in new places and localities. However, notwithstanding all this, it may be asserted, with confidence, that payments in coin or paper money will never be obviated; no matter how perfectly the business of issuing checks is developed there will always be an important work to be performed by currency. There are thousands of small villages in the United States which have no banking facilities. In these little places the payments are made chiefly by means of cash. Then, in the cities and towns, it is the case that a large proportion of the wage and salary payments must always be made in cash. And every individual who finances his own affairs, whether he lives in town or country, whether he has a bank account or not, finds it necessary to have on his person or within easy reach a certain amount of ready cash. The city man who may have drawing accounts in several banks often makes purchases in stores or places of business where he is not known. Sooner than enter into an explanation regarding the "goodness" or worth of his check he will put his hand in his pocket and pay in currency. Travelers must always have money in pocket. Buyers of live stock and farm produce in most cases are required to put up hard cash upon delivery of the animals or products purchased by them. And for dozens of other purposes cash will always be in demand.

Now, the question as to what this cash shall be composed of is most important. In England the circulating medium consists nearly altogether of gold coins and Bank of England notes. In France it is gold and silver and notes of the Bank of France. Everybody knows that a currency largely composed of gold coins is a most expensive luxury. Only very wealthy nations can afford it. In both of the countries referred to the central or state bank has a virtual or practical monopoly of issue. I would direct attention to a paragraph of Hon. E. B. Vreeland's address to the Pennsylvania Bankers Association in 1909 which refers to banking conditions in France. He says: "In France there are to-day only three great commercial banks outside the Bank of France. They cover the country with their branches. The thousands of local banks which formerly existed have largely passed away." That the thousands of small local banks should have passed away in France, and that they should be rapidly disappearing in England, is not strange. That system of banking has been proved to be wasteful, inefficient and liable to destructive panics wherever it has been in operation; and wherever the laws have permitted the banking business to develop naturally and freely it has done so along the lines of the branch system. I think I am safe in saying that one result of conferring upon the Bank of France a monopoly of note issue and other special privileges is found in the centralization of the banking business of France, outside the Bank of France, in the hands of three great institutions. If there had been no monopoly of issue in France; if banks of a certain size might issue their notes against general assets, I venture to say that there would be more than three great banks in that country outside the Bank of France.

And similarly in England, if there was no monopoly of issue, or practical monopoly; if the English joint stock banks possessed the right to issue, I am sure that their customers—the business men and individuals and families—would be generally receiving more valuable service at the hands of the banks at less cost than is the case to-day. And I do not think the currency of England would be on a less stable or less secure basis than it is at present.

I am under the impression that the public in the United States has no idea of the important part the right of note issue plays in enabling a good commercial bank to provide superior facilities at low cost to its customers. Generous right of issue given impartially to all banks measuring up to certain requirements operates most importantly to supply good banking facilities to small places, to lower rates of discount and increase deposit rates, and also to increase the supply of credits available for worthy borrowers. I admit, of course, that they can be exercised best by branch banks. But I am thoroughly convinced that in due time the United States will be compelled to adopt branch banking in order to enable American business men to compete on equal terms, as regards banking support, with the business men of other countries.

Having regard to the great importance of issue rights in enabling banks to perform good service cheaply for the public it seems to me that it would be unwise to endow a central bank, or a central reserve association, or any other body with a monopoly of issue or with special privileges which would militate to prevent or check the development of the banking business in such manner as to give the public the maximum of benefit. If a central organization is created and endowed with monopoly of issue and other special privileges who shall say that the United States will not follow France's lead. In the course of ten or fifteen years there will very likely be a livelier consciousness of the advantages of branch banking. Then when the laws permit that form of business the existence of the monopoly just referred to might perhaps work in the direction of concentrating in very few hands the banking business of the country.

GUARANTY TRUST ORGANIZES CLUB

The employees of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York have organized the Guaranty Club for the purpose of promoting good fellowship among its members, and, by means of its various functions encouraging banking and financial education, fraternity, good health, wise investment and intelligent co-operation. Among the more important activities of the new club may be mentioned an annual dinner, an annual field day, a series of inter-department games by the various athletic organizations within the club and addresses by prominent financial men at the monthly meetings. A library of financial and kindred books will be established. A savings department with a profit sharing feature for the exclusive benefit of the members of the club has been organized, and a substantial sum is already on deposit. Investments from this department will be made under the supervision of the officers of the company. The organization of this club is in line with the modern and progressive policy which characterizes the Guaranty Trust Company of New York. The officers of the Guaranty Club are F. W. Ellsworth, president; J. H. Thompson, vice-president; J. J. Lewis treasurer; Hy. R. Wohlers, secretary.

Swift & Company have elected F. S. Hayward secretary, to succeed the late D. E. Hartwell.

BIG COUNCIL MEETING AT NASHVILLE

Nashville, Tenn., May 3.—The leaders of the great American Bankers Association have been paying their respects to Nashville, and to their own honored chief, President F. O. Watts, for four days. Also been having the times of their lives. The arrival of the big Chicago Special, over the C. & E. I. Ry., in charge of General Agent A. B. Schmidt found a repetition of the Los Angeles welcome. It wasn't necessary to

Touring was the order of the day, about the city and out over the beautiful country boulevards to The Hermitage, Belle Meade, National Cemetery, Vanderbilt University, Peabody College, Capitol grounds, the Confederate, the Polk and the Jackson monuments, the park with its replica of the Parthenon, and the beautiful coun-

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

THE following paragraphs were written from Nashville, but not all of them had the approval of the executive council. The council did decide (so Mr. Huttig said) that hereafter all chairmen of special committees must be golfers so that the committee meetings shall be called at and keep reasonable hours.

MR. HUTTIG was one of the most persistent of the visitors and turned in some wonderful (?) scores. President Watts, a very talented golfer, found how difficult it is to be showing a lot of visitors how to play the various holes and to keep up to his own game. Yet Mr. Watts is a remarkable man and hospitality comes as easy as it does to Col. Schwab who didn't let a visitor pay for anything to eat or—well not if they came under his vision.

GEORGE M. REYNOLDS was quite as enthusiastic over the dry-as-dust Aldrich plan as the golfers were over their games. Very few men can concentrate beyond the possibility of disturbance upon such a subject. But with it all he called every A. B. A. man by his right name upon sight. This is a remarkable faculty and one other visitor is famous for it. James M. Donald of New York knows almost as many men as know him, which is going some.

L. E. PIERSON took a handicap of (only) 35 in the blind bogey. Mr. Pierson seemed to think the more the better and he topped Ralph Van Vechten's 31; and (as was expected by everybody else) played away below the mark.

NOW as to Colonel Schwab (and the Junior Schwab) let it be said he is the pride of his fellow citizens for whom he seems in large part to live. So rich that many people marvel that he at the same time is the most popular man in the state. May his love of life and live people remain as steadfast as his game.

GEORGE F. ORDE came 'way down to Nashville to show what a man in amber colored glasses could do to a golf ball. Really the effect at times was a thing to see. Try a pair! They're a bully excuse for lots of things.

JAMES B. FORGAN had his clubs along (also Mrs. Forgan) or a few more of the native bankers might have had the conceit taken out of them. His orator-of-the-day address on the new currency plan was the event of the meeting. It is fine when men of such pronounced attainments will come out at the request of the A. B. A. and sum up perplexing questions for the benefit of all concerned.

CAPTAIN J. B. STONE settled the 1912 convention question for the council with his trusty argument that the council should meet in Detroit.

THAT will be the president of the officer's chair. The year the council met in Chicago. The captain came down to Nashville with the papers all made out, signed by the clearing house and all the civic and business organizations.

He said no protest would be tolerated and he had it all his own way.

DETROIT will have a half million by 1912, (more the captain says) and is one of the most beautiful and interesting cities in all the commonwealth. The auto factories will draw well and some fine "demonstrations," are to be expected. Oh yes, we voted for Detroit.

BOSTON seems to be about the only city of any pretenses to first rank distinctions which is entirely too backward to send out a hurry-up call for the A. B. A. to meet "in her midst." We haven't given up hopes.

EDITOR PATON (not being otherwise engaged) issued a special bulletin to let it be known that the distinguished author of that beautiful ballad: "Meet me in St. Louie, Lewis," was present in Nashville, disguised with a large handicap, looking for matches (and balls) at golf. And if you think that that same St. Louie, Lewis can't flatten a baby dimple (meaning balls of that name only) you have something coming to you. Nothing else we've ever seen but a mountain howitzer can put 'em so far over the brow of the hill.

THEN there's L. H. Dinkins. He walked up to one of us who weighs 210 in his athletics and said after a warm shake, "My! My! Joe, (meaning Chapman) but you're getting fat." Now whose treat is it?

FRED I. KENT was called off to Washington just as he'd begun to feel confident at the circus ring hole.

L. P. HILLYER was up from Georgia and A. V. Lane all the way from Dallas. Sartori came clear from Los Angeles and altogether it was the best and biggest meeting the council ever held.

CHAIRMAN HUSTON (of Mr. Watts' bank) is to blame for every thing that went wrong at Nashville, for he was chairman of every trouble finding committee there was. He had a whole fleet of automobiles at his command and the town did his bidding. Knowing that nothing went wrong let us all give credit where it so richly was earned.

WOODROW WILSON had a warm champion present in Col. Howe of Princeton, N. J. Bankers like the governor so well that Col. Howe found plenty of willing listeners. We propose that the Colonel come with the governor to the Illinois convention at Springfield, as a special number on the program, just to make it more interesting.

GEORGE F. ORDE has had unusual bad luck at golf lately. Down at the Briarcliff meeting the boys introduced him to "a Mrs. Atkinson" for a game and Orde came in both "down" and downhearted. Mrs. A. was the champion of California. That was a good joke and the boys never forgot it.

AT Nashville they worked the trick again. G. F. was put up to play with Mrs. Daly and came in badly worsted. Mrs. Daly is champion of Tennessee and prospective winner of the coming Southern Association tournament, for which she is in daily training. Furthermore, Mr. Orde tied with J. B. Forgan for the Bankers' Cup put up by Mr. Watts and lost to the veteran on the toss of a coin.

HEREAFTER the Minneapolis expert is going to play only with ladies not in the champion class, "for safety."

TWO of the best and most scientific golfers of the tournament were Oliver C. Fuller and John Perrin. Masters of form, of etiquette and of coolness—well there is your correct man of the links just as you've imagined him to be.

H. A. SMITH, of the Commerce, New York, put in a happy, busy time. He voted Nashville for winner every time when it comes to refined, non-obtrusive hospitality, and for beautiful and cultured womanhood. Yes, and he's a good judge in such matters.

THIS is about L. A. Goddard. They have a prohibition drink in Nashville called a "Caskade," recommended especially for golfers. It works, too, for by using up a couple of Caskades between rounds Mr. Goddard reduced his score ten strokes. Any sort of liquid having such an effect ought to be very popular on the links. More than one banking golfer will be followed home by a case of the "beautiful as moonlight" stuff which works such wonders with Col. Bogey's difficulties.

LEWIS E. PIERSON was nominated for congress and F. O. Watts for secretary of the treasury. This was done on the links of course, but keep your eye on this pair.

NINETY per cent of the fuss about the next convention site was caused by one railroad trying to locate it at one or other end of its long lines, and by advertising solicitors who hold advance, contingent contracts. Less and less attention is being paid every year to these undignified influences. At Nashville they were utterly ignored, as they deserved to be.

NEITHER did the "yellows" who were going to do things to Col. Farnsworth and the association "Journal" get one willing listener. Note the subtle meaning intended to be conveyed by the word "willing."

IF Mr. Forgan can again side step the presidency by refusing to go to the head of the council he will be a dandy. He is said to be thinking of retiring from many of his present activities on his 60th birthday which comes next year. What a pity such men cannot be made president without going through the chairs.

WE are not going to repeat a few abrupt remarks which came from the gentle Mr. Huttig on two or three occasions. But the greens were very trying. Likewise the long grass.

ville conference, on the possibilities of Senator Aldrich's suggestions for monetary legislation

The distinguished financier addresses the members of the American Bankers' Executive Council, at the Nashville conference, on the possibilities of Senator Aldrich's suggestions for monetary legislation

Students from the standpoint of political economy and bankers from the standpoint of practical experience have long been agreed upon the defects of our national banking system. Of those defects I shall point out three, which I believe to be the most serious in our banking methods, and shall then endeavor to show how they would be corrected through the operation of the financial plan suggested by Senator Aldrich.

The first defect of our present system to which I shall refer is the practical impossibility of uniting so large a number of banks, or any considerable portion of them under a common policy of action, such as might, under unfavorable business conditions, avert anticipated financial trouble and allay the public distrust produced by it. I refer, in other words, to the lack of co-operation or cohesiveness among the units of the system.

Second. The extravagant and wasteful use of reserve money caused by the requirement that each bank must individually control its own legal proportion of it. Under this requirement the gold and legal tender money of the country is divided into as many separate portions, under as many different controls as there are individual banks. The greater the number of banks, the more apparent the evil of this condition becomes. The result is that the legal reserve money of the country, which might be massed for the benefit and protection of all, as is done in banking systems worthy of the name, is distributed for the ineffective, individual protection of each. Even under normal conditions the effect of this distribution of reserve money is injurious to financial and commercial affairs. It affords no equilibrium between the fluctuating commercial demand for money or credit instruments and the supply of these commodities through the banks. In times of financial stress it becomes evident that our legal reserve money, when so distributed, although the aggregate amount of it is undiminished, is quite ineffective in protecting the banks individually and a collapse of the system becomes imminent.

Third. The further waste from an economic standpoint caused by the direct use of so much legal reserve money in ordinary business transactions. Our system provides no substitute for legal reserve money except government bond secured bank notes, which are as inflexible and as irresponsible to fluctuations in the commercial demand for circulating medium as legal reserve money itself.

The responsibility placed upon each bank of maintaining and defending its own fixed portion of reserve money, not only makes co-operation under normal conditions, practically impossible, but on the first suggestion of financial trouble throws them into a state of complete demoralization, each one striving, in competition with all the rest, for the reserve money deemed necessary for its individual survival. Then it becomes evident that we have no banking system worthy of the name and the condition prevailing could best be described as a strenuous case of "the survival of the fittest" and "devil take the hindmost."

Just when, under a properly organized system, the banks would be looked to as the mainstay and support of a doubtful business situation, for lack of such a system, they fail miserably to inspire the public confidence that should be reposed in them and fail even in the performance of their ordinary functions. They disintegrate when they should coalesce. They display individual weakness when they should demonstrate united strength in face of the common enemy—public distrust. In fact, their inability to co-operate produces public distrust.

JAMES B. FORGAN

Their individual scramble for reserve money withdraws it from the centers and widely distributes it just when it should be concentrated for a demonstration of strength. Furthermore, lacking the strength, begotten of unity, and fearing that such individual strength as they may have will soon be exhausted, banks, at such times, reduce loans and almost discontinue the performance of their principal function, that of exchanging credits with the business community. Thus, under unfavorable business conditions, they become the cause of panic, instead of being able, as they would be under proper organization, to render the assistance necessary to allay fear, tide over temporary difficulties and prevent the financial upheavals, to which we have become so accustomed that we regard them as periodically inevitable.

Although we have been practically agreed as to the defects of our national banking system we have been far from agreeing as to a remedy for them. Let us now review the remedy suggested by Senator Aldrich in his plan for monetary legislation and investigate its possibilities.

He proposes to secure united action among the banks by organizing them into, first, local associations of not less than ten members, whose capital and surplus shall aggregate not less than $5,000,000. These local associations are to be grouped into fifteen divisions, to be known as districts. In each district shall be established a branch of the National Reserve Association.

All banks, members of local associations, shall be stockholders in the National Reserve Association to the extent of 20 per cent of their individual capital, one-half of this stock to be paid at once in cash, the balance to remain a liability subject to call. Each such shareholding bank will do business direct with the branch of the National Reserve Association in its district.

Without disturbing the relations now existing with their legal reserve agents, the member banks will deposit with the National Reserve Association so much as they desire of the legal reserve which they now keep in their vaults and such deposits will still count as part of their legal reserve.

Each bank will have the privilege of rediscounting direct with the branch of the National Reserve Association in its district paper having not more than 28 days to run to maturity, while, through the local associations and with their guaranty, banks may rediscount paper having not more than four months to run.

By an ingenious and equitable method of electing directors of the local associations and, through them, the directors of the district branches and again through the branch directors the directors of the National Reserve Association the banks are given control of the personnel of these boards, except that the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Commerce and Labor and the Comptroller of the Currency are ex officio members of the board of the National Reserve Association. Thus, the banks will have the power of selecting the boards that will supervise them, direct their general policy and control for them their legal reserve money.

Copies of the reports made by national bank examiners regarding the condition of individual banks will be sent to the executive officers of the National Reserve Association.

Thus, first through the local associations, then through the district branches and finally, as a court of last resort, through the Governor and directors of the National Reserve Association itself in Washington, a supervision of all the banks will be maintained and unity of action among them will not only be made possible, but will be practically enforced without infringing on the proper prerogatives of any.

A new criterion will be established by which the strength of the individual banks will be judged. A means of converting their liquid assets into available cash will be provided and the question will be, what proportion of each individual bank's assets is in condition to be so converted. The proportion of a bank's assets available for rediscount with the National Re-

Successful Meeting of Louisiana Bankers Association

Baton Rouge, La., May 3.—Louisiana Bankers Association has held one of its greatest sessions here. The attendance embraced all parts of the state, with visitors from other sections of the country. Social features were numerous and delightful.

Among the addresses was one on "Municipal Bond Issues" by Horace L. Oakley of Chicago. Many of the speeches were notable for earnestness and strength.

Secretary Broussard reported a total membership of 201. There are 31 national and 199 state banking institutions in Louisiana. The secretary said that earnest efforts were being made to enroll all non-members.

Boost for Baton Rouge

Mayor Jules Roux of Baton Rouge in his address of welcome to the bankers said:

"The Baton Rouge of to-day is not even the Baton Rouge of two or three years ago when you were our honored guests. You doubtless note improvement and progress on every side, in that brief period of time. While showing in a measure, the misfortune which has visited the cotton growing sections of the South, the stupendous impetus which our city and section has had in the way of material and industrial progress, brought about by the building of new railroad lines, the advent of the Standard Oil Company of Louisiana, and its accompanying expenditure of hundreds of thousands of dollars here in constructive work together with the large increase of pay rolls and wage earners, has placed us in a particularly advantageous position, while other communities have suffered serious depression.

"It is only in recent years that the outside world has begun to appreciate Baton Rouge as the logical point for the crossing of the great trunk railroad lines. We who reside here and who have noted the glorious gifts bestowed upon us by nature, have been proclaiming these truths for lo, these many years, but it has been, until the last few years, like a voice crying in the wilderness.

"We are free and candid in our expressions of good will and gratitude to that great, though often abused corporation, the Standard Oil Company for its share in the effort and the result of discovering our matchless position to the rest of the world. We have only good words and kindly praise to what is known as the Louisiana branch of that corporation for what it has done and is yet doing to help us while it is helping itself."

Relation of Bankers to Trade

W. B. Thompson, president of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, delivered an important address on the financing and selling of cotton. He said in part:

"The banker's position in the trade economy of the nation is one of paramount importance and of supreme responsibility. The banker controls the medium which makes possible the profitable exchange of commodities and efforts; and he is the depository of the negotiable representative of the people's wealth. Upon his initiative and acquiescence depends the development of enterprise, the multiplication of opportunities, and the economic movement of the products of forest, field and mine from the point of origin, through the course of manufacture to the goal of ultimate consumption; and upon his integrity and discretion rests the conservation of not only the resources of the man of wealth, but of the savings of the widow and the fatherless. He is at once the custodian of the people's power, and the repository of the people's faith.

"The bankers of the South, and more particularly those of Louisiana, have risen to an adequate conception of their honorable calling and of their comprehensive obligation. In the banking history of the state the percentage of unworthy representatives is so small that it may be called infinitesimal; while the factorship of our banks in the progress of business enterprise and in the development of our great natural resources, is past all computation.

"The Louisiana cotton crop during the past two years, by reason of the ravages of the boll weevil, conjoined with a succession of unfavorable seasons, has fallen off from approximately one million bales to one third, or less than one third, of that total. This is a serious curtailment, and not only the farmers and merchants, but all lines and divisions of business, have suffered from the heavy loss entailed. Still the crop, even at its present low ebb, represents an average annual increment for the state of approximately nineteen million dollars. It is not to be believed that a soil so prolific as ours and a country so peculiarly adapted to cotton production, will for long remain in its present condition of eclipse.

"In all the years that have gone before, the cotton producer has labored under a double burden; it has cost him too much to make his crop; and he has realized too little therefor when sold. The farmer makes the cotton and then dumps it upon the market. Spinners provide for current needs and the surplus is sold for what it will bring, to middlemen who whisk the greater part of the crop through our ports to foreign centers of accumulation. From these foreign centers the surplus is distributed throughout the year as demand calls for supply. The foreign owners of the cotton thus reap the benefit of gradual marketing; the foreign warehousemen and foreign labor secure the remuneration for storing and handling these great stocks; and the foreign banks and foreign insurance companies and all collateral lines of business, secure the profits that accrue from the carrying of this great world desired commodity.

"In former years the precipitate outflow of the crop was primarily the result of the farmer's necessities. The crop was made largely on the credit basis, and when it was ready for the market, those who had advanced money and supplies thereon called for payment, in order that they in turn might meet their own obligations which were made to mature at this particular time. In recent years the farmers have to some extent liberated themselves from the bondage of the credit system and are, therefore, not all obliged to summarily dispose of their crop. But even the independent farmers do not to any adequate extent realize the logical advantages that should come as the result of gradual marketing. This is because, under present conditions, the local and domestic facilities for holding cotton are so insufficient, and the expenses of warehousing and handling are so considerable, that the profit which should be realized by marketing over the twelve months' period, is offset by the cost of such equitable distribution.

"If we desire to establish great holding and distributing centers at the ports of the Southern States in the place of those established in foreign ports; if, by the concentration of demand and the regulation of the volume of supply, we would raise the level of prices at which the farmer would sell his entire crop; if we wish to transform these hoped for Southern distributing markets from financial dependencies into independent money centers, we must direct our attention and effort toward some constructive movement, by means of which conditions will be created at such ports, which will enable the owner of cotton to carry it at the minimum of expense and to secure thereon such documents of ownership as will invite loans at the minimum rate of interest. Such a consummation would in turn bring large shipments of cotton to such market, and attract buyers thither for supplies; would bring money and business to the banks; and would hasten the great day when the South would have direct exchange connections with Europe and not be dependent upon the tyranny or the exigencies of intermediaries.

"At the last general election, the people of this state by constitutional amendment, authorized the Board of Commissioners of the Port of New Orleans—or the Dock Board, as it shall be hereinafter called—to erect and operate warehouses and other structures necessary to the commerce of the port of New Orleans. This public utility when in effective operation will place, not only the cotton farmer, but the producer of other agricultural commodities, in a position of vantage which he has never occupied before. Under this plan, storage and handling facilities of the highest efficiency will be available at the absolute minimum of charge; and the receipt, or negotiable representative of the housed commodity, will have a significance and value unique in our commercial history.

"The first exercise by the dock board of its recently extended authority will probably take form in the construction of a system of cotton warehouses at the port of New Orleans. Through economies effected by concentration of effort and centralization of facilities; by exemption from taxation; by elimination of profits to stockholders; and by the general retrenchment made possible through public ownership; it is confidently expected that the charges hitherto imposed upon cotton in the course of marketing will be reduced by more than one half, and it is hoped, by very much more than one half.

"The system of warehousing, handling and movement heretofore and still prevailing—which system it may be observed in passing is largely responsible for the present subordinate position of our domestic cotton markets—is defective in two important particulars. Not only are the charges and expenses excessive, but the storage receipts lack currency and the lading documents are the objects of justified suspicion and have in recent experience become the instruments of flagrant fraud.

"The storage receipts issued by warehousemen are backed only by the solvency and character of the issuer.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

The Springfield Commercial Association has been permitted to incorporate by Secretary of State James A. Rose. A number of Springfield bankers are interested in this public-spirited corporation which will seek "to advance the commercial, industrial and public interests of Springfield and vicinity, to maintain a credit rating bureau, and to publish a daily bulletin of record transfers. This association shall not advocate or become involved in partisan politics."

The maintenance of the credit rating bureau is an interesting part of the work to be undertaken and it can be made beneficial to merchants and bankers.

Bank Robbery at Kilbourne

Yeggmen blew the vault of the bank at Kilbourne and secured and destroyed about $3,000 in money. Much of the currency was blown to atoms by the explosion. The men did not seem to be amateurs in the work. They were tracked to the railroad and the village people believe that they escaped on a freight train which was standing at the station. Kilbourne is a village a few miles south of Havana.

Pierik Leaves Springfield Bank

Herman Pierik, vice-president of the Sangamon Loan and Trust Company of Springfield, presented his resignation at the annual meeting of the directors held Monday afternoon, May 1st. Mr. Pierik will devote his entire time to the real estate investment business and to the presidency of the Home Building and Loan Association. There were no other changes in the personnel of the bank forces.

Tremont Banker Resigns

G. F. Hillman, cashier of the First National of Tremont, near Peoria, has resigned his position. He insisted upon loaning sums of money to horse buyers of that vicinity against the protest of his directors. Although Mr. Hillman is not guilty of any actual shortage yet he has lost $5,000 because of loans to the horsemen as he made good the loss of the bank. In this case the directors of the bank really directed its affairs and the cashier failed to make good the loss to the bank.

Illinois Notes

Many Illinois cities plan "booster" excursions in their vicinity to make friends for the business interests and banks of their city. One of the latest excursions is that of two hundred business men of Rock Island who have taken a jaunt over the Rock Island Southern railroad, an interurban line, to Monmouth, Aledo, and intermediate points. Tri-City business men are active and the industrial life of Rock Island, Moline, and Davenport, reflects this activity. The Rock Island Southern will probably be extended from Aledo to Muscatine, Iowa.

The McLean County Bank of Bloomington announces "while only seven and one-half years old, the deposits of this bank at our last statement to the state auditor showed $675,000. We have made a steady growth each year due to conservative methods and courteous treatment to all." Lee Rust is the president and James P. Hackett is the cashier.

Joseph Landauer, a director of the First National of Lincoln, and a prominent merchant of that city, is dead. He was one of the wealthiest men in Logan county and had been identified with the business interests of Lincoln for a quarter of a century. He was a native of Germany and had re-visited his native land several times. A trip there had been planned for this summer but the ill health of Mr. Landauer made it necessary to cancel the outing.

acter of the individuals or corporations operating the plants. These receipts may be supported by ample responsibility or by nothing, and whether a given receipt belongs in the one class or the other, is known only to the business community where the warehouse is located. While it must be observed in justice to the warehousemen of New Orleans, that their guaranty has been always sufficient; still the basis of confidence in such receipts is largely a matter of specific personal knowledge of individuals or corporations, and they are, therefore, not generally current outside of local limits. The frauds recently perpetrated through the instrumentality or through cotton bills of lading have brought condemnation upon this system of movement, and have to an extent discredited the same.

"Hence the public warehouse plan, of large import under any and all conditions, becomes supremely significant in the present exigencies of the trade. The warehouse operated by a sovereign state through one of its boards of administration will be known wherever cotton is known and its receipts will be current throughout the financial world.

"Hitherto I have discussed the physical phase of cotton marketing, or that branch of the subject which has to do with the actual handling, storage and movement of the baled commodity. But there is another side to the problem. There are certain necessities of the trade and certain protective usages thereof which require consideration in the formulation of an efficient and balanced system of marketing. We must provide not only for present, but also for future conditions. If we would encourage the accumulation of large stocks for gradual distribution, we must not only supply the best, cheapest and safest facilities for carrying the stocks, but we must supply the owner with all possible safeguards against the risks incident to such carrying. A brief analysis of the theory and operation of future trading, and a limited application of the principles thereof to the subject in hand, namely, the safe and economic marketing and financing the crop, will answer the demands of this occasion.

"Future trading does not increase speculation in cotton; on the contrary, it materially diminishes such speculation. Moreover, it places the burden of speculation upon the few who are willing and best able to bear it, and relieves the many who are unwilling and unable to assume the risk. Future trading tends to confine speculation to a limited class of traders in contracts, and thereby makes it possible for a multitudinous class to transact a non-speculative business in spot cotton.

"Note the advantageous position of the banker who is carrying a commodity for which there is a future market. Again take the case of cotton. In times of depression or panic, when prices have declined to a point which exhausts the proper loan margin and the borrower is unable to respond to call, the banker is not condemned to the alternative of taking the risk of a still further decline and loss, or else of dumping the collateral upon a dead and unresponsive market. He can require the borrower, or he can himself, sell contracts for future delivery, sufficient to cover the collaterals in hand; and then it makes no difference how much lower prices may go, he is secure. And should the banker want the money which he has advanced upon said collateral, he can realize by delivering the cotton on the contract when the same matures, and is not obliged to wait an indefinite time until normal trading conditions shall again prevail; or else he may ship the cotton out to a foreign market where a less strained situation may exist, and there sell and realize; in which case it makes no difference how much prices may have declined while the cotton is in transit, he will recoup such loss with the profit on the contracts he has sold."

Bankers Return

Messrs. W. R. Dawes, cashier of Central Trust Company of Illinois, C. Corey of Harris Trust & Savings Bank, John F. Hagey, assistant cashier of the First National Bank, and L. H. Grimme, cashier of National City Bank of Chicago, the four bankers who accompanied the delegation representing Chicago Association of Commerce that made the two weeks' trip through Texas, returned Monday. Wednesday noon they were, with the other members of the delegation, accorded a hearty reception and welcome by members of the Ways and Means Committee of the Association at the regular meeting of the Ways and Means Committee at La Salle Hotel. All of the bankers who made this trip expressed themselves as heartily pleased with their experience and expressed the opinion that Chicago as well as Texas had been greatly benefited by the trip.

Banking Opinion

Vice-President William C. Cook of Western Trust and Savings Bank has returned from his trip through the Southwest. Mr. Cook met a great many representative men in the course of his tour and was impressed by the cheerful spirit prevailing business circles, in consequence of a marked improvement in all departments of trade.

"Business is all right," declared Mr. Cook to a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER. "One has only to talk with financial men, merchants or land seekers anywhere from St. Louis to Galveston to realize that the country is sound and that times are improving. The Southwest is getting the boom this season, but it will most likely be the Northwest next year, after the value of the new spring wheat crop is ascertained.

"Texas is fast becoming the garden spot of the world. Vast fields of black loam are in evidence everywhere. The two horse team and cultivator are to be seen by the score. Texas is not a place for the man and the hoe, but is essentially a place for the two horse team and cultivator.

"From Dallas to Austin, by day via the M., K. & T. is a trip to be long remembered. The sight of the fertile fields far surpasses anything I have ever seen. The Lone Star State is destined to become the bright agricultural state of the future.

"Acre after acre of beautiful black garden land, expanse after expanse, as far as the eye could see, were beautiful fields of corn, wheat and cotton. Windmills and well painted farm houses were jotted at surprising intervals. The cities are attractive and neat in appearance.

"At Dallas the John Deere Plow Company and Sears, Roebuck & Company's magnificent buildings were in prominence and were familiar, homelike landmarks. From the northwest corner of the State of Texas to Brownsville, situated at the mouth of the Rio Grande River, is a distance of about eight hundred miles, and it is nearer from the northwest corner of the State of Texas to St. Paul, Minn., Helena, Montana, or Salt Lake City, Utah, than it is to Brownsville. Again it is nearer from Lipscomb county to St. Louis, Mo., than it is from the same county in Texas to Galveston. Chicago and Cincinnati are nearer to Texas than Dallas county is to Galveston, Texas. In fact more than 1,000 miles of the Pacific Coast is nearer to El Paso, Texas, than is any part of the Gulf Coast of the State of Texas. With this distance in mind it will not be difficult to realize what an area of 265,780 square miles of Texas means."

Geo. M. Reynolds

While most of the bankers were playing golf or riding upon the beautiful country boulevards, the last afternoon of the Nashville conference, George M. Reynolds spent two and one half hours explaining the currency plan to the members of the commercial association. "Better than golf" was his own, only comment.

Frank O. Watts

If President Watts slept or rested the first four days of this week while the executive council members were in his beautiful city, it must have been while going from one function to another in his car. All day long he was everywhere, directing the countless activities prepared for his and the city's guests. Then at night it was the prolonged banquet and the gorgeous ball and reception at his own house, the finest in Nashville. Mrs. Watts was equally active. This wonderful pair greeted the coming visitors and was back at the station to say farewell. Members of the council had been wedded to the East for the spring meetings, but even the veterans saw their mistake revealed in the demonstrative hospitality and pleasures of that gem city of the South—Nashville. One influential banker, after a day at the Country Club, proposed to meet there again next year and to go that way, for a day off, en route to the New Orleans convention.

NEW BANK FOR OAK PARK

A new state bank with $100,000 capital is being organized at Oak Park. It is to be located at 101 North Austin Avenue and will be ready for business by July 1st. Henry Pillinger will be president and Harold Pillinger cashier. The directors will be announced in a few days. Among the good features of the concern will be a safety deposit vault. The bank is starting under favorable conditions, having the assurance of a first-class patronage. F. W. Julin is installing bank fixtures of modern type and promises to have the offices ready for occupancy within two months.

The Maywood State Bank, owned by the same parties, is to have a 25-foot addition to its building and will put in marble and mahogany fittings.

None of those who were at the Nashville conference met with a more cordial reception or more general recognition than did Col. Joshua D. Powers of Louisville, an ex-president of the association.

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER By Mortimer I. Stevens

WISCONSIN

Despite the fact that merchants and manufacturers in most parts of the country are complaining of dull times and a general falling off in trade, Milwaukee houses have little to complain of and in the majority of cases are enjoying a good business. Labor troubles which appear so prevalent in other sections have not as yet affected this city to any extent and no serious trouble of this kind is anticipated.

Bank clearings for the month just ended show a healthy increase over the clearings for the same period one year ago while the daily totals thus far in May would indicate that the record will be the same for this month.

For Better Protection

The last of the propositions recommended by the special committee on banking of the last legislature has been reported for passage in the assembly by the committee on finance. For many years the bankers of the state have advocated more frequent examinations of banks on the part of the state banking department and the bill recommended comes as a result of the proposition made by the bankers to pay the additional cost imposed by such an increase of examiners as will accomplish this result.

It has always been the policy of the state to require the banks examined to contribute to the expense of the department, and under the present law the banks pay annually in fees about $7,000 for this purpose. Under the bill reported for passage the banks will increase their contribution to this amount, paying in fact more than $21,000 annually with the understanding that there will be two examinations per year instead of one as now provided.

The bill also increases the number of bank examiners from three to seven and the additional cost imposed by the increase will be more than offset by the increased fees, so that the total cost of the banking department to the state under the new plan will be several thousand dollars less than it now is with the added advantage of an additional examination each year.

Oppose the Bank Guaranty Law

Bankers of the state appeared to argue the guaranty bank law, as provided in the substitute measure introduced by Senator Owen. While the majority, as at previous hearings, argued against the bank guaranty act, two appeared in its favor.

Among those who attended the hearing were F. J. Carr of Hudson, J. K. Ilsley of Milwaukee, J. R. Wheller of Columbus, H. A. Moehlenpach of Clinton, A. H. Owen of Beloit, L. A. Pomeroy of Amherst, Prof. W. A. Scott of the University of Madison, and George D. Bartlett, secretary of the Wisconsin Bankers Association.

The principal address was made by Mr. Carr, who asserted that the bankers of Wisconsin desired to co-operate in every way to secure absolute safety to depositors but they could not agree to the bank guaranty law proposed by Senator Owen. He stated that the bankers were willing to tax themselves for an increase of $14,000 to give the banking commissioner's office greater supervision and a bigger department staff to do its work, but that the bill under consideration could not be agreed upon.

Mr. Carr called attention to the fact that similar plans had been presented to the legislature of other states and all had been defeated. He pointed out that the loss in Wisconsin was less than one twenty-sixth of 1 per cent annually on the total amount of deposits, and that according to the banking commissioner's report the total loss in Wisconsin was seven one-thousandths of 1 per cent, and from this argued that there was no need or demand for the proposed law.

Substitute for Income Tax Bill

Two significant changes are presented in the proposed substitute for the income tax bill over the provisions of the original bill. One is for the taxation of incomes and the other is the abolition of the personal property tax. Another important point is that with the help of experts, the committee has so framed the new bill as to prevent double taxation in any instance even though all corporations, including railroads, with the exception of insurance companies, are included in the measure.

The rate of taxation for personal incomes is left the same as in the original bill, from 1 to 6 per cent on incomes from $600 to $12,000, but the taxation of corporation incomes is on a different plan. The first provision on this subject reads:

"If the taxable income of a corporation equals 1 per cent or less of the assessed valua-

Nicholas, Jr., F. T. Nicolai, G. H. Grieb, J. E. Robertson, August Engelke, Walter Teipel, A. J. Salentine, Milwaukee; A. H. Jensen, Edgerton; A. B. Froelich, Jackson; Henry Esser, Hartford; R. E. H. J. Dreher was elected as delegate to the state bankers' convention to be held in Milwaukee in July. The annual reports show that during the last year the membership has increased from 250 to 350 members.

John S. Broeksmit, cashier of Merchants National at Cedar Rapids has resigned to enter the employ of the Harris Trust & Savings, Chicago. Assistant Cashier Edwin H. Burrow was elected cashier to succeed him.

Business Improves

Improvement in the tone of business continues and the money market is steady. There is less pressure to place idle funds, as deposits are declining. The majority of commercial loans are at 5 per cent; real estate 5 to 6; call loans 4 and commercial paper 4 to 4½. While trade is still retarded there is clear evidence of gathering strength. Labor troubles have taken on a somewhat alarming aspect but so far have not injured the general business of the West. The feeling among bankers is optimistic.

SMULSKI'S BANK PROSPERS

The Northwestern Trust and Savings Bank will increase its capital $50,000, May 12th. This will raise the bank's capital to $250,000. The new stock will be issued at $150 a share. Fifty dollars a share of the issue price will go to surplus and will increase that item and undivided profits to near $100,000.

In its last published report the Northwestern Trust showed $2,400,000 of deposits and loans amounting to about $1,500,000. The bank was organized in July, 1906, by John F. Smulski and his associates. It began dividends early in its career and has raised its rate gradually to 8 per cent. The stock was around 165 bid in the market Tuesday, that price representing a considerable advance, due to the new stock issue.

RALPH WILSON'S NEW HONOR

Ralph C. Wilson, assistant cashier of Continental-Commercial National Bank, has resigned to become vice-president and cashier of Old Colony Trust and Savings Bank. The officers of his old bank presented Mr. Wilson with a silver centerpiece and his Masonic friends gave him a Knights Templar charm.

MILLER WEIR A VISITOR

Miller Weir, cashier of Jacksonville National, Jacksonville, Ill., was a visitor at LaSalle Street National Tuesday. Mr. Weir for ten years was a national bank examiner and owing to this experience enjoys a wide acquaintanceship among bankers. He reports business improving in the Jacksonville region.

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, May 4.—According to advices from various sections of the state, more interest is being taken in the coming convention of the Missouri Bankers Association than has been the case for many years. Numerous features this year tend to arouse more than the usual enthusiasm. The program is exceptionally interesting for the convention proper, then there are some contests in the election of officers which will add spice, and the joint meeting with the Kansas Bankers Association will be an entire novelty. The entertainment of visiting delegates and ladies, it is declared, will be on a high "Kansas City Scale." All details of the social features have not yet been announced, but enough is said when it is stated that both associations will be entertained by the Kansas City Clearing House Association. An open rate of two cents a mile in each direction from points in Missouri to Kansas City and return has been granted by practically all the roads in the state.

Program Practically Complete

W. F. Keyser, secretary of the Missouri Association, says that unusual success has been met in the effort to get together good speakers, with interesting subjects. They are: "A Study in Liquidation," E. R. Gurney, vice-president First National, Fremont, Neb.; "Am I My Brother's Keeper?" Judge C. E. Lobdell, Larned, Kansas; "International Commerce," William H. Burges, El Paso, Tex.; "Some Recent Legislation," Judge I. P. Ryland, Kansas City. After discussing recent laws passed by the Missouri legislature, especially those relating to banks, Judge Ryland will take up the following very important legal questions: 1. What are the duties and liabilities of bank directors? 2. To what extent is a bank liable for transfers of stock or payments of deposit of a deceased non-resident without the estate of such decedent being administered under the laws of Missouri? 3. What is the best form of promissory note for bank use?

Hannibal Gets P. O. Bank

Missouri's second postal savings bank was put in operation this week at Hannibal, the town made famous by its having produced Mark Twain. The first institution of this variety was established in Carthage on the first of the present year, and that pioneer, according to the postal authorities, has flourished like the proverbial green bay tree. Carthage is in the Southwest and Hannibal in the Northwest of the state, and the department expects keen rivalry between the two cities to make a showing in growth of deposits. Before the year is spent, it is not unlikely that St. Louis will be enjoying the novelty of a postal bank. Mr.

Hitchcock, postmaster-general, is so pleased with results obtained in small Western towns, that he believes he will try the big cities next. Among the new postal savings banks started simultaneously with the one at Hannibal are those at Helena, Ark., La Salle, Ill., Centerville, Ia., Manhattan, Kan., Shawnee, Okla., and Temple, Tex.

Group Chairmen will Show Them

According to Mr. Keyser information is being compiled by group chairmen which will make their reports of more value than ever before. Committees of the association have been unusually active this year, and have obtained results that are of inestimable value to every bank in the state. The convention will be May 24th and 25th, but no session will be held on the afternoon of the first day, as that time is taken out to give delegates a chance to do visiting, shopping and sight-seeing, so that a full attendance can be had at the rest of the meetings.

Surety Company Coming

The Southern Surety Company, one of the largest institutions of the kind in the United States, with headquarters in Muskogee, Oklahoma, will move its main offices to St. Louis on June 1st. The entire fourth floor of the new National Bank of Commerce building has been leased, and temporary offices already opened. The company has recently increased its capital from $400,000 to $1,000,000. President C. S. Cobb, of the company who is here now, said that St. Louis was chosen for headquarters after the officers and directors had given consideration. This was deemed the best center for the company's operations. The St. Louis financiers and business men who have been elected to the board are: John E. Franklin, S. M. Schoenberg, Joseph H. Roblee, D. R. Calhoun, E. T. Campbell, E. W. Stix, E. P. Nelson, W. L. McDonald, M. R. Sturtevant, A. D. Brown, and A. G. Moseley. The company will operate in Missouri, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas, Arizona, New Mexico, Kentucky, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Kansas and Colorado. It is operating now in Oklahoma and Texas.

New Chouteau Trust Company

The new Chouteau Trust Company, an outlying financial institution was formally opened with a reception and housewarming on Monday. Those who attended were surprised at the commodious and up-to-date banking rooms which they found. The company is in a new building at the wedge formed by Chouteau and Manchester avenues. Its equipment and fixtures are artistically designed, and well suited for its business. Initial business was above the expectations of the officers, and a successful career is predicted for the institution. William S. Drozda, the president, was chief organizer and promoter of the enterprise. Other officers are: L. W. Lemp, vice-president; John W. Burain, secretary; Stephen L. St. Jean, treasurer and Gilmore R. Avis, real estate officer. In addition to the above the directory includes Charles P. Heil, Gerhard Kersens, Jacob Wilhelm, E. G. H. Kessler, Henry Huhn, E. R. Martin, Jacob Stock, Jr., and Henry Vanderlocht.

St. Louis Chapter Election

The annual election of the St. Louis Chapter of the American Institute of Banking resulted in the unanimous choice of Frank C. Ball, safe deposit officer of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company, for president. He officiated last year as secretary-treasurer of the chapter. Mr. Ball has been with the Mississippi Valley Trust Company for five years, and was recently promoted to his present position. F. J. Mustchler of the Franklin Bank, was elected vice-president and J. E. Uhrig, of the St. Louis Union Trust, secretary-treasurer. B. W. Moser, retiring president, will represent the chapter at the Missouri Bankers Convention this month. The following were elected to the board of governors: J. M. Trulym, B. W. Moser, W. A. Wilkinson and J. J. Scherrer.
